Fate of Burns' Agents Now in Hands of Jury; No Verdict Until Today

After Jurymen Had Been Out for One Hour, Judge Ben Hill Orders Them Locked in Kimball House for the Night.

PARTICULAR CARE URGED AS TO MATTER OF DOUBT IN CASE AGAINST LEHON

Jurymen Instructed to Consider Law and Evidence and Have No Thought of Any Other Crime Mentioned During Hearing.

A GREAT SPEECH!

Perhaps as great a compliment as Solicitor Dorsey ever had paid him was given to him last night by C. C. Tedder.

The case had gone to the jury. A group of men were talking to Solicitor Dorsey while waiting to hear from the jury. Mr. Tedder came into the group.

"Mr. Dorsey," he said, "your speech tonight was one of the best I have ever heard you make."

There was a general laugh.

Mr. Dorsey thanked Mr. Tedder for his frankness and assured him that he held no malice against him personally.

"I am glad to see you take it like a sport," said Mr. Dorsey.

The case of Dan Lehon, southern manager for the Burns detective agency; C. C. Tedder, a former Burns operative, and Arthur Thurman, the attorney, charged with subornation of perjury in the R. L. Barber and Rev. C. B. Ragsdale affidavits, incident of the Frank case, went to the jury last night at 10 o'clock. When the jury had been out an hour without reaching a verdict, the court announced, at 11 o'clock, that no verdict would be received until 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

The jury was escorted to the Kimball house, where they spent the night.

The evening session of the trial, which began at 7 o'clock and consisted of the argument for the defense by Judge Arthur Powell and the argument for the prosecution by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, was attended by a courtroom practically filled with spectators, there being a number of ladies in the crowd. Nearly all of the spectators waited the full hour until the announcement that there would be no verdict before dispersing.

URGES CARE.

Judge Hill, in his circumstantial evidence charge, instructed the jury to satisfy themselves very particularly as to the possibility of doubt in the evidence against Lehon before returning a verdict of guilty.

The judge instructed the jury that, while all three of the defendants are indicted jointly, if the jury deems any one or more of the defendants guilty and the other one or two innocent, it may so render a verdict. A verdict of simply "guilty" will be construed by the court to apply to all three defendants.

Judge Hill instructed the jury that in considering the case they are to hear but two voices. The law and the evidence. "You are to have no thought of any other crime mentioned," he said.

In his closing speech Solicitor Dorsey had referred a number of times to the Frank case.

Judge Hill instructed the jury explicitly and in detail in the law governing evidence.

The two points to be decided by the jury, he said, in order to bring in a verdict of guilty, are:

First, that the Ragsdale affidavit is false.

Second, that the witness was procured by the defendants by persuasion, promise of money or payment of money.

Judge Hill stated that the jury may convict in the latter point on the testimony of Ragsdale, if the jury believes that he has told the truth.

In considering the Ragsdale affidavit Judge Hill instructed the jury to confine itself to that portion of the affidavit explicitly set forth in the indictment.

SPEAKS FOR DEFENSE.

The evening session opened with the argument of Judge Powell for the defense. His speech was without pyrotechnics.

He declared that the defendants in this case, contrary to the course expected to be pursued by guilty men, had made no attempt whatever to conceal anything, but that they had done everything in their power to bring all evidence bearing upon the case to light.

Judge Powell's most startling statement was that if the jury is going to convict upon suspicion, which was Judge Powell's characterization of the evidence presented against the defendants, the evidence is as strong against the solicitor general's office as against the defendants.

This was based on the suggestion that Tedder might have been the solicitor's "plant" in the Burns camp instead of vice versa, as the prosecution

WILL LEO FRANK BE TRIED AGAIN?

Lawyers Discuss Next Move in Case, Provided Prisoner Should Win in the United States Supreme Court.

In the event Leo M. Frank is given his freedom by the United States supreme court, will he be prosecuted in the Fulton superior courts on another charge?

This question is taking on wide significance now because of the rumor current in court circles that, in event Frank is liberated on the habeas corpus appeal, Solicitor Dorsey and his associates will make a strong effort to have him indicted before the grand jury on one of two charges—rape or perversion.

The report has reached such a point that there is widespread speculation upon it wherever attorneys gather. It is generally acknowledged that the prisoner can be legally arraigned a second time if either of the rumored charges are brought against him.

Fight Case to End.

The probability is made even more apparent by the attitude of Solicitor Dorsey. Although non-committal, he declared that the state was determined to fight the Frank case to the end. He likewise made this additional statement:

"I do not care, however, to anticipate what may be done by the state should Frank be liberated eventually in the proceedings now before the United States supreme court.

"As to what can be done, so far as I know, there is no law which would prevent action being taken against him on either the charge of rape or perversion."

He would neither deny nor affirm the report, however, that the prosecution had already determined to take such steps against the convicted man if the United States courts interposed.

The reticence of Pat Campbell and John Starnes, the police headquarters detectives who were named in the bill of indictment as prosecutor of Frank for Mary Phagan's murder, leads many to attach credence to the report. When asked if they had contemplated further prosecution of Frank if he obtained freedom, they declined to express themselves either one way or the other.

Can Be Tried Again.

That Frank can be brought before the courts on either of the two above named charges was admitted by Attorney Reuben Arnold, associate counsel for Frank's defense and one of the principals in the famous trial. Like Mr. Dorsey, he declared that there was no way of preventing action on these grounds.

The plea of former jeopardy, he said, would be to no avail. A new charge, in such circumstances, would have to be similar to the one on which he was convicted before a plea of former jeopardy could be instituted.

Mr. Arnold added, however:

"I hardly see where any unprejudiced jury, though, would convict Frank on any other charge under the conditions. Prosecution would cease at such a point and become sheer persecution."

POPE BENEDICT PRAYS FOR THE END OF WAR

Bordeaux, January 30.—(Via Paris.)—In reply to a letter from Cardinal Paul Pierre Andrieu, archbishop of Bordeaux, Pope Benedict has written the following:

"When we see each day the most flourishing provinces covered with blood and bereavement, we cannot help being filled with anguish and looking forward to the future with the deepest anxiety.

"Consequently nothing seems to us more desirable than the cessation of the long, cruel war. To the rapid attainment of that end we have directed, as you know, all our plans and efforts.

"May God turn toward thoughts of peace the hearts of those who hold in their hands the destinies of the peoples."

Georgia's Best Catgut Artists Gathering Here Seeking Scalp of Fiddlin' Carson, Champion

Left, William M. Threlkeld, of Walton county, the only real Shriner fiddler in the convention at the Auditorium this week. Mr. Threlkeld is 68 years old, a noble of Yaarab temple and a fiddler of renown. Right, Prof. Alex Smart, of The Cove, Georgia, who arrived Saturday with his portable melodeon to play at the fiddlers' convention.

The fiddlers are gathering from the Blue Ridge to the swamps, and by Tuesday there will be forty or fifty of the best catgut artists Georgia can boast scraping fiddle-strings at the Auditorium in preparation for the opening of the official convention of the Old-Time Fiddlers' association, the musical classic of the backwoodsman's year. They are out for the scalp of Fiddlin' John Carson, present holder of the championship, and the fat money prize which goes with the medal.

The fame of the annual Atlanta convention has spread until fiddlers from hamlets away off the railroads have heard of it and sent word that they are coming. The veterans who have taken prizes at previous meetings will all be here again, and several new ones are entered on the list.

Judges to Officiate.

Judge "Dick" Russell, of the state court of appeals, who introduced the fiddlers in a memorable address last spring, has been invited to officiate again, and Judge Andy Calhoun will again be one of the judges—and he knows good fiddlin' when he hears it.

The convention will be held at the Auditorium on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights. Thursday afternoon and night being yielded by the management to permit Creatore's band to occupy the Auditorium. The old fiddlers, by the way, will be guests of honor at the band concert and enjoy their first taste of Italian music.

Alex Smart, who hails from Cove, Ga., "just behind Woodbury," as he says, will be present with his melodeon, of which he is past master. William W. Threlkeld, of Atlanta, aged 68 years and the only fiddling Shriner in the city, has entered the lists. Zeke Wardwell, the Bald Mountain Caruso, whose singing of old-time ballads made such a hit last season, is coming back. Ross Bagley and his son Jim, from Forsyth county; Ben Day, of Bartow; Deacon Ludwig, of Cobb; Sherry Harper, of Monroe, and Moonshiner Bob Young, of Walton, have signed up for the contest.

Some of the Entries.

Among the others on the list of entries to date are:

N. B. Richardson, of Pike; J. R. Whaley, of Luxomini; W. C. Whaley, of DeKalb; J. M. Blake, of Cobb, Fiddling Joe Brown, of Dallas; Bud Shelton, of Dallas; George Dunn, of Cobb; M. J. Hooper, of Cumming; R. M. Stanley and his three fiddling boys, of Dacula; Hiek McMichael, of Tate; Long Tom Deal, of Snap Finger; J. N. Bartow, of Gwinnett; J. S. O'Shields, of Fulton; H. W. Bullard, of Fulton; P. L. Chapman, of Copper Hill; George Barnes, of Fannin; W. F. Melton, of Woodbury; B. R. Rogers, of Woodbury; the three Mannings brothers, of Loganville, D. O'Hanlon, of Floyd; J. O. Hudson, of Fulton; W. H. Gunn, of Locust Grove; J. L. Dickson, of Locust Grove; J. B. Simmons, of Loganville; Florence Hall, of Comer, the famous boy fiddler, and Fiddlin' John Carson, who defies all comers.

SEVEN OPERAS SELECTED FOR THE ATLANTA SEASON; ALL-STAR CASTS COMING

Les Huguenots, Tales of Hoffman, Carmen, Rigoletto, L'Amore dei Tre Re, The Magic Flute and Madame Sans Gene Will Be Offered.

Final details of the signed contract between the Metropolitan Opera company and the Atlanta Music festival directors, for the 1915 spring season of grand opera in Atlanta, were settled, after correspondence by wire, at a meeting of the association directors in the office of President W. L. Peel yesterday.

The contract calls for a full week of grand opera, seven performances, with complete all-star casts, full orchestra, ballet, massive scenery—in short, a reproduction in full detail of the gorgeous and complete Metropolitan opera performances of past years in Atlanta.

Here Are the Operas.

The seven operas definitely decided on are:

"Tales of Hoffman."
"Carmen."
"Rigoletto."
"L'Amore dei Tre Re" (The Love of the Three Kings).
"The Magic Flute."
"Madame Sans Gene."

The placing on the program of "L'Amore dei Tre Re" is regarded as a ten-strike, as this is the first and only time its permanent place in the Metropolitan repertoire.

"Madame Sans Gene," according to the New York papers of the past week, has been a brilliant success both from the musical and popular standpoint.

In other words, there is not a single uncertain or untried opera on the whole Atlanta program.

New Guarantors.

Amount previously reported, $59,795; S. Davies Warfield, $1,000; Harper Hamilton, $100; Gordon Hiles, $100; J. E. Sommerfield, $100; Carlton Shoe and Clothing company, $100; Mrs. R. D. Spalding, $100; Vaudette theater, $100; Dr. Dunbar Roy, $100; Dr. William Crenshaw, $100; Dr. Thomas Crenshaw, $100; Mrs. W. G. Raoul, $200; Mrs. J. L. Pryor, $100; C. E. Caverly, $100; Mrs. T. S. Lewis, $100; Mrs. E. R. Gunby, $250; Henry H. Schaul, $100. Total, $65,545.

The above does not include the $11,500 subscribed by the New York friends of Atlanta opera, which makes the grand total run to $74,045.

Among the new names above will be noted that of S. Davies Warfield, of Baltimore, who, like Otto Kahn, claims Atlanta citizenship when it comes to supporting Metropolitan opera in the south. Mr. Warfield's subscription was entirely voluntary and unexpected. The directors decided to accept it with thanks, as Mr. Warfield is a regular patron of the opera season here and will be here again this spring.

WARFIELD PREDICTS GREAT OPERA SEASON

Offers $2,500 for Guarantee List in Letter to Colonel Wm. L. Peel.

S. Davies Warfield, chairman of the board of directors of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, characterizes Atlanta's operatic season as the most "wonderful work for the south," in a personal letter to Colonel William Lawson Peel.

Mr. Warfield lives in Baltimore, but the tremendous power of his influence has been felt in Atlanta as well as other cities of the south whenever big things have been projected.

Now Mr. Warfield has joined the ranks of men who are behind Atlanta's operatic season.

In his letter to Colonel Peel Mr. Warfield asks to become one of the guarantors for the sixth operatic season of Metropolitan grand opera to the extent of from $1,000 to $2,500, whichever amount the committee can use.

Here is Mr. Warfield's letter to Colonel Peel:

"My Dear Colonel Peel: Will you permit me to become one of the guarantors for the sixth operatic season, Metropolitan Grand Opera company, to the extent of $1,000 to $2,500, whichever amount you can conveniently use?

"As a southern man I wish to cooperate in the truly wonderful work you and your associates have done for the south in a manner impossible of being surpassed anywhere.

"I have already requested a box for the coming season, and can say that having attended the opera the past two seasons, I am looking forward with the greatest pleasure of being with you in April. Believe me, very sincerely, S. DAVIES WARFIELD."

"MURDER" MYSTERY PROVED TO BE JOKE PLAYED ON PASTOR

A practical joke played in a minister's home Thursday night brought Assistant Chief Jett and a squad of police from the station in a hurry in the patrol wagon, anticipating a "big murder."

The chief and his men were summoned to No. 48 Larkin street, the home of Rev. F. B. Ricketts, pastor of the McDonough Baptist church, at about 10 o'clock. The call over the telephone informed the police that a murdered man was lying in the reception hall of the Ricketts residence.

The corpse, however, proved to be a dummy made of Rev. Mr. Ricketts' clothes and stuffed with sofa pillows to give the minister a weird little surprise party when he arrived home. His wife and daughters had made the dummy. But Roy Wade, a boarder, came in first, and when he beheld the figure on the reception room floor he rushed out of the house and to a telephone.

GRANT PARK IS SCENE OF A DARNG ROBBERY

Masked Highwayman Holds Up Three Men Late at Night and Secures Nearly $90.

A masked highwayman held up three men at the point of a pistol in Grant park about 12 o'clock last night, and obtained nearly $90. Although Call Officers Milam and Evans arrived soon afterward, he had effected an escape without being recognized.

Joseph Ellis, in company with his son, E. Ellis, and the delivery boy, Bill Cody, was going from his store at 347 Grant street to his home, 115 Confederate avenue, when the robbery occurred. As they reached the junction of Ormewood and Boulevard, an unknown man, pistol in hand, and with a handkerchief tied about his face, ordered them to hand over what money they might have.

Mr. Ellis had in his pocket $75, the proceeds of Saturday night's sales, and he quickly placed this sum in the robber's extended hat. E. Ellis contributed $7 from his pockets. Bill Cody followed the example of his employers and gave to the highwayman the larger portion of his week's earnings.

When satisfied that his victims' pockets were emptied, the masked man coolly ordered them to "step lively." He then disappeared in the darkness and has eluded the search of the police.

HOME OF SECRETARY OF CHIEF ROBBED.

The home of W. T. Morris, secretary of the chief of police, was robbed Saturday evening about 5 o'clock, while Mrs. Morris was driving in her automobile to the station house for her husband.

Upon their arrival at the house, 259 Formwalt street, they found its contents ransacked and a considerable number of articles missing. The thief showed a penchant for clothing and carried away nearly all such articles in the wardrobe. A pistol highly valued by Mr. Morris was also taken. No clue to the perpetrator of the theft has been discovered.

FIVE PERSONS INJURED IN COAST LINE WRECK

Jacksonville, Fla., January 30.—Five persons were injured, none seriously, in a wreck on the Atlantic Coast Line railroad 3 miles from Callahan at 12:46 o'clock this afternoon. The four rear Pullmans, and the rear end of the diner left the track. The train was known as No. 85, New York and West Indian Limited, from New York for Jacksonville. The passengers were brought to Jacksonville by a relief train and the wounds of the injured were dressed in a local hospital.

COMPROMISE IN ALABAMA ON CHILD LABOR BILL

Montgomery, Ala., January 30.—The senate committee this evening decided to favorably report the child labor bill to the legislature next Monday at noon, with vital amendments. The age limit is raised from 12 to 14 years for children prevented from working in factories, and the hours of labor of those who may work is raised from fifty hours per week to sixty hours. This is looked upon as a compromise to both sides of the agitation. Other amendments are minor ones.

RUSSIAN FORCES FIGHTING HOSTILE ARMIES ON FRONT EXTENDING FOR 1,500 MILES

From Tilsit, in East Prussia, to Tabriz, in Persia, the Czar's Troops Are Battling With the Germans, Austrians and Turks, and Are Holding Their Own.

RUSSIAN FLANK MOVE IN NORTH EAST PRUSSIA GAINING IN MOMENTUM

In the Snowy Passes of the Carpathians the Russians Are Battling Austro-Germans, Who Are Trying to Save Hungary From Invasion—On the Western Front, the Germans Are Reported to Have Lost Heavily in Local Battles.

London, January 30.—The end of the sixth month of Europe's great war finds the belligerent armies completing preparations for or actually engaged in operations of an extent hardly anticipated when the declarations of hostilities were made.

In Flanders, France and Central Poland a deadlock still exists, but largely because of Russia's tremendous resources and Turkey's action the sphere of operations has been widely extended. Russia alone is engaged in fighting hostile armies from Tilsit, far in the north of East Prussia, to Tabriz, in Persia, a distance of over 1,500 miles. Only that portion of her territory bordering Rumania is free from menace, but her reports declare all of her immense armies are successful.

One effect of this struggle has been to bring the Austro-German troops so near the Rumanian frontier as to fan the flames in that country, which may have an important bearing on deciding when Rumania will enter the conflict.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE IN EAST PRUSSIA.

The Russian outflanking movement in northern East Prussia is said to be gaining momentum. The armies on either side of Tilsit have cut the German railway between that city and Memel, on the Baltic.

On the southern front, in East Prussia, another army is advancing toward the German fortress of Thorn, while still another is holding a line of entrenchments which protects Warsaw and which General von Hindenburg has been trying to batter through for three months. Other armies are again preparing to meet a big Austro-German force attempting to regain Galicia and Bukowina.

To the eastward, where Muscovite troops are battling against the Turks, another defeat apparently has been inflicted on the sultan's forces. The Russian official report says the Turks are retreating to Tabriz, where unofficial dispatches declare the Russians have reoccupied that city.

What is regarded as the most important campaign, however, is that developing in the Carpathians, brought about by the Austro-German defeats in the Bukowina and from Galicia and Bukowina. The Austro-German allies are said to have concentrated 28 army corps for this venture. So far as can be gathered from contradictory official reports, the Russians have won preliminary skirmishes in the western passes from Dukla to Wyszkow, while to the east they have been forced to retire before superior forces. These battles, which

RUDOLPH HERRING DOUBLE-CROSSED CITY, SAYS MAYOR

Woodward Moves to Bring Suit to Recover Fees and Expense Money Advanced Expert for His Services.

CREMATORY TESTIMONY CAUSE OF HIS ACTION

Says Herring's Admissions in Hearing of Suit Against City Show He Is Not Entitled to Money Paid Him.

Mayor James G. Woodward said Saturday that he is going to instruct City Attorney James L. Mayson to bring suit immediately to recover from Dr. Rudolph Herring, of New York, fees and expense money advanced to him by the city for his services in the negotiations with the New York Destructor company on the contract for the crematory.

According to the mayor, the city employed Dr. Herring as its representative in the crematory negotiations, and he was paid $50 a day, railroad and incidental expenses, and in addition a fee of $500 for his services as "mechanical, construction and combustion engineer."

"Dr. Herring either misrepresented himself to the city and collected money to which he was not entitled, or else he has double-crossed the city in this deal," said the mayor.

Dr. Herring Responsible.

"When the city was dickering with the Destructor company on the contract, Dr. Herring was employed by the city as consulting engineer, mechanical engineer and combustion engineer, and it was chiefly through his representations as to the mechanical efficiency of the plant that the city entered into the contract.

"Now, Dr. Herring says that he is not a mechanical engineer. He admitted in his testimony in the federal court that he was neither a mechanical nor a combustion engineer. He told the court that he is a sanitary engineer. But the city of Atlanta paid him a fee and expenses on the assumption that he would give the construction department and the board of health and other officials of the government the benefit of his knowledge on mechanical and combustion details.

"We have his admission in the record in the federal court before Special Master Callaway to the effect that he could not pass on mechanical or combustion problems in connection with the plant. Therefore he is not entitled to the money the city paid him as a fee nor is he entitled to any of the expense money the city paid him to come to Atlanta.

Witness Against City.

"Dr. Herring is in Atlanta as a witness for the New York Destructor company and against the city of Atlanta, although it was the city, and not the Destructor company, who paid him as representative. This makes it apparent that Dr. Herring has double-crossed the city, and if he has any expert knowledge of the plant he will admit this to be true.

"I am told that Dr. Herring has only seen the plant in Atlanta twice. One visit was made months ago, and the last time he saw the plant was a few days ago."

Mayor Woodward and Assistant City Attorney Ellis have conferred frequently since the appearance of Dr. Herring on the witness stand, and on Saturday the mayor admitted that he has instructed that an itemized statement of fees and expenses paid to Dr. Herring as engineer in the crematory dispute be prepared for him.

The mayor says that this statement is being prepared for the purpose of bringing suit.

Representative of City.

Dr. Herring has represented the city in a number of construction projects. He was consulting engineer for the city while the sewage disposal plants were being planned, and it is said that through his influence with the owners of the Imhoff tank patent the city was allowed to use the tanks of that kind without paying the patentee royalties. This right to the city knocked off many thousand dollars from the cost of construction. He also consulted with the city engineers in the matter of plans for sewers erected with bond money years ago.

Dr. Herring occupied the witness stand before Special Master Callaway on Friday in the suit of the Destructor company against the city to force the city to pay the company the remaining $135,000 on the plant.

Saturday Dr. Herring left Atlanta, it is understood.

MANNING FOR REPEAL OF ANTI-COTTON BILL

Columbia, S. C., January 30.—Governor Manning said today that he would approve the bill, which has passed both houses of the general assembly repealing the cotton acreage reduction act passed at the extraordinary session which began October 6. The reduction act prohibited under penalty the planting in cotton by any farmer of more than one-third of his area under cultivation to all crops.

Governor Manning, explaining his action, said that the reduction law would seem an injustice to the small planter, inasmuch as there was no provision for its enforcement, and South Carolina was the only state which had adopted such a law. He went on to say that material reduction of South Carolina cotton acreage would result automatically from the losses on last year's crop.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY.

Britain and Turkey. The Cause of the Rupture. Set out, in brief form, from the diplomatic correspondence. By Sir Edward Cook. An interesting pamphlet of about thirty pages, in which the author says "that it seems desirable that the history of the rupture between Great Britain and Turkey should be widely known." Another pamphlet by this author gives a brief resume of correspondence with reference to the European crisis—and this pamphlet has led to the preparation of the present pamphlet, in which a resume is given of the causes leading to war between Great Britain and her allies on the one side, and Turkey as the ally of Germany on the other side.

England, Germany and Europe. By James Wycliffe Headlam, M. A. (Formerly fellow of King's college, Cambridge, and author of a "Life of Bismarck.") This article, now in pamphlet form, originally appeared in the Church Quarterly Review of October, 1914. It is now reprinted by request.

An Englishman's Call to Arms. Reprinted from The Daily Mail. The above title is taken from the last message sent to a friend by Captain Norman Leslie—it is as follows:

"Try and not worry too much about the war; anyway, units, individuals cannot count. Remember, we are writing a new page of history. Future generations cannot be allowed to read the decline of the British empire and attribute it to us. We live our little lives and die. But count the loss saught. It is better far to go out with honor than survive with shame."

These pamphlets are from MacMillan & Co., Limited, St. Martin's street, London.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Austria-Hungary and the War. By Ernest Ludwig. I. and R. Consul for Austria-Hungary in Cleveland, Ohio. With a preface by Dr. Konstantin Theodor Dumba, ambassador of Austria-Hungary, which will be of special interest to all who are studying the conditions, etc., of the great war. The book rescues the political conditions as well as historical developments which led to this war. It describes conditions in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the two Austrian provinces coveted by Servia, and explains minutely the real causes of the world conflict.

It particularizes on the Serajeva trial in which the assassination of the crown prince and his consort is proved to have been committed by members of the notorious "Narodna Odbrana" society of Servia, etc., which, from the Austro-Hungarian standpoint, made it necessary to declare war against Servia, and which brought on the European war, which is now the study of all nations. Therein it all the human interest is never lost sight of by the reader, and there are new facts which the writer says are official and authentic. (Ogilvie Publishing company, New York city.)

Genetic Theory of Reality Being the Outcome of Genetic Logic as Issuing in the Aesthetic Theory of Reality Called by Pancalism. By James Mark Baldwin, Ph.D., D.Sc., LL.D. Foreign correspondent of the Institute of France, and author of "History of Psychology," etc. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York city.)

Studies in Southern History and Politics. Inscribed to William Archibald Dunning, Ph.D., LL.D. Lieber professor of history and political philosophy in Columbia university, by his former pupil, the author. The preface by James W. Garner is very interesting, as well as the table of contents. (Columbia University Press, New York city.)

Eros. By Emil Lucka. Translated with introduction, by Ellie Schleussner. The best critics say that Lucka has succeeded in presenting to his readers an historical and philosophical account of the development of the grande passion in all climes. The book is also considered the most poetical work on the subject. Being a remarkable volume, it is now the subject for argument, for some thinkers and writers present the author's conclusions that only the Germanic race, including the British and North American peoples, is capable of the highest love. The introduction of several pages will be read with interest. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.)

The World's War. How It Looks to Nations Involved and What It Means to Us. In giving the Table of Contents we furnish the reader with the interesting subjects of the day, subjects that are being studied and discussed by the worlds. C. Austria and Servia; II. Russia; III. Germany; IV. France; Luxemburg and Belgium; Holland, England; the English and the German Press; Rumania and Italy; Turkey; V. Japan and the After the War and the War in Brief, with one copy of President Wilson's dispatch to the German Emperor. The author, Ellery Francis Baldwin, wishes to be just in the conclusions and has tried to give a conservative survey of the entire situation. (The MacMillan company, New York city.)

Christianity as Mystical Fact and the Mysteries of Antiquity. By Rudolph Steiner. Third Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Edited by H. Collison. The authorized English translation.

FICTION.

Mrs. Martin's Man. By St. John G. Ervine, who is the author of the "Four Irish Plays," etc. Another interesting story of Ole Ireland, a picture of homelife woven around Mrs. Martin, who is a very original character—Independent, honest, trustworthy and a woman of so much common sense as well as flesh wit, which diverts a domestic tragedy and brings the harmony so much desired in family affairs. An unusual creation is James—"Mrs. Martin's Man," but to appreciate the title and the "creation," the book will have to be read from start to finish—it is worth it. The author understands and shows his love of the human race all through his works. (The MacMillan company, New York city.)

Beauty and Nick. By Philip Gibbs, author of quite a number of interesting books of fiction. The author in this book, which is based on the theme that the home tries to impress upon his readers that "it is the child that begs," when the "Nick" is the father. The "Beauty" of the title is not only a famous actress, but a wife and mother, and the "Nick" is her son. The father has the training of the boy and a beautiful comradeship develops between them—for there are just these two. But the mother's beauty and love has made a strong impression on her boy, and he grows to manhood cherishing above everything else, the idea of reuniting his parents. There are many dramatic scenes which keep the reader's attention at a high pitch. The author is a young English novelist whose work is beginning to attract attention in both England and America. (The Devin-Adair company, 34 West 33d avenue, New York.)

POETRY.

Songs of Kabir, translated by Rabindranath Tagore, author of "Gitanjli," etc. With the assistance of Evelyn Underhill. This volume contains one hundred poems of Kabir, one of the most interesting personalities in the history of Indian mysticism, who lived, according to report, about 1440. Tagore, the Indian poet, whose fame is world-wide, has not only translated the poems into English, but has interpreted in a sweet, sympathetic way Kabir's vision and thought.

"There is no land in all the world where poetry is so much a part of the daily life as in India. The baby is greeted with a blessing in verse, the mother teaches him many lessons at home in verse, and the first lessons at school are given in verse; when the boy gets old enough to study Sanskrit, the first thing his teacher does is impress upon him is "the two great blessings which hallow the horrors of this hard world are—lasting sweet nectar of poetry and keeping good company." The most widely read book in India is "The Ramayana," and it is in verse. It is the Hindu Muse of Poetry that joins the young couple in marriage, and it is the same Hindu poetry, which is repeated before the man, woman or child is consigned to the last resting place.

Poems by Oliver Allstorm, of Hugo, Texas. The book is dedicated to Mr. S. C. Dobbs, of Atlanta, Ga., as follows:

"To my friend, Mr. S. C. Dobbs, of Atlanta, Georgia. A man whom to know is to love, I dedicate this little volume with kind remembrance."

Mr. Allstorm's numerous friends in different cities have compared his writings to Kipling. A Chicago friend selected the poem "When the Lights Go Out," as being distinctively Kipling; another compares his writhings to Poe, especially in the beauty of "A Soldier's Soliloquy," which is written in slang so common that sounds uncommon unless you speak it. "It is almost like Poe," said this friend. "The Sage of East Aurora" is the subject of one of the author's poems. His reference is a very pretty piece of sarcasm which Elbert Hubbard will no doubt receive in the spirit in which it is intended. It seems that Hubbard, who is a great critic, in writing a pen sketch of a great inventor criticised Robert Burns, and Allstorm, also as a critic, writes the following:

"You were a warbler, Robert Burns,
Unmoving fear of that;
Though moving pictures please us now, they'll a improve 'for a' that.
And those big silvers upon the sea that move without a sail
Will some day look like floating logs, and prove inventions fail.
But love shall live without a change,
in spite of rank or tone;
For even Heaven takes from earth the sweetness of a song.
And hence a thousand years from now the world will drink and say:
'Pray tell us, Robbie, Bobbie Burns, who was this Hubbard, pray?'
And all the eighty winds that blow will only answer, 'We don't know.'"

GOSSIP FROM RAND, M'NALLY & CO.

Colonel W. D. Boyce, owner of The Indiana Times, Saturday Blade, Chicago Ledger, The Farming business, etc., and author of "Illustrated South America," is a new interstate traveler. He has circled the globe, and the book, "The United States Colonies and Independencies," is the result of his journeys. While on the trip Colonel Boyce took 1,000 views with his camera, of which 600 are reproduced in the volume just issued.

The new art series on Botticelli, Raphael, Watts and Holbein are certainly the greatest bargains in art books to be had. Each volume has thirty-two photo-gravures of great masterpieces by these master painters.

"Penny" Ross, who has for years been the most popular of The Chicago Tribune cartoonists, has put "Esther, Mama's Angel Child," into book form.

"The Lovers," by Eden Phillpotts, has been issued as a popular copyright and its steady sale continues. Phillpott is an Englishman, but is gradually coming into his own in America.

Howard V. Sutherland, author of many books, will spend the spring months in California, his old home, at work on a new volume.

ABOUT BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Herbert Adams Gibbons, the author of "The New Map of Europe," published by the Century company, has recently taken a fifteen days' trip through Central Europe. He reports that nowhere did he have the slightest difficulty with the authorities or the irregularity of trains. "Germany," he says, "is altogether normal." Some of his books are for sale here. He is a professor in Roberts college, Constantinople.

As an addition to the February Century Mr. Morgan Shuster and Professor Ison Roland G. Usher have added a supplement on the subject of violation of American neutrality. Professor Usher, who is the author of "Pan-Germanism," "The Rise of the American People," in an article on "England and Neutrality" shows that upholds the moral obligation of America to take a firm stand on the international laws that govern neutral commerce on the high seas, while admitting that war with England would be so disastrous that we must not force the issue too far.

In the same issue of the Century W. Morgan Shuster points out in "The Goose Step and the Marine Roll" that England's right to rule the seas has been practically granted by every nation except Germany.

James L. Ford, author of "The Great Mirage," has published by Harper & Bros., is a journalist and critic who has spent his life in New York city.

Mark Twain's romantic story of the little king and his subject who changed places with each other, has been chosen by the war department for use in the schools of Manila. The title is "The Prince and the Pauper."

We have just received the first number of "School and Society," a weekly educational journal which began publication with the new year under the editorship of Dr. J. McKeen Cattell, professor of psychology in Columbia University and the Psychological College. The first number opens with an article by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, entitled "Educational Evolution," in which he has long been the leader in this country. Dr. G. Stanley Hall discusses the teaching in our schools of the war, etc.

Laird & Lee, of Chicago, have gotten out a beautiful little pocket year book for 1915 which, besides the diary proper, contains information about the Panama exposition, population of United States cities of 10,000 and upward, Panama canal statistics, etc. Price 25 cents.

Getting Close to "Bad Actors" Call Officer Evans' Specialty

Benjamin C. Moomaw, of Virginia, whose verse ranks with the best in current literature, has written for The Constitution a spirited song, entitled "The Midnight Run."

In a letter to the editor of The Constitution the author says:

"I inclose a poem, 'The Midnight Run' dedicated to the engineer of the Midnight Flyer, who, I think, is the greatest hero in the world."

The poem will be read with interest and appreciation. Mr. Moomaw wrote the ode for the Jamestown exposition, and but recently read a poem in Atlanta at the laying of the cornerstone of Oglethorpe university. Following is the poem:

The Midnight Run.

I.

He goes as one may go unto the clarion
call, afar.
Of battle, while the soul exults above
the fear of war:
Or as the lines of duty lead, wherever it may be
That fate shall fling her challenge out of the old mystery.
For he must be as the storm wing,
over the world aweary,
Over the fields and over the streams,
before the lavish day
Flings down the starry gold as from the gateway of the east
It comes like thrilling melodies unto a gorgeous feast.

II.

'Twas thus he held, that solemn night,
the lever of his power,
And thundered over the rails as though he cried the awful hour
When, lo, the wrath of God comes swift to smite a godless land
And A'te rushes to the feast of death with quenchless rage.
On, and ever it thunders on, for since the world began
What other victory so marks the haughty son of man?
League after league across the plains,
or where the billows be,
And fling unto the rushing fiend the challenge of the sea.

III.

Into the empire of the dark as all the hours drew Unto the midnight, even as the blazing headlight flew Along the narrowing lines of steel, the eye, and, lo, the soul
Of him flashed over the lane of light, as one who seeks to know
By all the steadfast stars, or by the lordly sun aglow
With glory, what the coming hour or hastening moment bears
For him who thus along the earth-
born peril swiftly fares;
Or to what secret destiny, or what tremendous goal.

IV.

There where the woodland skirts the way his spirit gently smiled
When over the rails the fleeing hare but scarcely leaped, beguiled
By the fierce glare, or in the field the heifer fled, and turned Anon to gaze wild-eyed upon the roaring fiend that burned
Its way into the shadowy walls and dim embattlements
Of old, imperial night; or flung afar its sudden vents
Of rage. But, lo, how could the eye, alert for peril, see
A ghostly form in sombre robes before his lightning flee?

V.

It fled within the sheltering edge of the mysterious dark,
And over its shoulder turned its visage,
sinister and stark,
To the onrushing train, and still it swiftly fled before
The light, and from the steadfast eye of him who sternly bore
Upon his soul the life and love committed to his care, Devoting thus at length his life, as only they may dare
Who are the manliest men, and worthy of this holy trust:
And who shall say that hero soul descended to the dust?

—BENJAMIN C. MOOMAW.

ARCHER-RHODES.

Sparta, Ga., January 30.—(Special.) On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, January 27, at the First Baptist church of Sparta, Mrs. Hattie Archer was married to Mr. Charles Rhodes, Rev. W. O. Young, pastor of the Baptist church, officiating. Messrs. Harry Middlebrooks, Karl Wheeler, Wilborn Moore, of Sparta, and Dr. Holmes Archer, of Wrightsville, were ushers. The church had been most artistically decorated for the wedding. The altar was a mass of green palms and ferns, interspersed with Easter lillies, the surrounding each was entwined with smilax and white carnations, the columns were entwined in green and the whole formed a most enchanting background for the wedding scene. As the audience awaited the wedding party they were impressed with the beauty and solemnity of the occasion by the music rendered. Miss Mary Johnston, a sister of the bride, played Schumann's "Traumerie" and Miss Mae Dunning, of Greensboro, niece of the bride, sang "The Hour That Gave Me You" and "So Fair, So Sweet and Holy." To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, following the ushers, came Mrs. Archer with Mr. Rhodes to the altar, and Rev. Young performed the ceremony simply and solemnly. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue cloth with a touch of rose at the neck and her hat was a combination of blue and rose. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses showered with lillies of the valley. Her costume was especially becoming to her Spanish type of beauty. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes left for eastern Florida and Cuba. Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes are both very popular members of Sparta's society and their hosts of friends are delighted that their future home will be in Sparta, where they are so much beloved.

On last Friday afternoon the Vardaman home was beautiful, having been decorated with smilax and white candles in quaint silver holders, the occasion being a trail luncheon in honor of Mrs. Archer by the members of the Round Table. Miss Grace Vardaman received the guests wearing blue crepe de chine and was assisted by becomingly dressed in old rose brocaded satin. After the game hand-made handkerchiefs were cut for and won by Mrs. Frank Turner and Mrs. W. H. Burwell. Mrs. Archer was given a handsome lavalliere set with pearls and sapphires by the members of the Round Table. The wedding of Miss Mary Clare Mullally, daughter of the late Rev. Francis P. Mullally, D. D., and Mrs. Elizabeth Keith Aigen, of Pelham, and Mr. Benjamin Vernor Norton, son of Mrs. Edward Kingsley Norton, of New Canaan, Conn., was solemnized at the Huguenot Memorial church, Pelham Manor, New York, at 4:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The Rev. Lewis G. du Lory performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. William P. Mullally, of New York and Pelham. Her attendants were her sister, Miss Susan B. A. Mullally, and Mrs. William B. Rankine, sister of the groom.

The best man was Mr. George S. Chappell. The ushers were Mr. Thomas D. Clarke, Jr., Mr. Jere Greenleaf, Mr. Mandeville Mullally, Mr. A. Seton Post, Mr. J. McLean Walton, all of New York, and Mr. A. Howlett Durston, of Syracuse, N. Y.

The bride's gown was of white satin and rose point lace, becomingly fastened with orange blossoms. The bride's attendants wore gowns of apricot charmeuse and hats of brown tulle. They carried bouquets of Ward roses and freesias.

The church was artistically decorated with palms and lilies.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride.

THE FINISHING TOUCH

THRICE girdled with black velvet is the evening frock of gold satin, illustrated on the left; though waistless in itself it has the appearance of being quite long-waisted. Delicately tinted tulle is tied around the arms in gay butterfly bows and folds of it fill in above the bodice in front. The skirt is scalloped and bound with a narrow fold of the material. A lovely big rose in deep orange satin at the girdle exactly matches the beaded tassel that tips the end of the sash.

THE blue brocade of the sleeveless gown, illustrated on the middle figure, hangs in graceful folds from a moyen age corsage of plain blue silk, fastened over the shoulders with ropes of crystal beads. The full skirt so short in front that the ankles are plainly visible, nevertheless in back is accompanied with a long, square train.

are being fought in the snow, are just commencing, however, and many days must pass before a definite decision is reached.

BATTLES IN WEST LARGELY LOCAL.

Battles in the west still consist of local engagements, although the Germans, apparently preparing for an extensive offensive before the allies put their full strength into the field, occasionally deliver rather more serious attacks. These are scattered all along the front from the sea to the Swiss frontier.

Guinchy, which the British now hold after driving back the Germans who captured it on Monday, was attacked again yesterday, and, according to a British report, the Germans were repulsed, leaving 200 dead in front of the trenches they sought to capture.

The Argonne has been the scene of another attack and in this case the German forces claim to have taken over 700 prisoners and counted between 500 and 600 dead.

In giving a review of these "local affairs" between January 16 and 27, a French eye-witness declares all but one of them resulted in favor of the allies.

There has been more outpost fighting in the vicinity of the Suez canal, but latest reports say the Turks are withdrawing their advance posts. They still in some doubt whether they have definitely committed themselves to the march they must make across the desert to invade Egypt.

GERMANS REPULSED BY THE BRITISH.

London, January 30.—The following statement was made tonight by the official press bureau:

"An attack was made in some force yesterday near Guinchy (northern France), but the enemy was easily repulsed.

"Over two hundred German dead were counted in front of the trenches occupied by the British, among whom the casualties were small."

Paris, January 30.—(10:40 p. m.)—The following official statement was issued by the war office tonight:

"It is confirmed that the enemy has left a great number of dead on the field of battle to the north of Lombaertzyde, at the foot of the Great Dune, and also before the English lines near La Bassee.

"There has been a bombardment of some intensity of Ypres, Dixmude and Roolincourt. On the plateau of Nouvron the Germans exploded a mine without attaining any results.

"In the Argonne a slight withdrawal of our troops is reported, and their organization on the new lines about 200 meters to the rear of the position which they had occupied, has been actively disputed. The losses of the enemy have been very high; ours were serious.

The statement given out this afternoon follows:

"Generally speaking, the day of January 29 passed quietly in Belgium; there were artillery engagements, in front of Guinchy, near La Bassee, the British army drove back an attack delivered by three German battalions. The Germans in this case suffered heavy losses.

"To the north of Arras, near Neuville-St. Vaast, our heavy artillery brought a German battery under its fire and caused the explosion of the enemy to explode.

"In the sections of Albert, Roye, Soissons, Craonne, Rheims and Perthes there were yesterday artillery engagements at times rather severe. Our batteries acquitted themselves efficiently.

"In the Woevre district, near Flirey, the Germans exploded a mine, the object of which was to blow up our trenches. As a matter of fact, all they did was to destroy theirs.

"Speaking of other fighting in the Caucasus, the statement says:

"In the region around Tchorokh, south of Batum, a column of troops of the enemy were repulsed by the village of Bechkoi. They retreated precipitately.

"On the front near Sari Kamysh there has been no important change. On January 28 Turkish artillery was particularly active and fired energetically, but without success."

SIX GERMAN AIRSHIPS BOMBARDED DUNKIRK

Dunkirk, France, January 29.—(Via Paris, January 30.)—The bombardment from the air carried out here by the German airships Tuesday night, after aeroplanes. It was a clear moonlight night, but the machines could not be seen except when lit up now and then by the beam of a whirling searchlight by which the German airship aircraft guns directed their fire.

The droning of the propellers, however, was heard some time before the aeroplanes arrived. This was sufficient notice and ample time was given for the inhabitants to seek shelter, according to a plan arranged by the authorities.

In all, fifty bombs were thrown, ten of which were incendiary and the number of private houses were damaged, but the raid from a military point of view was a failure.

WARNING TO RUMANIA BY AUSTRIA-HUNGARY

Paris, January 30.—A Geneva dispatch to the Fournier agency states that Baron Burian, the Austrian foreign minister, has sent a telegraphic note to Bucharest requesting the Rumanians to refrain from fomenting agitation among the Rumanian population of Transylvania.

BRITISH AIRSHIP LOST, ACCORDING TO GERMANS

London, January 30.—Berlin wireless advices state that of seven English aeroplanes which have bombarded Ostend and Zeebrugge, three failed to return. It was said the three machines were surrounded by German aircraft and chased into the open sea.

The above dispatch may indicate a new British air raid on the Belgian coast towns. The last British air raid reported in that direction occurred at Zeebrugge on January 22. Two British aviators took part and it was said their bombs damaged a submarine and killed or wounded the crews of the guns mounted on the mole. The German report of the raid said no damage was done.

GREAT BRITAIN URGED TO SEIZE ALL GRAIN

London, January 30.—The General Federation of Trades Unions in a document today regarding the high food prices in the United Kingdom recommends chiefly that the government take over all wheat supplies, as has been done by Germany.

The British document the document reads, "would suffer no real hardship or loss if the government requisitioned the whole home-grown and unmarketed wheat at 42 shillings (*10.50) a quarter. Immediate action on these lines would tend to moderate prices."

GERMANS VOID DECISION BY KING OF BELGIANS

Amsterdam, January 30.—(Via London.—The German military governor of Belgium, General von Bissing, has issued a proclamation defining what Belgian bank notes are legal tender. He approves the issue by the Societe Generale, by the Banque Nationale prior to November, and by certain Belgian banks which have been organized by the German commissioner.

"This proclamation," General von Bissing says, "annuls the decision of the Belgian king of August 20 and the above notes are valid until three months after the conclusion of peace."

KAISER UNDER FIRE AT SOISSONS BATTLE

Berlin, January 30.—(Via London.)—The Correspondence Agency of Berlin asserts it learns from a dependable source that Emperor William stood in a heavy fire at the battle of Soissons and that it was only after insistent representations from his entourage that he consented, after a long while, to leave the exposed position.

DISORDERS IN ITALY OVER PRICE OF BREAD

Florence, Italy, January 30.—Agitators today attempted to force a general strike. The movement, it is believed, generally is condemned by most of the people. Strong detachments of police and troops are maintaining order.

Caltanisetta, Sicily, January 30.—Disorders in consequence of the rise in the price of bread continued today. In some communities owners of wheat supplies decided to distribute them at the normal price.

Milan, Italy, January 30.—The municipality has bought sufficient wheat for the population. The grain will be ground at municipal mills and the flour will be made into bread by co-operative workers. The price in this way will be maintained at almost the normal level.

NINE GERMANS ESCAPE FROM HALIFAX CITADEL

Halifax, N. S., January 30.—Nine German prisoners of war, interned at the citadel, have escaped it became known tonight. Three were recaptured, but the others still are at large. A court-martial has been ordered to determine responsibility for the escape.

KAISER BACK TO BERLIN AFTER TRIP TO FRONT

Berlin, January 30.—(Via London.)—Emperor William returned to the capital today for a short stay, after his tour of inspection along the western front.

BREAD LIMITATIONS FIXED BY GERMANY

Berlin, January 30 (Via London, January 31, 4:30 a. m.)—Despite the fact that after February 1 bakers in Germany will be limited to one and a half pounds of bread flour combined with two pounds of potatoes, the authorities of Berlin, Charlottenburg, Schoenberg, Neukolln, Wilmersdorf and Steglitz and Tellow, have ordered the following limitations on consumption:

Daily per capita consumption of all kinds of bread flours combined may not exceed two kilograms.

Only uniform bread may be baked—weighing when baked in loaves of grams, rye bread of one and a half kilograms, and biscuit to be sold only by the piece.

Pastries may contain only 10 per cent of their total weight of cereal flour.

Restaurants and other places of refreshment may receive only three-fourths of the amount formerly received by them.

WILHELMINA'S CARGO WANTED FOR BELGIANS

London, January 30.—The commission for relief in Belgium tonight announced it has begun efforts to purchase of the American steamer Wilhelmina, which left New York for Rotterdam January 23 with food supplies for Germany.

The recent accidents to its vessels has so interfered with the commission's shipping arrangements that a serious crisis is threatened in the delivery of food to Belgium.

The chairman of the commission has placed at its disposal a sum sufficient to buy the Wilhelmina's cargo. The owners of the vessel by the commission provides for a fair profit to the Wilhelmina's owners on the original purchase.

The commission has an arrangement with various governments which enables it to obtain exemption from search at any stage of its voyage and to give safe conduct to its vessels. Members of the commission hope the offer will be accepted, as the Wilhelmina's cargo would be what promises to be a serious shortage.

The Wilhelmina carries 2,000 tons of grain, flour and general food products, valued at about $230,000, and is consigned to relief officials in Germany. The steamship was engaged by the Southern Products Trading company, of New York, by the W. T. Green Commission company, of St. Louis, and the cargo is consigned to the firm's branch office in Hamburg. The British government, it is understood, was not consulted with regard to the voyage and it generally is believed in shipping circles that the vessel will be seized by British warships before she reaches Germany.

ITALY TAKES STEPS TO PROVIDE WHEAT

Rome, January 30.—Measures to insure a supply of wheat at moderate prices for the population of Italy have been agreed upon by the government and provincial committees will be given, for purchase of grain, funds supplied by the national banks at one per cent from government control. The banks will be reimbursed gradually as the wheat is sold.

If the situation becomes serious, the government will take over the grain crop to requisition the entire wheat supply, to be resold at a reasonable price.

SHIP CARRIES FOOD FOR HUNGRY BELGIANS

Athens, January 31.—(Via London.)—Prince George, of Serbia, arrived here today and left in the evening for Italy, where he will recuperate from the hardships of the battle. Despite his stay here, King Constantine conferred upon him the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Savior.

The cruiser Helle, recently sent to Portugal, has been ordered to leave there, as its presence no longer is required.

ROBBERS GET $15,000 BY RAIDING PAWNSHOP

New York, January 30.—About $15,000 worth of diamonds were stolen today from the pawnshop of Adolph Lewisohn in the upper East Side by two men who drove up in an automobile, held up the three clerks, revolver in hand, bound and gagged them, threw the jewels into suitcases and escaped in the waiting car.

The first of the three men entered the store ahead of his companions and began talking to one of the clerks. The other two bandits entered and snapped the spring lock on the door behind them. Then, as if by signal, all three drew revolvers, covered the clerks, bound them to the rear of the store, bound and gagged and tied three customers. In addition to the jewels the highwaymen took $170 in cash, but overlooked other cash in the safe.

About a quarter of an hour elapsed before one of the clerks freed himself, released the others and gave the alarm.

The estimate made of the loss covered only the jewels. The prices which were pawned, the proprietor said, and not the value of the articles was obtained. That, he thought, was much higher.

HOUSEWIVES ARE ASKED TO USE CHEAPER FLOUR

Chicago, January 30.—Housewives of Chicago will be asked to bake their own bread from a cheaper wheat flour, or from potatoes, if necessary, to combat the threatened advance in bread prices, Mrs. I. N. Von Holst, chairman of the market committee of the Clean Food club, announced today.

"White bread is a habit," she said, "women should declare a boycott against it if prices are raised, and use rye, corn, potato and brown bread instead."

FOUR MEN WOUNDED IN SHOOTING AFFRAY

Aberdeen, Miss., January 30.—George Nichols, an insurance agent, was killed and four other men were wounded here late tonight in a shooting affray, an outgrowth, it is said, of a minor quarrel several weeks ago between a relative of Nichols and Lamar Brewer, one of the men wounded. The shooting occurred on a prominent thoroughfare and was participated in by Nichols and Riley Honey on one side and Brewer and his three brothers on the other. Honey and three of the Brewers were wounded, none fatally. Fifteen shots were exchanged.

STEADY ADVANCE BY ALLIED TROOPS

Eye-witness Says Gains Are Slight But Regular—German Losses Very Heavy in the Recent Engagements.

Paris, January 30.—The following official "eye-witness" account of operations in France between January 16 and 28 was made public today by the war office:

"Our advance has been slight, but regular. Under cover of night, troops, protected by portable trenches, slip along the dunes and roads, rapidly improvising new defenses with sacks, baskets and cases filled with earth; for deep trenches are impossible in the sandy ground. The artillery supporting these operations has made many German trenches in the dunes untenable.

"The only infantry action around Ypres occurred at dawn January 26, when a German infantry company deployed 150 yards from our lines and charged in close order. Three companies followed each other short distances, supported by an entire brigade. This attack was instantly checked by the violent fire of our infantry, supported by artillery.

"The officer commanding the leading company was the first to fall, and only a few minutes the ground was covered with more than 300 German dead, and prisoners became entangled in the barbed wire and could not be released. Some of them, notwithstanding painful injuries from the barbs, tore themselves away, leaving behind the attack was to be supported by other forces which were dispersed by artillery fire.

Hundreds of Germans Dead.

"British infantry and French artillery repulsed a violent attack at La Bassee, which began on the night of the 24th. The attack was renewed and was again repulsed, the German losses being at least two battalions (2,000 men).

"From the region of Carvins there have been continuous artillery engagements, the most violent at Blangy, which was shelled by a heavy charge in force. The entire shock was received by three companies, which held their ground in spite of the terrible cannonading by three-inch, four-inch, six-inch and eight-inch guns, bombs and grenades. It became necessary to abandon the trenches of the La Folie-derie, which were destroyed by grenades. Part of our force succeeded in withdrawing, but many were killed or wounded and fell into the enemy's hands.

"Three companies from the second line of defense delivered several counter attacks with fire and bayonet until the lost ground was regained.

"In the region of Arras the fort of Ivlet at La Boisselle, being nearly continuous from January 16 to January 26. A counter-attack on January 18, said Emperor William had ordered occupation of this place in honor of the anniversary of the proclamation of the empire, and promised 700 marks for capture of a French machine gun. No machine gun was captured, but nine attacks were repulsed.

"The explosion of a depot of melanite permitted the enemy to capture a small section of our trenches, but they were driven out half an hour later, and the cemetery at La Boisselle was found to be full of German dead, including officers.

Lines Close Around Soissons.

"Around Soissons the enemy had gained no advantage since January 14. At Paissy the two adversaries are within twenty yards of each other and the same line of barbed wire serves as a defense for each side. Four companies of Germans attacked at this point, after the explosion of a mine, but were repulsed with heavy attack drove the enemy from the trenches. They left hundreds of dead and many wounded, and one was duty killed.

"There was a three days' battle at Berry-au-Bac, beginning with a bombardment on January 20, which demorralized four companies and permitted a successful attack by the infantry. The enemy installed himself in our advanced trenches and resisted our counter attack on January 21 from 8 o'clock until 11, when we captured one trench and took a number of prisoners. The other trench was held until 3 p. m., when it, too, fell into the same line of barbed wire serves as a defense for each side. Four companies of Germans attacked at this point, after the explosion of a mine, but were repulsed with heavy attack drove the enemy from the trenches. They left hundreds of dead and many wounded, and one was duty killed.

The other trench was held until 3 p. m., when it, too, fell into our hands, but immediately engaged in an artillery action lasting four hours. This was repulsed by a counter attack by the German infantry, which was repulsed with heavy losses.

"In the region of Perthes the Germans had already to reconquer the positions they had previously lost, but we maintained our position and made further gains. The Germans gained about 100 yards of our trenches, but in the counter attack that "In Le Pretre Wood, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, we have gained important successes, in spite of the fact that part of the ground has since been lost. The fighting in this region of Woevre was in the hands of the Germans. Foot by foot we have conquered nearly the whole of it. The fighting in this region has been particularly severe. In one section, on January 17, we captured several of the enemy's works in a counter attack. An entire German company was taken, including several officers.

French Gained 500 Yards.

On the 18th we gained 500 yards of the enemy's trenches, while on the 19th we made an advance of 1½ yards beyond these trenches. We picked up dead and wounded in sufficient numbers to indicate that the enemy's losses in these engagements were more than a battalion.

"Since the 19th the Germans have constantly attacked this point desperately, but have regained only a third of the ground lost.

"In the Vosges, Hartman-Weilerkopf was held by two sections in the beginning (A section numbers sixteen men.) Later these were reinforced by three companies. Here our chasseurs made a heroic stand, but this force was obliged to succor the small guard at the summit, which was furiously attacked by important forces of the enemy. In a heavy snow storm and fog, and unable to see more than ten yards ahead of them, this small detachment, regarding the situation as hopeless, fixed cartridges, set out on January 19, over the rocky declivity which was obstructed by thickets, to save their comrades.

"Two companies tried to reach the enemy's left, two others marched toward the right, but the Germans were strongly organized and the advance was slow. The men, slipping on the ice and falling back on accessory defenses, fought all day. From the summit the guard heard the firing, and in the evening their trumpets sounded a salute. Our men continued to gain ground on the 21st up the slope, but slowly. The chasseurs still held out. Assault after assault was delivered. Two officers fell at the head of their men, but in spite of the ice and barbed wire the force advanced.

"At nightfall nothing more was heard from the summit, and the handful of valiant defenders succumbed before help arrived. The relieving party now commands the summit of the heights, preventing any offensive movement by the enemy."

ITALIANS ARE PLEASED BY WILSON'S VETO

Rome, January 29.—President Wilson's veto of the immigration bill because of the literacy test has been received with satisfaction in Italy, one of the countries which would be chiefly affected if the measure became law. It is said, however, the Italian government does not object to the test in principle, if its application were made gradual, because it is believed it would tend to decrease illiteracy in this country.

CZAR NICHOLAS LEANS TOWARD PAN-SLAVISM

Russia's Ruler Declares War Must Be Carried on to Destroy Enemies of All Slavs.

Petrograd, January 30.—(Via London.)—The German submarine 21 today torpedoed the North Shields steamer Ben Cruachen, off this port. The entire crew, numbering twenty, was landed here.

The captain of the steamer says he was overtaken by the submarine this morning and ordered to leave his ship within ten minutes. Hardly had the crew got into the boats when a torpedo was fired and the steamer went down.

The Ben Cruachen, 1,978 tons register, belonged to the Morrison Shipping company. She was bound from the Orkney islands to Liverpool, with a general cargo.

Fleetwood is one of the principal fishing ports and shipping ports and watering places on the west coast.

ANOTHER STEAMER SENT TO BOTTOM.

London, January 31.—(1:45 a. m.)—At least one vessel besides the Ben Cruachen was sunk by the German submarine 21. This fact became known tonight when a trawler brought in the crew of eleven of the steamer Linda Blanche, sent to the bottom by the raider.

The Linda Blanche was on its way from Manchester to Belfast when the submarine appeared alongside. Officers boarded the vessel and ordered the crew to leave. As soon as the men of the Linda Blanche were in their boats the submarine moved close to the bridge and another to the forecastle. The mines were then exploded, destroying the vessel.

The Germans directed the British sailors where they should find a trawler, and the crew was picked up when the fishing boat was reached.

The trawler's skipper said that at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon he sighted another ship on which an explosion evidently had occurred. He was steering in the direction of this vessel when he picked up the Linda Blanche's boats. When he reached the point where he had seen the other ship he found no trace of wreckage, and believes it went down after he first sighted it.

Petrograd, January 30.—Emperor Nicholas has never expressed definitely a leaning toward Pan-Slavism, and his visit to M. Samarin, who is a son of the founder of the Pan-Slavist doctrine, is regarded here as of great significance.

Teutonic influences at court are quite naturally opposed to Pan-Slavism, and confirmation that this doctrine should be made to any extent one of the bases of future peace negotiations. Many Russian liberals heretofore have believed that Pan-Slavism diminished the influence of Russia in western European affairs and that it should not be permitted to influence foreign policy. Of late those liberals appear to have abandoned this view to some extent, making common cause with the Pan-Slavists in holding that the war should be continued to the end.

"I sincerely thank the Moscow government for its attitude toward me, which to me is a source of deep gratification. Let all sincere sons of the fatherland be united, as were our glorious ancestors, wholly believing that the Almighty will bless the efforts of our heroic warriors and the sufferings of all true sons of Russia, and give to the powerful Russian land to the peoples protected by us a brilliant future, destroying at one blow all the enemies of our related Slavs."

M. Samarin's telegram to the emperor follows:

"We hail your majesty's determination to carry on the war to a full victory, until your majesty's mighty will shall dictate the definite conditions which for Russia, in her position as a great world power, shall secure peace, which will guarantee her economic independence. The outcome of the war should revive Slavdom and keep for Russia her place in history as the liberator of downtrodden peoples."

SUBMARINE SINKS TWO BRITISH SHIPS

German Boat Operates on English West Coast Near Liverpool—English Ocean Trade Is Alarmed.

VILLA IS WOUNDED IN SHOOTING AFFAIR

Details Are Kept Secret, Shooting Occurred in Villa's Car in Railway Yards at Aguas Calientes.

El Paso, Tex., January 30.—General Francisco Villa was slightly wounded several days ago at Aguas Calientes in a shooting affair, details of which have been kept secret, according to a report brought here today directly from Villa's headquarters.

It had been rumored here that Villa had been seriously wounded by Colonel Rodolfo Fierro, his personal bodyguard. Those who came from Aguas Calientes said they had been unable to learn who shot Villa. The shooting occurred at his car in the railroad yards at about the time American Consul Silliman, at Mexico City, telegraphed Washington officials that he had received a report Villa had been seriously injured. For two days no definite word has been received of conditions at the industrial south of Aguas Calientes, nor of any important military movements.

SAN LUIS POTOSI TAKEN BY CARRANZA.

Laredo, Texas, January 30.—San Luis Potosi is again in the hands of Carranza forces, having been occupied yesterday without a battle. The fall of Monterey, also held by Villa forces, is reported imminent.

San Luis Potosi is about 200 miles south of Monterey. Its fall was said to be a result of Gutierrez's defection from the Villa-Zapata combination. Its garrison was composed of both Villa and Gutierrez supporters.

General Blanco and General Robles, commanding 10,000 Carranza troops, were ordered to attack when General de la Garza, said to be a Gutierrez sympathizer, surrendered the city unconditionally, renouncing allegiance to Villa and allying himself with the Carranza party. It is reported his forces will go south to help in a campaign against Queretaro.

Whether any Villa supporters in San Luis Potosi refused to join in the surrender is not known here.

THREE REVOLUTIONS GOING IN MEXICO.

Washington, January 30.—State department advices today reported the movements of the chiefs and armies of Mexico, as follows:

General Obregon rules at Mexico City in the name of General Carranza, who is at Vera Cruz. General Villa is at Aguas Calientes and General Zapata at Cuernavaca. The whereabouts of Eulalio Gutierrez, provisional chief of the executive power in the north, are unknown.

Three movements, independent of each other, are in the field. Carranza, at the head of the larger part of the original constitutionalist forces, will remain at Vera Cruz, which probably will continue as the capital of his government. Zapata's forces said to be working in harmony with Villa, menace the line of communications between Vera Cruz and Mexico City. Villa is reported preparing to move from Aguas Calientes to attack Gutierrez forces at Queretaro.

In the north Carranza forces hold San Luis Potosi and are threatening Monterey, held by General Felipe Angeles, Villa's chief lieutenant. Dispatches from Carranza agents here say that Generals Robles, Iocio Blanco and Agustin Beneza have fled from Mexico City with Gutierrez, have joined the Carranza movement, but nothing is known of the intentions of Gutierrez himself.

Although the siege of Puebla is said to have been abandoned by Zapata, his forces still occupy the farthest outlying suburbs of Mexico City, according to state department reports.

ZAPATA FORCES BEATEN NEAR MEXICO CITY.

Mexico City, January 30.—The Zapata forces have been defeated and driven back from Hacienda near Tacubaya (a suburb of this city). The Carranza adherents are still pursuing the defeated men. Villa's forces remains quiet.

General Obregon issued a decree this afternoon declaring void all paper money issued during the Villa regime.

"It's pretty hard to sleep on an empty stomach," remarked Hungry Higgins sadly to the hustling farmer's wife.

"Why don't you try sheep?" she replied sympathetically. "Why don't you turn over and sleep on your back for a little while? Ye hain't wore it out lyin' on it, hev ye?"

FOUR BIG FEATURES AT GRAND THIS WEEK

"The Price He Paid" Presented Tomorrow—A Drama of Unusual Strength.

Four big features, each of them a star production, will be shown at the Grand this week. The program follows:

Monday and Tuesday, "The Price He Paid," a drama of unusual strength, based on the celebrated poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in which there is interwoven one of the most serious problems that confronts the world today. There is a suggestion of "Damaged Goods" in the story and critics who have seen the feature pronounce it one of the greatest exponents of a social problem that must be worked out sooner or later that has ever been seen on a motion picture screen.

Wednesday and Thursday will be shown a double bill, "The Coveted Heritage," and "The Tip Off." The former deals with a sensational kidnapping by a band of gypsies of a young girl who subsequently becomes heiress to an immense fortune and the efforts of friends to locate her.

"The Tip Off" is a story of police methods and crooks and reveals the inside workings of the police court and of the most nefarious gang of underworld characters located anywhere in the country.

Friday and Saturday will be shown the great drama, "The Naked Truth," with the famous Lyda Borelli in the leading role. This is a French story of life in the Latin quarter, adapted from the famous novel of the same name by Henry Bataille.

The Grand is observing its tenth weekly anniversary under the management of Arthur S. Hyman and his associate, F. T. Barbour and as a special attraction it is offering this week four of the biggest single features ever shown in a motion picture theater.

"TIPPERARY" IN PICTURES FILMED BY PATHE CO.

Pictures put into song are not a new thing, but songs put into pictures are still a novelty. Pathe has released a three-part film called "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," which is based upon the tremendously popular song of the same name. An unusually strong feature in connection with the picture is the fact that it readily lends itself to singing from beginning to end—in fact, the picture itself will be sung by most audiences.

Two Irishmen, one a nationalist and the other a unionist, are bitter rivals for the hand of a beautiful Tipperary girl. The girl's father favors Mike, the nationalist. The girl herself leans toward Paddy, the unionist. War breaks out and both men drop their differences and enlist in the same regiment, which is ordered to the front.

Later on an opportunity offers itself to Mike to play the hero. Paddy and the colonel have taken refuge from the enemy in the loft of a stable. Mike, hotly chased by the pursuing forces, hides in the same stable, being ignorant of the presence of the others. When he discovers in two comrades he at once insists on leaving, saying that as the enemy saw only one man enter, if they see that man leave, they will not make a further search.

On leaving the building he is shot down with the song "Tipperary" on his lips. Paddy is invalided home he is now with the girl he loves.

"It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" will undoubtedly make a lasting impression on every motion picture patron, as the red blood coursing through their veins will permit them to draw an imaginary picture of the brave fellows now in the trenches in that far-off world.

PRIZE STORY FILM AT SAVOY WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday, of this coming week, there will be presented at the Savoy the two-reel photo-play which recently won The Moving Picture Stories Magazine-Universal $100 prize contest. The title of the prize-winning play is "The Girl of the Secret Service," written by Miss Florence M. Higgins, of the Hotel Royal Palm, Miami, Fla. Francis Ford has produced the play and Grace Cunard enacts the principal role. The story has been confined to two reels and will be released under the Gold Seal brand.

Miss Higgins recently received a check for $100 from the Universal as a reward for her initial effort which, in the judgment of a selected jury, excelled in strength and novelty of plot $4,000 other scripts which were submitted. Miss Higgins is delighted that Grace Cunard plays the leading role, and that she has a great personal interest in the staging of the play from her original story, which Miss Cunard herself scenarioized.

J. L. Marionette, local manager of the Atlanta Consolidated Film and Supply company, has requested a special review for Miss Higgins in Miami, and it is now being arranged in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Royal Palm, where Miss Higgins can invite all her friends. By the way, this is the first story she ever wrote for the camera.

Miss Higgins is now writing a photo-play with the great European war as its subject.

Tomorrow (Monday), at the Savoy, the ninth episode of "The Master Key" will be shown. It promises to be more thrilling than any so far shown.

SPECIAL EDISON DRAMA AT VAUDETTE FRIDAY

"Oh, Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," a special two-reel Edison drama, will be shown at the Vaudette Friday, February 5. It is a story of human interest that will strongly appeal to Vaudette patrons.

Warren Dean was a musical composer and that was mostly what led to his downfall. His father, disliking the line of his musical vocation, drove him from home. Warren left a melody, which he had just completed, when he was thrown out upon his own resources. After his departure the father regretted his act, and the mother, unable to find her son, found some comfort in putting the words, "Oh, Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," to Warren's music.

Warren teamed up with Zelda Wade, a singer, and finally, married her. His health failed, and, although both were without funds and work, she, in some unknown manner, managed to send him to the country for a year, where he regained his health. Returning to the city, he discovered that his wife has been accepting money from an admirer of hers in order to save her husband's life. In a rage, Warren left her and tried to forget the fact that his wife was untrue to him. He became a habitual drunkard, and finally wound up in jail.

Meanwhile his father died, and his mother was forced to earn her own livelihood playing an accordion on the streets. Zelda, now a headliner, meeting the lady, took her into her room. Zelda learned of her aged guest's relationship and took care of her as if she were her own mother. The mother taught Zelda the Wandering Boy song, which Zelda made a great hit. One day Warren, now an extra, was called upon to play the song, because he thought that she was the owner of his downfall. Arriving at her house, he learned of her kindness to his mother, and of her terrible sacrifice for him. Thoughts of revenge disappeared, and Zelda again came back into his heart as of old.

LEW FIELDS ON SCREEN SOON TO BE RELEASED

The greatest trouble I have is getting pictures fast enough to supply the demand, said H. E. Stahler, manager of the World Film corporation, when seen in his office in the Forsyth building. The calls I have had for our recent release, Lillian Russell, in "Wildfire," far exceeds anything I have ever experienced since I have been in the film business. The recent presentation for two days in this city at the Montgomery theater proved what a strong attraction it is. The houses were packed to the doors during the entire afternoon and evening. Another picture which we will shortly release we will also be a winner in every sense of the word. I refer to Lew Fields in "Old Dutch." Even now I am having requests for it, and, knowing that it is produced without regard to expense and provided with an all-star cast, can promise the people of this section that it will be all that is possible to be in the way of a motion picture production. It will be ready for release on February 14.

Motion Picture Acting Now Taught in Atlanta

Edwin Bower Hesser, one of the well-known motion picture producers, arrived in Atlanta yesterday to arrange to take a series of high-class features from his own scenarios. Mr. Hesser was in the city a few weeks ago, and when he took an auto trip to beauty spots in the vicinity, he decided that this locality would be ideal for motion picture production. He also visited the beautiful women of the city, and as feminine beauty plays such a large part in making motion pictures successful, he decided to use local talent as much as possible. In order to develop the necessary technique, he decided to establish a school of motion picture acting, in conjunction with the producing company. The offices of the Hesser school of motion picture acting, at 111 will be called, are to be on the sixth floor of the Forsyth building, and Frank Wellie Day, of this city, will be the secretary and business manager of the institution. To a representative of The Constitution Mr. Hesser stated that all the classes would be under his supervision, and that all pupils who developed acting ability would be used in the picture productions, which will commence late in February.

"Motion picture acting," said Mr. Hesser, "is the best paid profession in the world, and has far more opportunities for good players than there are people to fill them. Not long ago a well-known director was forced to search six weeks before he could find a girl beautiful enough to interpret the part which he wished to fill, and he finally secured a star from the legitimate stage to play the part.

"I am going to solve the difficulty for my own productions by training a certain number of people who display ability. In the school we will teach every branch of the art, including theory, make-up, expression, emotionalism, and every other point necessary to a player. Both men and women will be admitted.

"All the productions which I now plan are from my own pen, and the first one will probably be 'The Royal Pretender,' a five-reel feature. 'Romantic Rhoda,' a serial comedy, will next occupy my attention, and I have several other scenarios which I hope to produce in the vicinity of Atlanta within the next few months. This producing will be in behalf of the Hesser Motion Picture corporation, of which I am president and producing director. For years I have been writing and

At the Montgomery.

Mary Pickford, the world's screen idol, appears in the later Famous Players Film company's production, in a five-part artistic and elaborate film adaptation of the universally popular romantic drama, "Mistress Nell," one of the most successful plays of dramatic history, by George C. Hazelton, Jr., which was for many years the favorite characterization of Henrietta Crosman. The subject is the current Paramount feature at the Montgomery and will be chief attraction at this house tomorrow.

Manager of Grand.

It will be of interest to the many friends and busines acquaintances of L. T. Briers to know that he has been given the position of house manager of the Grand theater. Mr. Briers is well known in motion picture circles of Atlanta, and has had wide experience in this line of the business.

DRIVES LOCOMOTIVE IN BLAZING FOREST

A prairie fire, the burning of the old Marks mansion at Leona Heights, N. J., the race of a railroad engine, piloted by King Baggot, through a blazing forest and a strike riot are but a few of the features in "The Millionaire Engineer," a two-reel railroad drama which will be shown at the Alpha theater Thursday, February 4.

Extensive preparations were made before this film was taken. Three companies of Universal actors went to Fort Lee, N. J., to burn down the Marks mansion, which has stood as the oldest landmark, near Fort Lee, for over 150 years. Many delays were encountered before the requisite permits to burn the house were granted. Then another long delay because of bad weather followed.

When the house had been ignited King Baggot rushed in through the blazing doors to save Arlie Pretty. The fire became so intense that his clothing caught fire and had to be extinguished with blankets. On the other side of the house Ben Wilson rescued Frances Nelson from the second story window. Again the heat nearly caused a serious accident, for Wilson slipped while about ten feet from the ground, falling with Miss Nelson. He recovered quickly and bore her to safety. Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers fared no better at the rear of the building for, while lifting Miss Theby, a pane of glass, cracked by the heat, fell upon them both and cut Myers' arm severely. A crowd of more than a thousand people watched the burning of the mansion and cheered wildly at the rescues.

At Alamo No. 2

This week the management of Alamo No. 2 has in store for their patrons a particularly fine selection of pictures. On Monday another Alice Joyce feature, entitled "The Swindler," will be shown, as well as "Cabman Kate," a Vitagraph comedy on Tuesday. The program includes a Broadway Star feature with an all-star cast, including Chas. Fitzgerald and her famous wink, and Julia Swayne Gordon. On Thursday, "The District Attorney's Conscience" will be offered. This is a three-reel Lubin drama of great strength, and fully up to the Alamo standard. In addition to these mentioned, there are good pictures scheduled for every day. Jimmy Flynn, the clever singer, will be on hand every day with new songs.

Much Business Transacted At Executive Board Meeting

The midwinter meeting of the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs was held in Atlanta on January 23.

Thirty members were present, representing every section of the state and many departments of work.

The opening remarks of the president, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, told of the splendid condition of the federation and the good work planned by the new officers and chairmen. There are three new districts, presidents and eight new chairmen enlisted since the Albany meeting as follows: Mrs. A. C. Holt, Albany, president second district; Mrs. Bruce Jones, Macon, press; seventh district; Mrs. W. E. Sheppard, Madison, president eighth district. The chairmen, Mrs. Edwina Wood, Columbus, conservation; Mrs. Clifford Smith, Lafrange, library extension; Mrs. Hugh E. Inderwick, Madison, girl scholarships; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, College Park, music; Miss Nellie Peters Black, Atlanta, program; Mrs. Frank Fleming, Augusta, resolutions; Mrs. Hal G. Hastings, Decatur, country life, Mrs. J. P. McGovern, Atlanta, good roads.

Through Mrs. Fitzpatrick a book, "Parliamentary Usage for Women's Clubs," was presented to the State Federation by the author, Mrs. Alice A. Fox. This manual of parliamentary law and practice is designed for the use of all clubs and societies.

Each district president presented her work and stated time and place for the annual district meetings.

Mrs. W. Shepherd Jones recently appointed chairman of girl scholarships, reported all the scholarships filling satisfactorily, but that many more needed.

Twelve business scholarships have been secured by Mrs. W. R. Price-Smith and she has applications for more.

For Humane Education.

An appeal was read by Mrs. Bolling Jones asking the co-operation of the Federation in the work for humane education. Authority was given the president to create a subcommittee on the education department and appoint a chairman of humane education.

The chairman of press committee earnestly asked the interest and sympathy of the clubs in the subject of international relations. Urging each district president to set apart an afternoon for the discussion of what woman can do in organized work for the advancement of world peace.

A most important resolution was presented by Mrs. Newell Sanders, as the result of her recent visit to the agricultural meeting in Athens and later conference with the state board of agriculture.

"Whereas, the officers of the state agricultural department, the State Agricultural college and the State Chamber of Commerce have shown a desire to have the women's clubs of Georgia co-operate with them and their concerted effort to be of use to the farmers of Georgia in the present crisis of affairs.

"Be it resolved, That the executive board does hereby heartily indorse this movement and will, through each district president, endeavor to have a large audience at each meeting of the proposed agricultural rallies, and will ask that women are asked to speak for this association at each meeting.

"Be it resolved, That the women of each district in which the meetings are held shall be asked to provide a basket dinner for those who attend in order to promote sociability, and to induce a large number to be present through personal visits and the aid of the local press."

Receives Indorsement.

Mrs. Black spoke for this resolution with her heart and soul and received the enthusiastic, appreciative indorsement of all present. Mrs. Walter Latham asked the indorsement of the board to the similar resolution already adopted by the state presidents of the federation, the U. D. C. and the D. A. R.

Mrs. Black stated the rallies to be held in each congressional district will be announced very soon.

Chairman of literature, Mrs. W. C. Spiker, brought the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That the Georgia Federation of clubs indorse the movement of the general federation to honor the memory of the Frances Squires Potter by doing all in its power to restore the Bible to its rightful place in literature and study it as a literary master piece."

Mrs. Spiker stated that she would start this year a course in "How to Read the Bible" in the Atlanta Woman's club, and will furnish programs to the clubs throughout the state wishing to take up the study of the Bible.

Civics and library extension work were discussed by Mrs. Logan Pitts and Mrs. Clifford Smith.

Mrs. Hugh Willet presented the Talulah Falls school interests and Mrs. H. B. Wey the students' aid.

Many interesting reports were made for the next annual convention in Savannah. Mrs. Walter Black will have charge of the program.

Resolutions presented from Mrs. M. M. Parks' report as follows:

Home Economics Resolutions.

"Resolved, That the club women of the state be urged to co-operate heartily with the work that is being done in home economics in the schools of our state and to co-operate with the authorities in raising the standard and emphasizing the practical and economic phases of the work.

"Resolved, That the georgia club women urge the teaching of home economics in every grammar and high school in the state; and that inasmuch as this state supports a public school system it is made equally efficient. Cash and manual work has no knowledge of scientific home-making and economy.

"Resolved, That the Georgia club women of the state of Georgia do hereby heartily indorse this movement and will, through each district president, endeavor to have a large audience at each meeting of the proposed agricultural rallies, and will ask that women are asked to speak for this association at each meeting.

"Be it resolved, That the women of each district in which the meetings are held shall be asked to provide a basket dinner for those who attend in order to promote sociability, and to induce a large number to be present

CLUB REPORTS

Albany's Woman's Club.

Usually speaking to entertain a state federation is so great an undertaking that interest in regular club work is immediately thereafter. A reaction which has often been noted and consequently followed by the club.

I want to say, however, that this has not been the case in the Albany Woman's club for our meetings are full of interest and a lovely spirit of unity prevails. We agreed soon after the federation convention to change our constitution in regard to a slight fine of 10 cents for absence from a regular meeting by any of our members; also to try to have such interesting meetings as to repay members for their attendance. We have had a splendid attendance of our large membership at every interesting meetings all fall. The president enterprise and efficiency of the club has started and launched successfully a most needed association of charities of Albany. This was started and effected by the presidents of the Woman's club, Mrs. W. C. Holt, and the able members of the executive board. The different committees named from members of the Woman's club and an executive board formed from a member of each denomination, selected from the clubs and all of the members of the different churches.

This executive board met, elected its officers and took charge of the work of the associated charities of Albany. A unique plan of the board was to have one of the pastors as acting secretary each month, who, with the help of the efficient investigating committee, dispenses the charity of the city without waging a regular campaign. The entire work of the Albany Associated Charities is altogether a work of love.

This enterprise, mothered as it were by the Woman's club, and fathered as it is by the citizens of Albany, has proven a wonderful success, and the Woman's club is very proud of the part it originated and launched its activities. We have plans for interesting work in the different departments for the club year.

Perry Junior Civic League.

The Junior Civic Improvement club at Perry was organized in December, 1913. We had fourteen charter members. The officers are as follows: Miss Ruth Gilbert, president; Miss Catherine Duncan, vice president; Miss Katherine Holtzclaw, secretary; Miss Jane Cater, treasurer.

Our first work was to redeem a beautiful old oak tree, which had been for years the pride of our town. It is twenty feet in circumference, about two hundred and fifty feet high, and its huge branches are perfectly symmetrical. It has been pronounced by many tourists the most beautiful, perfectly formed tree in the south. We saved the tree and fallen into a state of decay, and it was necessary that some work be done on it immediately, else it would have been beyond any help.

Soon after our organization the members of our club got up a supper, and it took only a week for us to work this up, and it was a most novel and attractive entertainment. We used the city auditorium for the "lady grounds," separated the booths with curtains for the "side shows," sold red lemonade, popcorn, candy, hot chocolate, confections, etc. Our "brass band" was composed of the younger boys and girls. They played on combs, toy harps and flutes and beat tin pans. This was a most amusing feature.

We made in all that night $32.50.

Then, in February, we gave a play, "Up to Freddie." This was quite a success.

Later in March we found a reliable tree surgeon who worked for a reasonable sum. We had our tree fixed for $25.25. We have now in our treasury $21.25.

We are planning to build an auditorium, and we hope to increase this sum so that we may install electric lights in the new building.

We are expecting new members this years and we are going to work with renewed energy so that we may accomplish more this year than last.

EXPOSITION WILL HAVE SPLENDID ART EXHIBIT

The Docent service will be an interesting feature of the educational side of the art exhibit in the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco, and Mrs. Agnes Wells Williams, chairman of the art department of the general federation, has been appointed "Grand Docent," and will be present in the galleries to lecture about the paintings.

Displayed in three galleries will be the largest exhibit of American paintings and sculpture ever assembled under one roof. The American loan collection alone comprises one thousand 250 canvases, covering the development of painting in America.

A loan collection owned by American citizens promises to be of especial interest and furnish examples of almost any master or school of art.

American artists will be shown by 1,500 small bronzes, 150 models and 100 monumental pieces.

Happily, the exhibits of contemporaneous foreign painting were arranged before the war broke out. In most instances, be carried out as planned.

WAYCROSS WOMEN SEND BIG BOX FOR BELGIUM

A box containing over 750 packages was sent by the Waycross women to aid the Belgian sufferers. Among the generous contributions were 384 cans condensed milk, 12 cans corn, 12 cans canned tomatoes, 3 packages of hominy, 3 packages oat flakes, 16 packages pearl barley, 26 one-pound cans baked beans, 12 packages macaroni, 1 wheat cereal, 3 boxes rice, 34 pounds sugar, 5 boxes biscuits, 16 cans pork and beans, 6 cans hominy, 12 cans Campbell's soup, 3 cans spinach, 9 cans salmon, 9 cans tomatoes, 2 cans roast beef, 6 pounds Teller's tea, 10 pounds coffee, 37 garments for babies, 6 boys' suits, 12 pairs socks, 12 boys' overalls, 50 packages salt and $23.50 in money, with which other valuable purchases were made.

PELHAM WOMAN'S CLUB GIVES KITCHEN SHOWER

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's club of Pelham was in the nature of a kitchen shower, compliMentary to the president, Mrs. H. Arnold, who will soon go to housekeeping. The many useful articles given showed the affection of the club members for their leader.

Illness Is Preventable.

Dr. Irving Fisher in his report on national vitality states that at all times in the United States about 3,000,000 persons are seriously ill.

Fully half of this illness is preventable.

BETHANY SCHOOL MADE SPLENDID RECORD IN 1914

Bethany is a little school in Morgan county that was the second in the state to be nationalized. The federation is very proud of the Improvement club of this school, which joined just before the last convention. Mrs. Ed Wood, the president, and Mrs. Ben Harris are untiring in their efforts for the progress of the school and club. Since school commenced on the 28th of September, Mr. Hastings has given the school about a dozen beautiful rose plants. Each pupil has been presented with a first-class pencil. They make canning club for the girls and a corn club for the boys have been organized. B. B. Hunt, of Morgan county, a staunch friend, of N. G. Netson, who has done much for the Morgan county schools, kindly offers Bethany a variety of beautiful plants for the school grounds.

Many other things are being done which show that Bethany school is determined not to go back in her past record.

Extravagance of Ignorance.

Home economics for the club women should be an interesting study rather than a vague dealing with objectless generalities. Sanitation does not mean everlasting scrubbing, either does the science of dietetics mean a study beyond our comprehension. It is this that minimizes the drudgery of housework; knowing how to do it. It is the extravagance of ignorance is everywhere exemplified in poorly-balanced meals, over-furnished houses and gorgeous raiment out of proportion to the investment.—Selected.

Infold our land from main to main,
Shout Freedom, ring the glad refrain and plain;
Proclaim the right of Peace to reign,

D. A. R. Chapter Reports

Lanahassee Chapter.

The Lanahassee chapter, D. A. R., of Buena Vista, held its regular January meeting at the lovely home of the regent, Mrs. E. B. Clements. The result of an election of officers was: Mrs. E. B. Clements, vice regent, Mrs. Lawrence Williams; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. B. Manley; recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Stokes; treasurer, Mrs. Jesse Wyatt; registrar, Mrs. Augusta L. Stokes; historian, Mrs. Ed Wyatt.

After the routine of business was dispatched a short program followed that dealt with the early history of Georgia—times of adventure, danger and hardships. Only wise men and men of heroic mold could have led Georgia, as he led her through those early chaotic days—when the wary Indians desperately stayed on the warpath to block the path of civilization.

The Lanahassee chapter discussed plans for a party, to be given in February with games and other contests will furnish entertaining amusement for the assembled guests.

At the close of the meeting the hostess served an elegant luncheon to the members of the chapter, who were seated at a large round table, beautifully decorations of ferns, its polished surface radiant over-laid with the guests partook of the lavish hospitality so charmingly dispensed by the regent.

The dining-room was splendid in its rich furnishing of rare mahogany, the room enhanced in beauty by groups of graceful palms.

The chapter will be represented at the conference in Atlanta next month.

The historian of the Lanahassees has just completed a genealogical collection county which the state historian warmly commends.

The history of the chapter is well filled; there are capable officers and a charming membership, which includes Tallassee chapter, D. R. A., sees dawning for the year 1915 a bright era of useful prosperity. ANNA M. MIMS, Buena Vista, Ga., January 26, 1915.

Colonel William Few Chapter.

The January meeting of the Colonel William Few chapter, D. A. R., of this man, was held at the home of the regent, Mrs. L. L. Williams. The weather could scarcely have been worse, but there were a few present who heartily echoed the sentiment of James Whitcomb Riley's "God send rain, why rain's my choice." The early arrivals bore braved the rain and mud and attended this first meeting of the new year.

One of the most interesting features of the afternoon was the report of the committee on the "Welfare of Women and Children," concerning the work done by them at Christmas time. This committee's two heads, the Christmas carols and the distribution of "Santa Claus" bags among the children of the needy.

About seventy-five young people had been invited by these ladies to sing the carols, and on the night of Christmas Eve they were divided into two companies, one singing through the principal streets on the east side and the other on the west side of town. Their fresh young voices sounded sweet and clear—and there still exist at the end of the dear old Christmas hymns, and the carols were much enjoyed and appreciated by the townspeople.

The other work of this committee probably resulted in more genuine happiness than we can estimate, in homes where misfortune and the unusual financial stringency had caused much worry and distress. Shortly before the holidays this committee made and distributed among the members of the chapter and a few interested friends, bags of white net, tied with red ribbon, each to be filled with Christmas goodies and toys. In the meantime they secured the names and addresses of children in Eastman and Cochran, and these were also stocked by Santa Claus, many of these names being furnished by our local physicians, who, of course, know of the needy. Each package, all generously filled, were collected by the committee and sent to their various destinations, distributed, and each carried with it to the recipient the love and good wishes of the William Few chapter.

The patriotic education committee is another very active committee. They together with the flag committee, are responsible for the large flag that floats proudly over the school building. The patriotic education committee has offered a gold medal to the sixth grade history class for this year (they also gave one last year), and have offered a copy of Mrs. Foster's revolutionary reader to the child writing the best essay on some subject connected with Georgia's early days.

The flag committee, with enthusiastic leadership of Mrs. W. B. Daniel, is planning to compile a history of Dodge county and it is hoped that this will be finished this spring.

A committee has plans on foot to combine a book shower with the observance of Washington's birthday, thus providing a delightful social occasion and at the same time gaining the nucleus for a useful D. A. R. library.

We have a very efficient regent in Mrs. Williams, and our membership is active and enthusiastic, the meetings nearly always being well attended. The meetings combine business with social and literary features, the business always coming first on the program. For this year our literary work is the study of the history and development of Georgia.

Altogether we feel that we have some reason to be proud of the Colonel William Few chapter and consider it a pretty vigorous and thriving young-

History of Dolly Madison Chapter

The Dolly Madison chapter, Children of the American Revolution, was organized May 16, 1899, with twenty-four charter members, by Mrs. William Dickson, now Mrs. Tyler.

Miss Martha Fort Brown was elected president, and threw herself heart and soul into the work. Under her the society flourished continually, and its meetings still form delightful memories for those who were then members. Various contributions were made to Continental hall and other patriotic work, and the convention reports from the Dolly Madison chapter were filled with praise. After the long illness of the fragile president, Miss Brown, the chapter remained quiescent during two years, and when death came to her there seemed no one to take up her work, and so the members slipped by until finally the word came from Washington that the Dolly Madison chapter, Children of the American Revolution, would forfeit her charter and name if they were not reorganized by November, 1906. Mrs. Percy Sage, then vice president general of the Children of the American Revolution, busied herself to find some one to reorganize this society.

Mrs. Harvie Jordan was appointed president and reorganized the society November 3, 1906.

The old members paid their back dues, which placed them in good standing. This, together with dues from the promised new members who could not attend, gave Dolly Madison a fund to engagement that at least the name and charter would be saved and a hope for better things in the future. Suffrage Tea Room Opens.

A tea room opened this afternoon under the auspices of the Atlanta and DeKalb counties' branch of the Equal Suffrage Party of Georgia at the headquarters.

Judging from the success of this afternoon the tea room will prove delightful in every way and meet a need long felt by the workers at the headquarters.

Mrs. Wilcox, of New York, who has recently visited Atlanta for a week, will charge this afternoon. She served the tea from a table in the reception room, which was most hospitable and comfortable in every way. On the center of a little table in a corner a bright brass kettle steamed away, and in different parts of the room parties of ladies sipped tea.

Among those entertaining their friends were Mrs. Frank Neely, Mrs. Henry Peebles, Mrs. J. J. Goodman, Jr., Mrs. C. E. Caverly and Mrs. Charles Boynton.

Reception.

The reception given Wednesday afternoon by the Atlanta branch and officers of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage league, at the Hotel Winecoff, was one of the largest events of the week, several hundred calling during the hours.

The receiving party was composed of the officers of the state and city, Mrs. Sanford Bennett, state president, Mrs. Frances Boykin Whitehead, Mrs. Eugene Mitchell, Mrs. Elizabeth Meriwether, Miss Laura Berrien, Mrs. W. Kennedy Jack Hungerford, Mrs. Ethel Merk, Mrs. Adell G. Helmer, Mrs. Lollie Belle Wylie, Mrs. C. C. Barnes, Mrs. T. Moody, Miss Marion Morris, Mrs. M. M. Sams.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was the presentation to the state president, Mrs. Sanford Bennett, by Mrs. Elizabeth McCarthy, in behalf of the executive board of the league, of an ebony gavel, inlaid with gold, as a token of appreciation of their former city president. Mrs. Whitehead responded with a charming speech of thanks.

Miss Viola Barill gave a number of clever impersonations of child life. Miss Barill is a graduate of the American University of Art, of New York, and an artist of rare ability.

Mrs. Eugene Mitchell gave a splendid talk on "Why She Was a Suffragist."

Mrs. Frances Whitesides explained how the negro woman's vote would be managed.

Misses Epple and Joan Clark served punch and assisted in the entertainment of the guests.

On the Other Side.

Women proved themselves so intelligent and cognizant of the burdens of their sex and so respected their own sphere in life that they influenced the men in Ohio, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota to refer to their voter to defeat suffrage. Had there been no women in Utah, Nevada and Montana these two sparsely settled states, which are claimed by the suffragists, also would not be penalized to-day as monumentalities which have said "no, emphatically no," to the suffrage "invasion."

Former Senator Frank G. Cannon, of Utah, who has inaugurated a nation-wide campaign against Mormonism, has written a book entitled "Travel Itself with polygamous wives," and that the Mormon church "exercises political control in three states—Utah, Idaho and Wyoming—holding the balance of power." Mr. Cannon denies this. Mr. Cannon's interviewer, recalling that Utah was the first state to enfranchise women, Idaho since 1896 and Wyoming since 1869, asked "How about the women?"

"They enter into their relations sincerely as a consecration for the Mormon church. Exercises political control in three states—Utah, Idaho and Wyoming—holding the balance of power." Mr. Cannon's interviewer, recalling that Utah was the first state to enfranchise women, Idaho since 1896 and Wyoming since 1869, asked "How about the women?"

"They enter into their relations sincerely as a consecration for the Mormon church. Exercises political control of them told the whole story in a sentence: 'They catch us by religion,' she said to me; 'they hold us by our children.'"

"A Long Long Way to Woman's Suffrage."

At a dinner given by the Boston Bar association at the Copley Plaza hotel, Boston, Mass., the following song was sung to the tune of "Tipperary:"

We're a long way from Woman Suffrage,
We're a long way to go;
It's a long way from Woman Suffrage
To the White House, I know.
What they'd do we cannot know.
Good-bye both Dakotas.
Farewell Montana.
We're a long, long way from Woman Suffrage
And we'll not tempt fate.

Mrs. Barrett's Conversion.

Mrs. Katie Waller Barrett, Washington, D. C., who is now a well known and beloved in Atlanta, and who is now national president of the Florence Crittenton missions, made an address in Roanoke, Va., a few days ago before the Virginia Equal Suffrage league, and said:

"I am a converted suff. Twenty-five years ago I opposed the movement, through ignorance and through ignorance alone. Mrs. Barrett said that she had seen the effect of equal suffrage in the states where women vote and added that she could testify to its good results. She said that the Rev. Dr. Spencer who works for the ballot, the greatest power he has, and Mrs. Barrett paid a warm tribute to the splendid men who are aiding in the cause. Suffragettes, she said, are cranks, and especially in Atlanta, find it comparatively easy to convert the men to the suffrage movement and to convince them of the injustice of denying to women the right to vote.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, the president, Mrs. Amelia Woodall, made the statement that almost one-half of the members of that organization were men.

A class in citizenship has been formed by the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association. A series of lectures on political economy and on ethics will be given by prominent club women, lawyers and jurists of the city. Mrs. Mary Latimer Whitehead, who holds the ablest students in political science, will give the first lecture on next Wednesday afternoon at the Hotel Ansley. This lecture will be free and open to the public.

The building of the tabernacle is progressing under way, and in the tabernacle will be a room with every comfort for the ladies, where he may be "checked" during service hours."

Ample time has been assigned by Mr. Alexander to seat approximately 15,000 persons. There have already volunteered 1,000 ushers, and in the event that more than 1,500 enroll with the tabernacle committee they will be trained for them in the seats directly fronting the platform and will assist in making a child happy and comfortable. There will be a competent nurse in charge of the room, and she will see to it that the youngsters are kept amused while their mothers are attending services in the tabernacle.

"The idea of the nursery plan," said Dr. Hull, "is to assure mothers wanting to attend the afternoon services and the meetings for women, that they will not be disturbed because they have youngsters to worry about. We want to temporarily relieve the mothers of the responsibility, and in the tabernacle will be a room with every comfort for the baby, where he may be 'checked' during service hours."

To Check Babies While Mothers Attend Services of Revival

There will be several features in connection with the operation of the tabernacle, on Peachtree street, above Ellis, that will be of peculiar interest to mothers. One of these will be the "check room" for babies and the other a semi-circular choir loft, designed by Charles M. Alexander especially for the Atlanta revivals.

The building of the tabernacle is progressing under way, and in the tabernacle will be a room with every comfort for the ladies, where he may be "checked" during service hours."

Ample time has been assigned by Mr. Alexander to seat approximately 15,000 persons. WOMEN MEET MONDAY TO PLAN FOR REVIVAL Business Women of City Urged to Attend Conference at Y. M. C. A. Rooms.

The opening gun in the evangelistic campaign among women of Atlanta that will be waged in connection with the Chapman-Alexander revivals to be held from February 14, will be fired Monday at noon when there will be held in the Young Women's Christian association rooms, a luncheon and then a mass meeting of business women.

Under the direction of Mrs. Archibald Davis, chairman of the general committee, a canvass is being made of all the offices and shops in Atlanta, and every business woman is being urged to attend the meeting and enlist in the campaign of soul-saving among their fellow-workers. While the revivals are under way in the tabernacle being built on Peachtree street, north of Ellis, there will be special meetings conducted in various parts of the city especially for women. Mrs. J. Wilbur Chapman, Mrs. Charles M. Alexander and Mrs. Ralph C. Norton, wives of the evangelists in the party, will address these gatherings, which will be held in private homes, in churches, in factories and shops and at the tabernacle.

WESTERN RAILROADS TO BOOST ATLANTA IN NEW LITERATURE

When the Frisco and Santa Fe open their new passenger service between New Orleans to San Francisco Saturday, February 6, the entire Southeastern territory will be invited to participate in the benefit from tourist travel now enjoyed by Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and the middle gateways to the west.

The Santa Fe and Frisco, in a joint, arrangement, represent one of the greatest railway systems in the country, and both lines are devoting their energies to building up the tourist travel to the southeast as a natural feeder for their long across the continent haul.

Atlanta is considered by the Frisco and the Santa Fe as one of the most important of the greater cities of the southeast and Atlanta's many attractions as a winter resort and a summer capital are to be stressed in the extensive advertising campaign that is to be made all over the north and east, the idea being to draw the long route winter tourists through the southeastern and New Orleans gateway to California.

Passenger representatives of the combined lines are now covering through the southeastern territory, and the main plan is to divert the annual winter rush to California, down the South Atlantic coast and then through the New Orleans gate-way.

The opening of the passenger service will be followed in a short time by the inauguration of freight trains, and this will mean lower rates to the west for Atlanta and all the cities of the southeast.

★ In the Social Whirl ★

By Isma Dooly

With society this week there has been an intermingling of thoughtful entertainment, for many of the same people who attended the tea-dances and evening dancing classes attended the three lectures delivered by Dr. William Norman Guthrie under the auspices of the Drama league and are studying their French that they may be better follow M. Eugene Brieux when he lectures here in early February. Many Atlanta women are anticipating the interpretative lectures on the grand operas to be presented here, these lectures to begin Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club, Miss Nana Tucker to give the first lecture. The Sunday Night club at the Georgian Terrace will begin later a series of similiar lectures.

The Atlanta Woman's club will also present this week an exhibition of American handicrafts in the clubrooms, the day to be announced later.

While these two movements cover departments coming under the head of the cultural head of club work, another movement along more commercial, but nevertheless practical and patriotic, lines is the crusade the club women will inaugurate to get Atlanta women to purchase their opera trousseaux in Atlanta, patronizing Atlanta shops and dressmakers.

"In that way, we can co-operate with our merchants in their efforts to retain their employees instead of reducing the force, and our dressmakers in retaining their help," explained Mrs. J. P. McGovern, president of the club.

"Each year the department store and commercial people put up much of the guarantee for grand opera, making it possible for us to enjoy the great musical treat. It is inconsistent of women who are the largest buyers, not only of clothes, but of household purchasing, not to see to it that they do their part by trading with the home markets by buying their gowns, wraps and millinery at home.

The Home Market.

"The fact that the home market does provide the very same opportunity now that the metropolitan market does has been proven by displays made here by firms from outside of the city. For instance, it has been reported to me by a club member that at one of these exhibits made here by an outside agency, three gowns of different fashion were made from one material, to be accurate, a striped chiffon in black and white. The same material could have been purchased at any of three dressmaking establishments and in every store. The style of the gown was one that could have been produced by any modiste who had the gown described to her, whether she had seen it or not.

"The truth is," continued Mrs. McGovern, "our modistes and buyers here buy directly from foreign markets. Many of them send their own purchasers. This year especially every buyer in this country has had the same chance. The fashion books, plates and model gowns are accessible to everybody, and now is the time for every one of us to show our real patriotism in this direction. We must not forget that the first woman to initiate the idea of patronizing domestic wares was the president of our own Georgia Federation, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, her message on the subject going forth August 21 and followed by a series of movements looking to the patronage of home industry."

Mrs. McGovern stated that at the meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club one week from tomorrow formal plans will be announced for carrying on this patronage of Atlanta shops, especially for the purchase of opera trousseaux.

Commenting on the fact that the Atlanta Woman's club had as an organization gone on the guarantee fund of grand opera, Mrs. McGovern said: "It is unusual that the club takes so large an amount from the treasury for other than educational purposes, but what could be more distinctly educational than grand opera?"

WOMEN GUARANTORS.

The response of many prominent Atlanta women to the guarantee fund of grand opera has illustrated their unselfish interest and co-operation in public movements. A list of the women guarantors will disclose the fact that their names appear not only as patrons of art, but patrons of the city's practical and public movements. For example Mrs. T. S. Lewis, who subscribed yesterday to the opera guarantee fund, sending her word of approval of women becoming guarantors, is a member of the Atlanta Woman's club, of the Free Kindergarten association, of the Home for the Friendless, the Home for Incurables and the Georgia branch of the woman's department of the National Civic Federation, and these are all organizations to which dues have to be paid.

Mrs. Kelly Evans, who started the woman's guarantor list, is the largest giver among Atlanta women to the Associated Charities this year, while the names on the list of women repeat the names of honored citizens who have for years contributed to Atlanta's upbuilding in many ways.

THE VALENTINE BALL.

The Valentine ball will be among the concluding incidents of a very gay season of beautiful entertainments despite the war clouds. The ball is being planned along brilliant lines, and a number of visitors will be here for it. Among these will be Miss Matina Burke, of Macon, who will be with Miss Katherine Ellis, and Mr. and Mrs. William Felton, of Macon, and Mr. S. S. Dunlap, who will be with Mr. and Mrs. John Little.

Mrs. Felton was the charming Miss Louise Gibson, of Baltimore, who had been an acknowledged belle there since her debut two years ago. She and Mr. Felton in their marriage illustrated the old-time romance of "sweethearts from childhood." They first met as children at Warm Springs, Va., where the Felton and Duncan families of Macon have gone each year, meeting as regularly as the Gibson family. The wedding was planned for the early summer, to be an al fresco affair of great beauty, but illness in the groom's family changed the original plan, and the marriage took place several weeks ago in Baltimore. It was a beautiful ceremonial with breakfast following, and attended only by the

THE DIVORCE OF JOSEPHINE

IN THE PATH OF NAPOLEON

100 Years After His Downfall

By JAMES MORGAN

Before proceeding with the life of Napoleon, and taking up the birth of the king of Rome, Mr. Morgan here turns back a page and recites the pathetic story of Josephine; her sublime fortitude when she realized that divorce was inevitable, and the part she took in nominating her successor in wedlock—Marie Louise—the story of whose wedding to Napoleon was related in last Sunday's installment.

With the divorce of Josephine the tragedy of Napoleon's career very perceptibly deepens and his feet are seen to be forever planted in the downward path.

Mr. Morgan's story today is of Josephine as wife and empress, of the long and painful divorce campaign that preceded her dethronement, of the emperor's final resolve taken in the very palace of Marie Louise, of the pathetic dignity with which Josephine bade farewell to her greatness and still more pathetic loyalty with which she forwarded Napoleon's plan to marry the Austrian archduchess.

THE EMPRESS JOSEPHINE (X PHOT.)

THE DIVORCE

DATES AND EVENTS—AGE 37-40.

December 13, 1806—Birth of a son to Napoleon by Eleonore Revel.

May 4, 1807—Death of Napoleon's favorite nephew and probable heir.

September 27, 1808 — Talleyrand broached to the czar marriage alliance with Russia.

July 6, 1808—Victory at Wagram.

October 26, 1809—Napoleon returned to France

November 22, 1809—Asked for the hand of the czar's sister.

November 30, 1809—Announced his purpose to Josephine.

December 15, 1809—The divorce.

January 2, 1810—Josephine opened the negotiations for the marriage of Marie Louise and Napoleon.

May 4, 1810—Birth of a son to Napoleon by Mme. Walewski.

While Napoleon dwelt in the palace of the fugitive Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria at Shonbrunn, in 1809, and occupied the room of the future king of Rome, he formed the long-deferred resolution to divorce Josephine, and, marrying a daughter of one of the ancient dynasties, provide an heir to his empire.

As the victor of Wagram, in the pride of success and the responsibility of power, tread the palace halls of the Hapsburgs, his determination ripened that the inheritor of his glory and his conquests should be at once a child of his own potent blood and the scion of a race of kings. He saw no other way to lift the imperial succession above the ugly jealousies and conspiracies that had already divided the Bonapartes and place it beyond the rivalry of the more ambitious marshals who stood ready to fight for the crown among themselves.

Like his only companions in fame, he was childless, but he would not, like Alexander, bequeath his kingdom to the strongest or, like Caesar, adopt a nephew. True, he had looked with favor on the first born of his brother, Louis, but when the little fellow died, in 1807, the emperor did not transfer his favor to the second son, nor yet to the third, who was born the next year, although this last child really was destined, as Napoleon III, to be the only successor his throne ever was to have.

THE DIVORCE CAMPAIGN.

For two years the emperor had wrestled with the man, the monarch with the husband, ambition with affection, the head with the heart. Nor was Josephine blind to that silent conflict between his emotions and his policies, which had so long agitated her husband's breast. She dreaded to have him pass for a moment beyond her spell, and she was begging him in her letters, throughout his absence on the Prussian and Polish campaign, to let her share his hardships in the camp and in the field.

While the anxious wife waited for the return of her couriers, she alternately wept and consulted the cards to learn from their mystic faces whether the hoped-for summons was on the way. She impatiently tore open one of his letters to read: "I laughed at your saying that you had married to be with your husband. I thought, in my ignorance, that the wife was made for the husband, the husband for his country, his fame and his glory." Again she received from him this chiding message: "I am told you are always crying. Fie! How ugly that is! An empress ought to be courageous!"

All the while the same superserviceable faction which, for its own profit, had paved Napoleon's way to the life consulate, and then to the throne, was eagerly plotting, in season and out, to have him marry again and obtain an heir to that throne by which its members lived. Always ready to do the dirty work, Fouche had gone to the empress, either with or without the emperor's sanction, and urged her to make a voluntary sacrifice of herself for the sake of the empire. But when she asked Napoleon about it, he hotly denounced the meddling of the minister of police and, folding her in his embrace and weeping over her, he reassured her of his love.

JOSEPHINE'S SPELL.

A year afterward, while Talleyrand, Fouche and other agitators of the question were again pressing their counsels upon him, and even stirring up a public agitation for the divorce of Josephine, the sight of her one evening dressed for a levee, with a tender melancholy in her eyes, reopened the floodgates of the emperor's memory and emotions. Catching her in his arms and crushing her beautiful gown, he cried like a child while he protested: "No! I can never leave you!" He was so overwrought, as he sobbingly complained of the people who were tormenting him, that the empress induced him to lie down and let her hold the reception without him, after which she returned and stayed with him through a troubled night, when, we are told, he literally soaked his pillow with tears.

As the agitators saw the emperor passing again under the spell of his wife's charm and recoiling from the step toward which they were pushing him, Talleyrand expressed their impatience and disgust: "What a devil of a man! How he yields to his impulses! Why can he not come to a decision and stop making us the puppets of his moods?"

The interruption of the campaign for a new marriage was prolonged by the empress' journey to Bayonne, where, with her perfect tact, she greatly aided the emperor in his rough task of taking the crown of Spain away from the Spanish royal family who were gathered there. She showed herself as superior in manner as he showed himself superior to power to those princes, born in the purple and together they overwhelmed the Bourbons. Never had Napoleon seemed lighter hearted with her than on that trip, when they ran races on the beach and he threw her into the waves with her clothes on.

He was still her captive when the Austrian campaign of 1809 began, and he took her with him as far as Strasburg. While he was bridging the Danube and bridging the way from the defeat of Aspern-Essling to the victory of Wagram, he wrote her, "You know my feelings for Josephine; they are unchangeable."

A BATTLE WON AND LOST.

But Wagram seems to have decided the issue, when it confirmed anew his title to the vastest and richest estate in the world. The empress did not miss the calamitous significance of that battle to her, nor fail to understand that in her husband's victory she had lost her fight. To be sure, his emotions were still on her side, and even yet fitfully struggled against the inevitable. Nearly three months after Wagram, and at the end of September, he was writing her once more, in the old spirit of playful fondness: "I warn you to look after yourself well at nights. For one night very soon you will hear a great noise!"

It was perhaps fortunate for them both that Josephine had not yet reached Fontainebleau when the "great noise" burst upon that palace on a late October morning in 1809. The emperor had traveled from Vienna faster than the news of his coming, and the empress did not arrive from St. Cloud until the evening. Her absence dashed his spirits, and, when at last they met, it was under the influence of a mutual constraint which saved them both from a renewal of relations that would have only made harder the new unavoidable trial that awaited them.

Already Fouche had seen the emperor and bluntly warned him: "There is not a marshal who is not considering how to dispose of your estate if we have the misfortune to lose you. It is an instance of Alexander's lieutenants eager for his kingdoms." All the imperial Bonapartes had been for the divorce from the beginning, and now even Napoleon's mother was saying: "I hope the emperor will have the courage this time to take the step which not only France but Europe awaits with anxiety. His divorce is an act of necessity."

After a gloomy fortnight at Fontainbleau, in which the emperor and empress alike strove to avoid being left together alone, one for fear of having his purpose overcome and the other for fear of hearing it proposed, they entered Paris to find the chattering city busy with their affairs. Worse still, Josephine's creditors, alarmed by her sinking fortunes, were clamoring for money, and Napoleon was amazed to learn that she was again floundering in debt.

JOSEPHINE'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

Extravagance appears to have been Josephine's one fault under the empire. It is doubtful if she had given the emperor any other grievance since she took her place beside him on the throne. Once he cast her milliner in prison for several hours to frighten her out of her habit of extortion. But life imprisonment would not have corrected the reckless expenditures of the empress, with her 500 chemises, her new pair of stockings for each dressing, her 300 or 400 cashmere shawls, some costing nearly $2,500, and her robes of lace for which she paid as high as $20,000 each. Mme. de Remusat never entered a dressmaker's or a milliner's, go when she would, that she did not find something in the making for the empress. Her annual allowance for dress rose as high as $90,000, but her credit being good, she spent as much as $220,000 in a year. Out of her yearly expenditures, however, she accumulated most of her jewelry, which represented at the time of the divorce an investment of nearly $1,000,000.

Whenever creditors pressed and the inevitable time of reckoning came, the empress cried and the emperor raged, but not at her so much as at the tradesmen. Although he arbitrarily cut down their bills 30, 40 and 50 per cent, they were well enough satisfied with the profit still remaining to start at once a new campaign of temptation and a new account with the empress.

The emperor's practiced eye came to know the signals of her financial distress, but he never could induce her to confess at once the full amount of her debts. "No! No!" she protested to her confidants, when they advised her to seek relief in telling him the whole truth. "He would kill me!" and she always tried to spare herself by keeping back half the truth. "I will pay the balance out of my savings," the childlike spendthrift would promise herself, she whose fair fingers were formed only to be a sieve for gold.

One day when her red eyes were flying the unmistakable signal, the emperor said to Duroc, as he pointed to the empress and her lady of honor: "Those women have been crying. I am sure it is debts. You try to find out what is the matter." Josephine at once sobbingly confessed to the grand marshal of the palace that she owed $80,000.

"Ah!" exclaimed the wheedling Duroc, "the emperor thought it was $160,000!"

"No! No!" Josephine protested; "but since I must tell you all, I swear it is only $120,000!"

The crafty mediator next feelingly portrayed to the emperor the despair of the empress. "She is conscious of her fault, then?" the deluded husband said. "So much the better. She must owe an enormous amount, possibly $200,000."

"But, sire," Duroc pleaded; "it is only $120,000!"

"Only $120,000!" the emperor exclaimed, concealing his surprise and relief. "You talk as if that were nothing." Then he went to the repentant prodigal, scolded her gently and finished by coaxing her from her tears with the comforting assurance, "Come, come, my little Josephine; don't cry. The debts will be paid."

JOSEPHINE'S COURT.

Even in her weakness, however, there is to be found the source of Josephine's strength. Her creole love of beauty and luxury, costly as it was, had framed a fitting background for Napoleon's imperial pretensions and made his court the foremost in the world when, had he been left to his own devices, it would have been nothing more than a military camp and the butt of scornful Europe.

With a simple and genuine fondness for people, and with a native dignity free from the stiff hauteur, the icy artificiality of women bred in royal palaces, the supple little islander from the sugar loft of Martinique deftly blended a motley array of ex-sergeants and their garrison wives with the old nobility. Under her dainty touch the Tuileries became the mold of form and the looking glass of fashion for all the ancient and frumpy courts of the continent. Even the English, although they blockaded Napoleon relentlessly, were eager enough to smuggle across to London the latest models from Josephine's dressmakers. A revival of the British fad for the empire style, a century after the reign of the empress was at an end, provoked the jingling irony of Gilbert in the opera of "Patience:"

Art stopped short
Of the Empress Josephine.

Josephine, my destiny is stronger than my will. My dearest affections must yield.

While Napoleon was waging his military campaigns, it was no less Josephine's duty to conduct her social campaigns, and a censorious world could find no fault in her strategy. It being his first care to awe the world, he attached high importance to the role he called upon her to play. As he sought to impress or propitiate his peoples and his allies, he marched and countermarched the empress and her train like grenadiers of the guard.

Poor Josephine's continual journeyings from palace to palace, from country to country in torturous coaches over racking roads weary and stagger the understanding. Is she about to set out upon one of these imperial progresses? "She is a good natured, easy-going woman and must have her route and behavior marked out for her," and her husband dictated everything she was to say and do when addressed along her way until his instructions covered 21 large sheets of paper! Even though he might be fighting the Tartars in Poland, he unfailingly watched over her ceaseless activities. When 1,000 miles away from Paris, he wrote her. "You must not go to the small boxes at the small theaters"—where, of course, all the fun was—"it does not become your rank. You must only go to the four principal theaters"—enacting heavy tragedies prescribed by him—"and always to the principal box."

AN EMPEROR'S HELPMEET.

Josephine lived wholly for Napoleon and his interests. Having no great ambitions of her own, no desire for power or grandeur, she did not meddle in politics, but in the spirit of a grocer's or banker's wife, she made it her main purpose in life to please her husband, look after his home and promote his success by being agreeable to his associates. Because she was the wife of an emperor, whose home was a palace, whose business associates were kings, princes and dukes, her duties were no lighter and no less difficult.

"How this wearies me," she once exclaimed. "I have not a moment to myself. It would be better for me were I the wife of a laborer." Although diamond crowns and gilded salons cast their illusion over the scene of her splendid drudgery, Josephine could not have toiled harder had she been a laborer's wife. For three hours each day she slaved over her morning toilet, and thrice daily she changed her linen throughout. A mob of servitors and courtiers surrounded her morning, noon and night. She breakfasted, lunched and dined with them, and the repetition of some dreary function was scheduled for each waking hour. "Be gay! Be gay!" That was the imperial command always.

However borne down under the burden of a crown, however ill she might be, and she was not physically strong; however hard her head ached, never did Josephine on her unending round of petty tasks, disappoint the emperor with a misstep, a wrong word or a lacking smile. There never was an indiscreet remark, an intrigue, an act of favoritism on her part to embarrass her husband for a moment. He, who above all men valued every tick of the clock, never had to complain that she kept him waiting a minute. And when he was worn out by the cares of a crowded day, she, who never opened a book for her own enjoyment, lay across the foot of his bed and read him to sleep in that voice whose tones unfailingly entranced him.

No man, monarch or peasant, could ask for a truer helpmeet. But the lord of the earth was without an heir. How often his sisters had taunted Josephine with nature's unkindness to her! Once when she had triumphantly pointed them to her two children by her first husband, the Bonaparte women only turned the knife in the cruel wound by retorting, "Yes, dear sister, but that was when you were still young!" And now she was past 45!

THE DREADED HOUR.

Meanwhile Napoleon had in fact become a father in the birth of Leon Revel, while Mme. Walewski hoped soon to present him with a child. These experiences no doubt contributed to his resolve to seek a lawful heir for his throne.

The long dreaded hour struck for Josephine when Paris was in the midst of preparations for the celebration of the fifth anniversary of the coronation and while, from all the federated nations of the empire, kings and queens, princes and princesses were thronging into the city. After a silent, mournful dinner in the Tuileries, the emperor and empress retired to his apartments, where, while she was holding the cup of coffee which he had just passed to her, he spoke the words that for many days had been struggling for expression. The historian of the tragic scene, in the person of the prefect against the wall of the corridor outside the door, suddenly heard loud shrieks from the emperor's room. An usher, who also heard them, would have opened the door had not his chief told him that the emperor would call for assistance if he needed it.

The prefect was right, for in a moment the door opened and the emperor stood before him, his eyes full of tears and his voice choking in his extreme agitation. The functionary entered the room, to find Josephine lying on the floor and uttering piercing cries: "I shall not survive it! I shall not survive it!" The emperor asked the prefect to carry the stricken empress down to her own apartments, on the floor below, and he took a candle off a table to light the way. The private stairs, however, proving too narrow for her to be carried down in one pair of arms, the emperor gave the candle to the usher and helped the prefect bear her to her room.

Having played the woman that brief while, Josephine quickly and bravely resumed the part of empress. Nothing in her brilliant reign became her more than her farewell to her greatness. The fetes went on and, although she could not keep back the tears and summon the vanished smile, she faithfully met all her duties in the mocking ceremonials.

Queen Hortense, perked up in a glistering grief for her eldest son and wearing a golden sorrow in her loveless wedlock, was unhappiness enthroned and could not understand why her mother should dread the loss of a crown. But Josephine was a daughter of the sun, and, while she cared nothing for power, she was naturally proud of the success with which she had sat the highest throne of earth and retained the affection and merited the admiration of the foremost man of the world. If her early indifference had not really warmed into love for Napoleon, she had at least become, in their nearly 14 years of married life, a fond and devoted wife, capable of feeling the pangs of jealousy.

THE DIVORCE.

With the arrival of Eugene, the formal arrangements for his mother's divorce were entered upon. But when Josephine proposed that the emperor should make her son king instead of viceroy of India, the always high-spirited young man protested: "Mother, let me be left out of the question. Your son does not wish a crown as the price of your separation. If you bow to the emperor's wishes it is of you alone that he must think." Napoleon, who had never failed in a father's duty to his stepson, expressed his admiration of the viceroy's sentiments. "That is a true heart," he said; "Eugene does well to trust to my affection."

The son had anticipated the situation and written to his mother a month before that if the emperor believed his happiness and the interests of France required him to have children no consideration should be permitted to oppose him, and he invited Josephine, in event of divorce, to live with him in Italy. Finally, it fell to Eugene to make the first public announcement of the matter. "It was necessary for the happiness of France that the founder of this fourth dynasty should grow old, surrounded by his direct descendants as a guarantee to us all," he told the senate. "The tears that his resolution has drawn from the emperor suffice for my mother's glory."

Neither the empress nor her children could have asked for more generous terms than Napoleon volunteered. He proposed at once that she should retain her imperial rank as crowned empress, have the Elysee palace in Paris, as well as her cherished abode at Malmaison and the chateau of Navarre for her residences, and receive an allowance of $600,000 a year.

It was agreed that the divorce should be lawfully pronounced by mutual consent in a family council in strict accordance with the provisions of the Code Napoleon. Josephine was as loyally ready to forward her husband's plans now as always, and while her hair was being dressed on the morning of the day appointed for the proceedings she carefully studied her speech. It had been prepared for her, but she made changes in the language and rewrote the pronouncement in her own hand.

JOSEPHINE'S LAST FUNCTION.

At 9 in the evening she entered the throne room to take part in her last function at the Tuileries. She and the emperor and his mother seated themselves in three armchairs, while the crowned members of the Bonaparte and Beauharnais families sat on chairs without arms and the uncrowned princes and princesses on mere stools. All were in full court dress.

The act of divorce had been read, when the empress, drying her eyes, rose to read her speech in a voice surprisingly composed. She began bravely enough: "With the permission of our august and dear spouse, I declare that, since I have no hope of bearing children who can satisfy the requirements of his policy and the interests of France, it is my pleasure to give him the greatest proof of attachment and devotion which ever was given on earth." But now her voice trembled and utterly failed her, and, as she sank weeping into her chair, she handed the paper to a gentleman of the court and dumbly appealed to him to finish the speech, which continued:

"I owe all to his bounty. It was his hand which crowned me and, seated on his throne, I have received nothing but proofs of affection and devotion from the French people.

"The dissolution of my marriage will make no change in the sentiments of my heart.

"The emperor will always have in me his best friend. I know how much this act, which is made necessary by his policy and by such great interests, has wounded his heart, but we shall win glory, both of us, for the sacrifices we have made for our country."

AFTER THE DIVORCE.

As the divorced empress left the painful scene attended by her son and daughter, Eugene fell to the floor in a faint and himself had to be assisted out of the room. After a few minutes the emperor and empress met again to mingle their tears in a private leave taking, when Josephine covered his face with kisses and for the last time he embraced the bride of his youth and his glory.

Napoleon at once entered a waiting carriage and drove alone in his gloom through the black night to Versailles, there to pass a few days in solitude at the palace of the Grand Trianon. Josephine's departure was deferred until the next afternoon. A few courtiers presented themselves in the morning to take formal leave of her, but when attended by two members of the court she entered her carriage for the drive to Malmaison, no one came to say good-by, and she saw not a friendly or grateful face as, in a cold and dismal rain, she drove away from the Tuileries forever. The palace crowd were saving their supple hinges and their fawnings for her successor.

The emperor rode over to Malmaison the next day to call. There he strolled, with Josephine, in the familiar paths of the chateau park, but there were no more embraces. When he had returned to Versailles he at once sat down and wrote her a letter breathing the tenderest anxiety and hastened to dispatch it by courier in time to reach the empress before she retired for the night:

"My Friend—I found you weaker than you should have been. You have shown courage, and you must seek the strength to sustain you. Do not let yourself fall into a fatal melancholy. You must learn to content yourself, and above all care for your health, which is so precious to me. Sleep well, thinking to yourself that it is my wish."

But the callers at Malmaison all came away with tales of Josephine's tears, and, at each distressing report, the emperor sped a courier to her with a letter appealing to her fortitude. He called again in person on Christmas eve to invite her to a Christmas dinner with him at Versailles, and she went with Hortense and Eugene.

Napoleon returned to the Tuileries the day after Christmas. He had been away a fortnight and was plainly moved by the memories the place evoked and shocked to find it so desolate without its graceful mistress. "The great palace seemed very empty to me," he confessed in his daily letter to Josephine. Once more he paid her debts and he appealed to her to try to live on $300,000 a year, saving the rest of her income for her grandchildren. But when General Savary returned from settling those business matters with the empress and reported that she had wept, the emperor complained, "You ought not to have made her cry."

NAPOLEON AWOOING.

The completion of his policy inaugurated by the divorce now occupied Napoleon's attention and he at once pressed his plans for a matrimonial alliance with some great reigning house. A list of the available princesses of Europe lay before him like a military map. But the widowhood of the most celebrated and powerful man in his time, with the loftiest throne in the world at his bestowal, aroused more fear than ambition in the bosoms of some of the eligibles. Queen Louise, who had only lately returned to Berlin from her long exile, thanked God in her maternal heart that her first born daughter was dead and safe from the possibility of being sacrificed to the conquerer, while the Archduchess Marie Louise, of Austria, wrote to reassure an anxious friend that she was in no peril, as her father was too good to think of offering her up to the minotaur!

Napoleon's own preference was to bind together the two empires of France and Russia in a marriage between himself and a Romanoff. Alexander, however, was childless, like himself, and had only sisters to be considered. Their mother hated the French emperor, and when Alexander had come back from Erfurt, in 1808, with Talleyrand's suggestion of a match, the dowager czarina made such haste to rescue her only grown-up unmarried daughter that in eight days she had her betrothed to a little German duke, the heir to the duchy of Oldenberg.

Napoleon felt the rebuff, but it did not deter him now from asking for the younger sister, who was a mere girl in short dresses and with her hair down her back. The czar was caught between his importunate ally on one hand and his mother and the entire Russian aristocracy on the other, and he parleyed for time. For two months he put off a decisive answer to the demand which had really been made some time before the divorce was pronounced. At last the imperial and imperious widower sent him an ultimatum, giving the Russian court 48 hours to say yes or no. But Alexander continued to palter.

Already, however, the Emperor Francis, of Austria, had frankly entered his daughter, Marie Louise, as an open candidate for the vacant throne. Metternich, the Austrian foreign minister, had been camping on the trail of the divorce for two years and now that it had come, he prepared to take advantage of it. He and the crafty politicians had no doubt that Napoleon was riding for a fall, but they shrewdly calculated that the inevitable day of reckoning probably was four years off. Meanwhile Austria must keep in his good graces until the time came to snatch back the provinces he had taken from her. A marriage alliance with him surely would stay his hand and, at the same time, weaken his political alliance with Russia, thus hastening his downfall. It was a clever scheme on the part of the Austrian court—and it would cost only an 18-year-old girl.

JOSEPHINE'S LAST SERVICE.

Napoleon, weary and exasperated with the czar's shifty conduct, suddenly turned to take up the hint which the Austrian government had dropped. For the task of opening the delicate negotiations, he wished to select the most tactful and faithful ambassador in all his empire. And his choice fell upon none other than Josephine, herself. The empress, as loyal as ever, did not hesitate to accept the strange duty, inviting the wife of Metternich to Malmaison only two weeks after the divorce, she amazed that lady by expressing her earnest wish that her divorced husband might find consolation in a marriage with Marie Louise.

Mme. de Metternich was hardly less astonished when at a ball a few days later Napoleon himself bluntly asked her if she thought the Austrian archduchess would marry him. The lady very properly declined to answer for another. But when the emperor asked her if she herself would have him were she Marie Louise, Mme. de Metternich, displaying a candor that belied her wifely association with the most accomplished prevaricator of his generation, replied most emphatically in the negative.

When at length in the course of official discussions between the two empires it was plain that Austria was as willing as Barkis, Napoleon took a vote on the question in his council of state, and Marie Louise was elected. Josephine, however, had enjoyed the rare honor of making the nomination of her successor in wedlock.

Sons Not Expected to Live and Father Seriously Wounded.

Andalusia, Ala., January 30.—John Pedder and his two sons, Frank and John, Jr., were shot through a window in their home on a farm near here today, while seated at the breakfast table. The sons are not expected to live, and the father is reported seriously wounded. The assassins used a shotgun. A feud is thought to have been the cause of the shooting. A sheriff's posse with bloodhounds has gone to the scene.

VICTIMS OF EARTHQUAKE CONCENTRATED IN ROME

Rome, January 30.—More than 20,000 injured refugees from the districts devastated by the earthquake January 13 have been concentrated in the capital alone, and nearly 1,000 have been accounted for at five other cities. Naples is sheltering 10,000; Aquila, 1,200; Chieti, 750; Termo, 235, and Ancona, 470.

Help the Stomach Digest Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and food that ferments and generates poisons that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative, positive in its effect and that will quickly relieve constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly, and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. SLEEPY SENATORS CONSENT TO DRAW IN SHIPPING FIGHT

Recess Agreed to at Midnight After the Senate Had Been in Continuous Session From 11 a. m. Friday.

FOR OVER ELEVEN HOURS SMOOT HELD THE FLOOR

And When He Quit, Other Republicans Took Up the Fight — Democratic Leaders Are Determined to Press Ship Purchase Measure to Vote.

Washington, January 30.—An armistice in the battle over the administration shipping bill began tonight at 11:19 o'clock, when the senate ended nearly thirty-seven hours of continuous debate by recessing until 10 o'clock Monday.

Senator William Alden Smith, who had been speaking since afternoon, confessed at 11 o'clock that he was nearly exhausted, and by unanimous consent the senate went into executive session to dispose of some nominations.

Hands of Clock Put Forward.

Later it was decided not to wait until midnight actually arrived to put into effect the truce agreed upon earlier in the evening, the hands of the senate clock were turned to mark 11, and the senate declared in recess.

Senator Smith will resume his speech Monday, when the democrats will begin another effort to hold the senate in continuous session until the shipping bill is passed.

From 11 a. m. Friday, all through last night, and again today and tonight the contest proceeded with a spirit of determination little short of desperation on both sides.

The great stake, a final vote on the bill, which would break the senate deadlock and release the blockade of legislation, was just ahead, for the presiding officer had ordered that the ayes and nays would be taken as soon as debate should end. No further parliamentary device was available, and physical endurance alone remained to hold back the taking of the vote.

Democrats to Press Measure.

Although the democrats agreed to a recess at midnight at the end of thirty-seven hours of continuous debate, administration leaders insisted that such action meant no let-up in their determination to press the bill.

"We agreed to the recess because of Sunday," said Senator Simmons, "just as we did in the filibuster against the rivers and harbors appropriation bill last fall. But beginning Monday at 10 o'clock it is our purpose to press the bill with all the force that is in our power."

Late today Senator William Alden Smith relieved his republican colleagues who had been holding the floor since early morning. He turned his attention to a bitter arraignment of the administration's policy and painted a gloomy word-picture of the business condition of the country under the democratic tariff. An "era of record-breaking business mortality" had followed enactment of that tariff, he said, and he characterized the shipping bill as the "fifth administration folly."

"I don't think we have ever had a president who was so hopeful with so little cause as the present incumbent of the white house," he said. "From the day he signed the tariff bill he has not let a week go by without proclaiming that prosperity was here."

Senator Smith read many figures which he declared showed the conditions he had recited and repeatedly challenged the democrats to answer his statement. Majority members refused to be drawn in a tariff debate, however, accepting the challenges with weary, apathetic silence.

Senators Slept in Seats.

Throughout the long day session the situation was tense. Many senators slept in their seats after the long watches; through last night; others stretched on the sofas circling the senate chamber; others formed team relays, offensive and defensive, to crowd the measure to a vote, or to hold it back.

There was little sharp parliamentary fencing. In the main, it was steady speechmaking, with here and there a flash of wit or bitterness to show the intense undercurrents of the debate. Senator Lodge again gave warning that the buying of interned ships would precipitate grave international complications with Great Britain, France and Russia, and would "start this nation on the highway of war."

During the day it was the expectation on both sides of the chamber that the contest would be carried through tonight and into Sunday, but at 4 p. m. Senator Kern, tactical leader of the administration forces, secured unanimous consent for a recess until 10 a. m. Monday.

With the recess came the announcement from democratic conference rooms that from Monday morning the bill would be kept before the senate continuously without adjournment or recess until it was passed.

Measure Won't be Withdrawn.

Senator Simmons announced he was authorized to deny reports that the administration was considering withdrawing the bill from the senate. He could say authoritatively, he declared, that there was not one scintilla of truth in the report.

Early in the evening Senator Smoot, who talked all night last night, his remarks taking up eleven and a half hours, appeared on the floor apparently much refreshed and ready for another long-distance argument, should his services be needed.

The galleries were filled with spectators, but there were few senators on the floor until toward 9 o'clock, when many who had gone home for a brief rest returned to the chamber.

Senator Smith, whose speech took the form of a general attack on the administration, engaged several democratic senators in brief colloquy.

"I heard the secretary of the treasury ask a distinguished audience at San Diego, Cal., the other day 'What is the matter with the country?'" said Senator Smith. "The people who heard him were struck dumb. Nobody could answer, and finally the secretary of the treasury answered: 'Not a damn thing.'"

Dumb Alden Smith Causes Wonder.

"Did I understand the senator from Michigan to say that he was present and heard this?" asked Senator Chilton.

"Yes, I was present," Senator Smith replied.

"And was struck dumb?" asked Senator Chilton, precipitating an uproar in the chamber and galleries.

While Senator Smoot was speaking Friday night, Senators Lodge and Sutherland slept in a committee room ready to relieve the Utah Senator if called.

For many hours during the night Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, sat among the democratic senators listening to the debate. Shortly after midnight a party of men and women in evening dress filed into one of the galleries, homeward bound from a dinner or theater party, and watched the proceedings. In the press gallery few correspondents kept watch and at the doors the old soldiers, who make up the senate doorkeeper's staff, slept in their chairs.

At 9 o'clock Saturday morning Senator Smoot had finished his eleven-hour continuous speaking and was declining offers of republican arrivals for rest, those who had fought through the night.

Thus the contest became again one between fresh men in mind and body. Senator Oliver, acting as the republican whip, declared he had two weeks' continuous talking material within call.

Things began to freshen up on the floor and the galleries as the contest took on new vigor with the beginning of a new day, but Senator Smoot, showing no signs of fatigue, continued telling the democrats that a permanent and not a temporary policy for upbuilding the merchant marine was needed.

However, at 9:36 Senator Smoot yielded to Senator Sutherland after having spoken continuously for eleven hours and thirty-five minutes.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, was among the few alert and heavy-eyed democratic senators who remained at the capitol throughout last night to maintain a quorum to put through the administration ship purchase bill. He was present when the senate recessed at midnight tonight.

Senator Smith stated late tonight that he had not had his boots off in 40 hours, and only such sleep during that time as he could take on the lounges in the clock rooms. Senator Hardwick was detained at home by illness last night, but was on duty throughout the day.

Other Senate Addresses.

The length of Senator Smoot's speech recalled other notable addresses in the senate. In 1891 Senator Charles A. Faulkner spoke thirteen hours on the "force" bill; in 1893 Senator William V. Allen spoke seventeen hours on the repeal of the silver purchase clause of the Sherman law; in 1901 Senator Thomas H. Carter spoke fourteen hours on a river and harbor bill; in 1908 Senator La Follette spoke eighteen hours and twenty minutes on the Vreeland-Aldrich emergency currency act, and in 1914 Senator Burton, twelve hours and ten minutes on a river and harbor bill.

Senator Edward W. Carmack, in 1907, made a notably long speech on the ship subsidy bill, and Senator Owen, in 1908, another prolonged address on the admission of Arizona.

Waging War Against Death By Furnishing Pure Water to Large Cities of the State

Ray C. Werner, head of the state sanitary water laboratory at the capitol, is at work in his laboratory. He is shown examining a quantity of suspected water. This water, a sample from one of Georgia's principal cities, showed a dangerous number of colon bacilli.

By Tilton Forbes.

In operation with the vital statistics law, passed last summer by the Georgia legislature, whereby accurate trace of the causes of all deaths in the state will be recorded, the state board of health has inaugurated a system of furnishing free of charge to all public water supplies chemical and bacteriological analyses of drinking water.

This new department is known as the sanitary water laboratory, and Ray C. Werner, a graduate of Georgia-Tech, and a well-known authority in the state on the expert supervision and analytical control of water supplies, has charge of the work.

Studied in Europe.

Mr. Werner spent last summer in Europe, until the outbreak of the European war, studying methods pursued by European cities in securing pure water and inspected the enormous filtration plants of Berlin, Germany, and made a minute inspection of the Tegel waterworks.

There are 125 public water supplies in Georgia, and thirty of these are known as having big filtering plants, supplying drinking water to the larger cities of Georgia. The water for these thirty cities is obtained from rivers, which in all instances are more or less polluted.

Twice monthly samples of drinking waters sent to the state board by filtration plants throughout the state have been made heretofore, but the plant managers have been forced to pay for this work. The managers of water plants will be encouraged by the sanitary water laboratory to send in each month water samples for bacterial tests.

Issue Monthly Bulletins.

Mr. Werner, in order to create interest among the managers, is planning to issue a monthly bulletin, giving the bacteria count of the analysis made of each water sample. This bulletin will be mailed to the managers.

In the way he expects to stress upon the managers the benefits derived from expert plant control, which ultimately results in bacterial purity in the filtered water.

The laboratory will also issue from time to time educational bulletins, stressing the importance of public drinking water and frequent analyses in order to obtain a definite and known purity.

"North Carolina, Massachusetts, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Louisiana and many other states," said Mr. Werner, "have found the importance of the public health of maintaining frequent water tests and have accordingly passed laws requiring them. The United States public health service requires the regular examination of all waters furnished for drinking and has just published a definite bacteriological standard for such waters."

Wants Similar Laws Here.

Mr. Werner is planning a campaign to get the legislature to pass similar laws in Georgia.

"We need laws controlling public water supplies as much as vital statistics laws were needed," he said, "and I don't see how Georgia ever got along without the vital statistics law.

"Thousands of babes, men, women and children have died in the past of typhoid fever and other diseases simply because the community in which they lived was unaware of the fact that community diseases are largely caused by impure drinking water, coming from polluted streams and improperly filtered.

"That day of ignorance has passed," continued Mr. Werner, "and even the school boy knows that the typhoid bacillus is borne to the mouth of typhoid victims in contaminated drinking water, coming from streams into which sewages are dumped.

Could Stamp Out Typhoid.

"If people generally knew the facts about the origin, prevalence and transmission by polluted water of the typhoid bacillus, typhoid could be completely stamped out, as has been done in some communities and countries. Four hundred and fifty thousand people suffer from typhoid fever each year in the United States and 35,000 die annually from this water-borne disease.

"The bacterial count of a city's water that comes from a river should be taken two or three times weekly. The degree of contamination of the water source changes from day to day as floods come and go in the river bed."

BRITAIN IS INQUIRING ABOUT PANAMA CANAL

Panama, January 30.—The British admiralty apparently is displaying much interest in the condition of the Panama canal. Sir Claude C. Mallet, British minister to Panama, has been instructed, it is understood, to ascertain the status of the recent landslide.

Sir Claude told canal officials reports had been received in London that the waterway probably would be closed indefinitely because of unfavorable conditions in Culebra Cut, and that apparently British shipping interests had requested the government to learn what conditions actually were. It is believed here the reports in London were caused by a misunderstanding of the announcement from Washington that the formal opening had been delayed.

The condition of the channel was better today than at any time since October 15, when it was closed. Five vessels of heavy draft safely navigated the waterway during the day. The channel is being prepared for the Kroonland and the Northern Pacific, which are expected Monday and Tuesday. Each of these draws 31 feet.

Postponement of the formal opening of the canal was announced Monday at Washington. One of the factors said to have been responsible was difficulty in controlling slides. Governor Goethals is said to have told President Wilson he could not promise that large battleships could be sent through in March, when the opening was to have taken place.

$20,000,000 "MELON" CUT BY SEARS-ROEBUCK

Chicago, January 30.—Payment of a $20,000,000 stock dividend to holders of the $40,000,000 common stock was recommended today by the directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co. The new shares will be issued against all accumulated surplus of approximately $23,500,000, a large part of which has been reinvested in the business.

The directors recommended that the distribution be made April 1 to stockholders of record March 15. A special meeting of stockholders was called for February 22 to approve the board's recommendation to "vote on a plan to increase the authorized amount of the corporation's common stock from $40,000,000 to $60,000,000."

Great Damage by Gale.

Savannah, Ga., January 30.—The foreign shipments of cotton from this port today totaled more than 33,000 bales, the largest foreign movement of the season for any one day locally. The American steamer Nevadan sailed for Bremen, Germany, with a cargo of 12,000 bales. The British steamer Lingfield sailed with a cargo of 9,000 bales, and late this afternoon the Norwegian steamer Fimreitte sailed with 12,275 bales. The destinations of the Lingfield and Fimreitte were not withheld.

AMERICAN RED CROSS WORKING IN SERBIA

Washington, January 30.—Advices to Red Cross headquarters today said the second unit, which left Washington week to Serbia a few weeks ago had turned a tobacco factory at Gevgali into a hospital to care for 1,300 wounded Serbians and a number of Austrian prisoners. Another had been opened, the report said, to improve the insanitary surroundings. On account of the difficulty in obtaining hospital supplies from Serbian sources, it was said, large shipments from America would be necessary.

Hamburg Elects Socialist.

Hamburg, via London, January 31.—Herling Zeigner was elected mayor of Hamburg today, defeating Dr. Schramm by 4,763 votes, against 79 for his opponent. In a district having a voting population of 212,000. This result was due to a political truce, whereby all parties agreed not to oppose any candidate for re-election.

COURAGE IS COMMON IN THIS WAR.

London, January 30.—Every Englishman knows how to die bravely. The Irish, Scotch and English soldiers face the bayonets, the machine guns, as though out on dress parade. It is the men who sicken and die in the trenches, or at home who have not yet learned that our sympathy goes out to most. There are thousands of such men behind the battle lines who want to do front without the strong constitution and sound pure blood to withstand the deprivations, the hardships of the campaign in Belgium and France. It's a warning that we should pay strict attention to our stomach, liver and blood. If one is all out of sorts he should take an invigorating tonic and alterative such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which tones the stomach, liver and blood, purifies and cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates poisons, the blood disease breeding poisons. It makes rich, red blood and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health. Fifty years ago Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., found that certain herbs, roots and barks, unsurpassed by using glycerine without the use of alcohol or opiates, made into a concentrated extract, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made a stimulating tonic for the stomach, helped the digestion and assimilation of food and eradicated poisons from the blood. This mixture is known for indigestion, and by correcting the stomach, and thereby feeding the blood on pure materials, the red blood corpuscles are increased and the body established in a healthy state. No one suffers from catarrh who has plenty of red blood corpuscles and a good digestion. Catarrh in all its forms is a stagnation of the blood. Introduce purified blood into the system by taking the "Medical Discovery" and health is assured.—(adv.)

Havana Reds to Play Here---Fourteen Crackers Signed

Complete Official Records Of 1915 Cracker Candidates; Don Flynn Leads Batsmen

By Dick Jemison.

With the aid of Spalding's official record book, which has just been issued, the sporting editor has compiled the records of all players who will receive a trial with the Crackers this spring.

The batting records of the players, their fielding marks and the records of games won and lost by the twirlers are given below.

Outfielder Flynn, who played with the Muscogee, Okla., team in the Western association last season, has the best 1914 batting record, hitting for an average of .339 in 101 games.

Others with a better than .300 average are Timeon Bowden, the University of Georgia boy who was purchased by St. Louis from Macon and turned over to the Crackers by the Browns. Bowden hit .313 for Macon in 105 games.

Claude Potts, the new third sacker, comes highly touted. He played with Salt Lake in the Union association and with Bay City in the Southern Michigan league. With Salt Lake, Potts hit .302, while with Bay City he hit .316. Potts will make good with the Crackers, according to all the dope. He can play any infield position.

Williams, who twirled for Columbus and Albany in the Sally league and was drafted by Manager Smith, has the best record of any of the pitchers for last season.

Here are all the records of the players:

AUBURN QUINTET LOSES TO ATLANTA

Collegians Not Strong Enough to Cope With the Atlanta Athletic Club Five. Score 76-18.

By Carl Taylor.

Basketballically speaking, Auburn has a fine little football team. Last night they proved very easy pickings for the local bunch, and after the first few minutes of the game had elapsed, it was only a question of how much the final count was going to be, and after the last whistle had blown, and all baskets had been counted, it stood 76 for Atlanta and 18 for the Auburn Plainsmen. In every department of the game the local five was superior, and they outplayed their opponents at all times.

During the first half Atlanta made 30 field goals, while Auburn was ringing the baskets for 2. Forbes added one point more via the foul route, and Clements, for Auburn, made three points more in this manner. Atlanta took the lead and had scored 13 field goals before Auburn tallied. The team work of Atlanta and their accurate passing, not to mention the 20 field goals they shot, were the features of this half.

Subs Gets Workout.

After a brief rest of ten minutes, hostilities were again resumed. During the twenty minutes allowed for this half, Auburn played better ball and held the home team to 35 points, while they were getting 11.

Coach Bean gave nearly all the subs a tryout in the second half. Captain Willingham Smith, who has been absent from the team for the last few games, was in during the second half also and accredited himself well, getting 4 nice field goals and otherwise handling himself well. Jim Harrison, who relieved Forbes in this half, also played well, getting 10 points.

The game was a cleanly fought exhibition, and only 5 fouls were called on Atlanta, all of which were for hold-

Four flights were filled Saturday afternoon in the supplemental tournament qualifying round over the Druid Hills golf course. This, with the other tournament now running, gives six flights in the two tournaments.

Catchers—Joe Jenkins, Bill Rumler, A. Jarosick.
Infielders—R. Bisland, H. Eibel, L. E. Tullos.
Outfielders—Timeon Bowden, George Kircher.

Manager Bill Smith has signed up another young twirler for a try-out this spring. He is Tom Green, a big right-hander from the school, amateur and semi-pro ranks of Wilmington, N. C.

Green is rated as one of the best semi-pro twirlers in that section. Against the Phillies last spring, he twirled three games and the hard-hitting Dooinites failed to do anything with his delivery. In two of the games they got but two hits off of Green.

Green is well known by George Whitted, the Braves' utility man. He and George played on the same school team a few years ago.

The signing of Green brings the total of contracts in the safe of the local club up to fourteen, with twelve more yet to be signed up.

Those that are not signed are not kicking. It is just a question of time to get the documents from them. The signing is a mere formality.

LANIER HIGH DEFEATS G. M. A. QUINTET, 44-18

The Lanier quintet, from the renowned city of Macon, Ga., sufficiently demonstrated their ability to play basketball Saturday afternoon, when they defeated the Georgia Military academy five by the count of 40 to 18. The Lanier quint played great ball, and throughout the entire contest held the lead.

During the first half both teams were slow in starting, and the initial goal was shot by G. M. A., after which Lanier's heavy artillery got their sights trained for the baskets, and at the end of this period the count stood 23 to 9 in their favor.

G. M. A. was unable to do anything very spectacular in the second half, and the extent of their scoring was to make the same number of points as they scored during the first half, while the Macon bunch were adding 17 points to their score, making the final count read: Lanier 40, G. M. A. 18.

For the visitors the playing of Morgan, who scored 24 points during the setto; the work of Day and O'Hara, the two guards, and the general all-round playing of the entire team were the features of the contest. Lanier presented a very formidable attack, and their passing was always fast and accurate.

For G. M. A. the playing of Porter, Barr, Bennett and Babcock was the best. Barr led the attack with eight points.

Lanier (40).	Pos.	G. M. A. (18).
Morgan (24)	R. F.	Barr (8)
Fuss (6)	L. F.	Bennett (2), Porter (4)
Lowe (2)	C.	Babcock (4)
Dey (8)	R. G.	Cogswell, J. Cummings
O'Hara	L. G.	Battle

Summary: Referee, Villard (Grant A. C.). Time of halves, 15 minutes. Field goals, Lanier 19, G. M. A. 8. Foul goals, Morgan 2, Barr 2. Scorer, McNeil.

Central Baptist Wins.

In a fast and interesting game, Central Baptist sent the Boy Scouts of troup No. 2 down in defeat to the score of 26 to 5.

Grist was the only lad that made any showing at all. This lad shot all the points for the Scouts. While the playing of Jarrett, Jackson and Corley, for Central Baptist, was good, as a whole, the whole Central Baptist team showed up in good form.

Any team wishing to play practice games on Monday night, call Main 9299 and ask for Corley, or write W. E. Corley, care Bell Telephone company.

"HAVANA REDS" WILL PLAY HERE IN APRIL

They Sign for Games With the Crackers on April 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Manager Bill Smith received a letter from Jose Massageur, Jr., the well-known Cuban sporting writer, yesterday, accepting the terms of the local mogul for games between the "Havana Reds" and the Crackers here this spring.

The "Havana Reds" are one of the foremost baseball teams in Cuba. This is the team that played games with all the American and National league teams that visited Cuba last year. Massageur is their business manager.

Rodriguez, who plays first base for the Reds, is touted as one of the greatest young ball players in the world and it will only be a matter of a year or two until he is pastiming in the big show. Massageur says that he is better than Marsans.

In Gonzales, an 18-year-old boy, the Reds are said to have one of the best players on the island, and a pitcher that is destined to make a name for himself in baseball.

Mendietta is manager of the club and the players who will appear here are Rodes, Ferrer, Fernandez, Perez, Noriega, Font, Ogazon, Ballesteros and Herrera.

YELLOW JACKETS' PROSPECTS BRIGHT

With Six Veterans Back and Corking New Men, Tech Should Have Strong Nine.

By Hal Reynolds.

With six men on hand from last year's team, the Tech baseball nine will start practice with very rosy prospects for a good season. In addition to the six veterans there will be the usual big bunch of first-year men out for the team, as well as the men who formed the "Federal" team last spring.

Although Coach Heisman is out of town at present, he will return to the city the first of the week to take charge of the candidates. Until the weather gets warm the practice will merely consist of a little indoor work for the purpose of limbering up the men and getting them into condition for the strenuous training that will take place later on.

The large number of men (last year there were about 150) who turn out for the nine make this early season work necessary. By watching the men in their indoor work Coach Heisman can get a pretty good idea of what a man can do, and in this way he can reduce the size of the squad a great deal before the time comes for out-door work.

The Veterans.

The men present from the 1914 team are: Witherington, catcher; Bryant, pitcher; Burr, first base; Wooten, short; Hill, third base, and Tyler Montague, captain and centerfielder. This leaves only the keystone sack and a couple of outfield positions to be filled.

From the "Federal" team of last year the varsity will get the services of such men as Morrison, Senter, Carpenter and Preas, all of whom established some mighty good reputations for performances on the diamond before entering Tech.

The team should have some of the best brand of backstopping that any southern team can show during the campaign this spring. "Doc" Witherington was the choice of many writers for all-southern catcher last year, while "Froggie" Morrison did the receiving for the Texas A. and M. team two years ago. He also showed up well on the team at school last season. In addition to these two men there will be the usual number of new men to pick from.

Pitching Staff.

Although the pitching staff will miss the services of two veterans, Pitts and Eubanks, who have served the school for a number of years, the team should not be weak on the mound by any means, as one regular, Bryant, and practically all of the second string hurlers are back in school.

Bryant will be remembered as the only twirler who was able to win a game from the Georgia team last season. He lost but few games last season, and with the added experience gained from a year's work, he should prove a mighty valuable man before the season advances very far. Garlington and Fetner should be much better than last year and ought to make someone hustle before they are beat out of a regular turn in the box.

Jim Senter proved his ability at school last year and should experience very little trouble in making a place. He frequently let the varsity down with one and two hits in the games last spring between the Federals and the regular team. Carpenter was also good last year, but whether or not his football injury will prevent him from playing remains to be seen.

Burr, who held down the first base position on last year's nine, will most likely be back for service this spring. He is at present out of school, but contemplates returning before the baseball season progresses very far.

Preas on First.

Since Burr's natural position is in the outfield, he being shifted over to the place in the absence of a good first-sacker a year ago, he may once more hold down a position in the outer works, provided that good first basemen are available. Jim Preas held down the initial cushion for the Feds last season in acceptable manner and will receive a try-out for the place this spring. He played first for the champion Riverside nine of two years ago.

Ed Montague, who held down second base last year, is in school but will not be eligible, as he has played his four years out. Edgar's brother, Tyler, played second during the early part of the season of 1914, but was later shifted into the outfield. Merrill Holland, who has substituted at the place for the last two years, should give all candidates a hot run for the place.

Short and third both will present the two men, Wooten and Hill, who held them down last season. There is a chance that Wooten may resume his place in the outfield and Hill switched over to the position of short. Hill played short before entering Tech, but was shifted over to the hot corner in the absence of a capable third-sacker. He played ball all of last summer with the Washington, Ga., amateur team and picked up a great deal of experience. He should make a strong bid for the all-southern selection this year.

Wooten put up a good game at short last season, considering the fact that he is an outfielder. He showed up well with the stick last year and should be especially valuable to the team. Spence, who made his letter in football, subbed at third last year and with a year's experience may land the job at the far station. His hitting was good last year.

Two Fielders Gone.

The outfield returns but one old face from the three that were present last year. Captain Pound, who graduated, and Johnston, who is out of school, are the two missing, while Captain Montague returns to worry his opponents by his phenomenal work.

While both Pound and Johnston were good men, they will not be missed very much. Montague made the all-southern easily last year and should experience very little trouble in landing on it again. He is one of the best base-runners that have ever represented the local school, and is also a very strong man with the bat in a pinch. Last year, he seldom failed to score a man that was within scoring distance of the plate.

Malone, who held down an outfield berth on the 1913 nine, is back in school and ought to stand a good chance of making the team. He is a good hitter and a consistent fielder.

Since only the men who were in school last year have been taken into consideration, it can readily be seen that with the new men on hand, the Jackets have a splendid opportunity of developing a first-rate team. Last year, the team was in the running for the championship until the final series, when Georgia put them out of the fight.

Last year's team was a very erratic one, rarely ever going for long without blowing up. In most of the two-game series that the team played, they would win one game handily and then on the next day would give the game away by making numerous miscues.

Last season's nine did not number a single slugger on its roster, but it is hoped that out of the new men, last year's scrubs and Feds, that there will be two or three men who are able to slaughter the old horse-hide.

Fifty Teams Have Organized "Turkey League" at Y. M. C. A.

Everything is now ready for the staging of the biggest event of the season when fifty teams composed of Atlanta's most prominent business men, young men, high school, employed and grade school boys begin their series of games in the "Turkey league" Monday, February 1.

This is rather a novel feature and will be run in connection with the physical department of the local Young Men's Christian association. The league will be divided into three divisions, men's, boys' and club boys', and it derives its name from the fact that every man taking part in the athletic events will attend a big turkey supper at the close of the series, for which he pays 25c. There will be three suppers, one for the men's department, boys' department and the club boys.

The Divisions.

The men's division will consist of four teams from the older business men's class, which meets regularly Mondays and Thursday at 5:15 and who will compete in volley ball and a relay race.

The young business men's class, consisting of six teams, which meet Tuesday and Friday evenings at 8 p. m., and the young men's class, also with six teams, meeting Monday and Thursday at 8 p. m. Both of these classes will compete in basketball, 75-yard dash and 1-lap relay race.

The boys' division will be composed of the following: Six teams from the school intermediates; four teams from the employed intermediates; eight teams from class B boys, or boys between the age of 12 and 14 years; eight teams from school A boys, or boys between the age of 14 and 17; four teams from the younger employed boys and four teams from the club boys' class.

All the teams in this division will compete in basketball, one track event and a relay race, with the exception of the school B boys, who will compete in volley ball instead of basketball.

Shields to Winners.

To stimulate keen competition among the various classes in each division there will be two handsome shields presented, one to the winner of the boys' division and one to the winner of the men's division.

As all classes in each division will not compete in the same event and as it would hardly be fair in the men's division for the young men to be pitted against the older business men, the scoring will be placed on a percentage basis.

That is, the team winning the basketball or volley ball game will be awarded 10 points.

For the relay race 5 points and for the track event, 5, 3 and 1 points will be given for first, second and third place in this event, so to determine the team's standing the possible points for the evening will be divided by the total points made giving the team its percentage.

At the close of the series the team in each division having the highest per cent will be awarded the shield at the supper.

SKELTON TO PLAY ROGERS ON MONDAY

Brady Skelton, manager of the Montgomery billiard parlors, will tie up in a 100-ball pocket billiard match Monday night at 8 o'clock with Andy Rogers, of New York.

Rogers is one of the foremost pool players of the world, and is the one man that Champion Alfred DeOro fears.

Rogers is also one of the leading trick shot players of the country, and will exhibit his fancy shots after the match game with Skelton.

TROUBLE WITH PONCE DE LEON WAS THEY WERE NOT DOING FOX TROT AND THE HESITATION IN HIS SAD DAYS

Elixir of Youth Isn't Anything to Drink, Says Britt Craig, It's Something to Dance—In These Strange and Eventful Days, Miss Debutante and What Goes With Her Aren't Two in the Shade Compared to Foxy Grandpa on a Ballroom Floor.

By Britt Craig.

Nobody has ever accused me of being an explorer. I have never boasted of any particular ability in that direction, although during my day I have discovered that mixed drinks aren't conducive to equilibrium, and that if there is anything on earth more beautiful than a beautiful woman, it's a beautiful girl.

Then, too, I have discovered that mornings-after can be avoided only by passing up nights-before and that ice water furnishes one of the most shining examples of the infidelity of man. But all these do not put me in the Christopher Columbus class.

As I say, my exploring ability will never make history. Aided and abetted by a street car, however, and enough nerve to attend a formal dinner-dance without a dress suit, I did accomplish something in the exploring line that outdid Ponce de Leon with his months of fruitless travel and hardship in quest of the fountain of youth he didn't find.

Where he took a young army, several months off and an unlimited expense account, I took a trolley car. Our explorations likewise differ in that I found what Ponce de Leon didn't—a first-class fountain of youth.

It was gushing forth in volumes, and there drinking from its effervescent depths were near-octogenarians who slapped age in the face, scorned rheumatism and locked arms with youth.

THEY WEREN'T FOUNTING IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

But the discovery of this fountain cannot in anywise reflect upon the failure of Ponce de Leon. The fountain of youth—or, rather, this particular sort of fountain—did not exist in his day.

Instead of the lithia of youth from a hillside spring, this fountain of my discovery emitted seductive music and visions of beautifully gowned women dancing beautiful steps in a metropolitan dining room. It was a dinner-dance from 10 until 2 a. m.—youth's own chosen hours.

It is at this fountain that Atlanta's gay-young-old men of affairs imbibe the elixir of youth.

The Sunday editor had said:

"Why is it Atlanta's old men are so young?"

And I had promptly answered:

"Search me!"

When he ordered:

"Go out and find out!"

Had I been a sailor I would have replied:

"Aye, aye, sir!"

A newspaper man, instead, I said: "Sure!"

As though it were a mere matter of going across the street and asking O'Leary.

I went in and consulted members of the society staff.

"On this particular night," I asked them, "where might I be able to find the representative men of affairs of Atlanta who are so old they're ashamed to admit their birthdays?"

SOCIETY STAFF MAKES STRATEGIC BLUNDER.

"At home," she informed me with the emphasis of one having made a startling revelation.

"But I'm not speaking of where they should be."

They consulted the society editor's assignment book. It disclosed many places, principally an elaborate dinner-dance. The thought struck me amidships:

Ah, it must be the song of the bul-bul and the sweep of the dancers and the dinner cocktail that restoreth their youth. We shall explore!

I caught the trolley car with Ponce de Leon's name on it and, in due time, arrived. The lobby of the hotel, its floor gleaming from excessive scrubbing and naked of the rugs that had been removed for dancing purposes, was practically deserted, except for the bell boys and pages and doormen and a house detective who had tried to disguise himself in a dress coat.

A house detective hasn't any more business in a dinner suit than a crawfish in a chicken pie. The spectacle of a square-toed bull with a No. 16 collar and a 6⅞ hat flopping around in a swallow-tail trying to find some place to keep his hands isn't any inspiring picture.

Every hotel that can afford a house detective, however, has to put him on display on dress occasions, and shows just how far a badge and dress suit would spoil an otherwise good truck driver.

But caution bade me speak with more or less cordiality to this house detective. Back in the depths I heard the hum of voices and the soft strains of an orchestra, and it occurred to me that dinner was in progress.

Under the withering glare of the ubiquitous house sleuth, I stole upstairs to the mezzanine floor and cast about for a convenient spot to hide myself. There was no place to be found that did not offer conspicuousness. The mezzanine floor looked as though the house detective, himself, had designed that floor with a view to concentration of effort.

SOMETHING NEW—HIDING IN SPOTLIGHT.

Search as I might, I could not find a nook in which I could conceal my undress-suited self, until my eyes happened upon a spotlight erected in a corner of a balcony that extended out over the cafe.

I felt like embracing this "spot" rack like a long lost friend who had returned in a time of direst need. I snitched a chair and sat down beside it. A few feet away sat the musicians who gazed with apparent thirst upon the hurrying waiters underneath them.

The spot light was being used to light the path of a professional dancing team who pirouetted through the maze of diners in the main cafe amidst a hubbub of exclamations, mostly from men.

My nook was splendid for observatory purposes, as it commanded a view of every corner of the spacious dining room. I glanced over the immense throng, and one of the first things that struck my attention was that fully two-thirds of the men seated at the tables had passed their half-century mile-post. Some were plumb beyond redemption.

And I shook hands with myself for having come to the place where, even though they may not find it, Atlanta's men of wealth and affairs, at least, came in quest of youth.

Later, I was to observe conclusively that they not only searched, but found. It might not have been genuine, but it was artificial enough to pass without criticism. It may leave a dark brown taste in tomorrow's mouth, but, my! what a good time while it lasted!

ALREADY BEGGING FOR A TUNE.

The diners were hurrying through their final courses that they might speed the dancing. Even now furtive eyes were lifted to the orchestra in telepathic appeal for a lively dance tune. The musicians were contemptibly idle, resting upon their instruments and looking down upon their patrons as though they were spoiled children.

I gazed across the way and beheld a judge of my acquaintance whose austere dignity on the bench was nothing short of awesome. I had once been a martyr

To Mr. and Mrs. Turner.

A brilliant reception recently given in McDonough, Ga., by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Marion Smith was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lesley Turner, whose marriage recently took place in Covington.

The handsome home presented an attractive appearance with its brilliant lights and its decorations of southern smilax, feathery ferns and stately palms.

On the mahogany mantel in the drawing room, where the receiving line stood, a tall crystal vase filled with pink carnations and narcissus was arranged with pleasing effect. The same flowers were used in the library, where music was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. White throughout the evening.

A bevy of charming girls served punch from bowls artistically grouped on a stand in the spacious hall, behind which ferns and palms were massed. In the dining room the beautifully appointed table had for its centerpiece a crystal basket filled with bridesmaid roses and the color scheme of pink and white was further carried out in heart-shaped mints and shaded tapers. During the evening an elaborate buffet luncheon was served.

The bride was beautiful in her wedding gown of duchess satin and rare point lace with trimmings of seed pearls. Her corsage bouquet was orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Smith was gowned in ivory colored tulle over white satin, with a corsage bouquet of pink roses.

Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Turner were Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Craft, mother and sister of the groom.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. H. H. Neal, Mrs. Julian Weems, Misses Eileen Neal, Nina Wall and Bess Fouche.

About 150 guests called during the evening. Among those from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Head and Miss Eloise Harrell, of Atlanta; Mrs. Jack Craft, of Hartwell; Miss Sarah Smith, of Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dennis, of Macon, and Mrs. Ward, of Stockbridge.

Brinkley-Wynne.

Miss Rosa Brinkley and Mr. Ralph Jones Wynne were married on the afternoon of Thursday, the 28th, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. T. A. Brinkley.

The parlors and staircase were attractively decorated with southern smilax and other greenery. Palms and ferns, massed together in the soft light from unshaded candles, formed a lovely background for the bridal party.

Just before the ceremony Mrs. George Cecil Young, of Thomson, Ga., sang "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms." Miss Ruth Carline, of Alva, Okla., cousin of the bride, rendered the wedding music. Little Miss Harriet Wynne, niece of the groom, carrying a basket of pink roses, was ribbon bearer, and little Miss Mary Louise Doster, niece of the bride, carried the ring in a calla lily.

Miss Brinkley, wearing a tailored blue cloth and hat of taupe and blue, and carrying a bouquet of bridesmaid roses and valley lilies, descended the stairs case on the arm of the groom to the bridal music from Craig.

Dr. Horace M. DuRose, pastor of the First Methodist church, performed the ring ceremony in his usual impressive manner.

At the wedding reception Mrs. J. C. Brinkley served punch.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. Doster and children, of Oxford, Ga.; Miss Ruth Carlin, Alva, Okla.; Mrs. G. O. Young, Miss Florence Brinkley, Thomson, Ga.; Miss Louise Gaissert, Sparta, Ga.; Mr. Edwin Jones, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Surprise Party.

Among the pleasant events of last week was the surprise party given in honor of Mr. W. H. Berry at his home. A progressive game was played, after which a luncheon was served. Those invited were Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Hodo, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Berry, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mason, Mrs. Hampton, Miss Lillye Few and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Berry.

Woman's Study Club.

The Woman's Study club will hold its regular meeting Thursday afternoon, February 4, at 3 o'clock at Carnegie library. Miss Whaley will give a talk on the "Constitution of the United States." Rev. J. J. Hall will speak on the peace movement and the subject of Mrs. Chambers' talk will be the part Georgia is expected to do in the world's work for peace. All interested are invited.

The 1913 Embroidery Club.

Mrs. Byron Bettis entertained the 1913 Embroidery club at a pretty luncheon at her home on Howell Mill road the past week.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was an old-fashioned spelling bee. Miss Helen Lumpkin, Miss Bessie Bunstead, Mrs. Frank Bunstead and Miss Annie Mae Jenkins, four of the contestants, were not able to be spelled down. After a drawing contest Miss Annie Mae Jenkins was the lucky winner of the prize, a hand-painted vase.

Later the guests assembled in the dining room, where a delicious luncheon was served.

The club will next be entertained by Mrs. Jim Newton at her home on Highland avenue on February 5.

Arts and Crafts.

The arts and crafts committee of College Park Woman's club, through its chairman, Miss Mary Gray, will present an unusually attractive program on Wednesday afternoon, February 3.

Miss Cone will talk on "Art," and will also display an exhibition of pictures kindly loaned by Cole Book company. The music will be in charge of Miss Emma Jones.

Mrs. Beers to Entertain.

Mrs. Harold W. Beers will entertain informally Wednesday morning at home for Mrs. H. Thomas Heid, of Indianapolis, who will be the guest of Mrs. Frank Berry; for Miss Elise Brown, a bride-elect, and for Mrs. Guy Woolford's guests, Miss Fremere and Miss Woolford.

"42 Special" Club.

Mrs. Fred Hunter was the charming hostess Thursday afternoon, when she entertained her "42 Special" club at her home in Oakland City. After the game a delightful luncheon was served at small tables. Special features during the afternoon were readings given by Mrs. Neil Jones and beautiful piano solos were rendered by Mrs. W. H. Burgess. Those present were: Mrs. W. H. Burgess, Mrs. A. Dobbs, Mrs. J. Clark Layton, Mrs. W. M. Nichols, Mrs. E. P. Williamson, Mrs. H. G. Pierce, Mrs. J. P. Hunter, Mrs. W. B. Calhoun, Mrs. R. J. Ingram, Mrs. J. M. Lanham, Mrs. Jack Salmon, Mrs. Nell Jones and Mrs. Fred Hunter.

Argentine Club Dance.

The Argentine club will entertain the members and their friends with an informal dance at the clubrooms in West End Friday evening, February 5, which promises to be one of the brightest events of the week for the younger set.

For Crippled Children's Home.

The sophomores of the Washington seminary who have been interested in the crippled children's clinic since they were in the sub-freshman class, invested in two gross of the pencils to sell for their benefit.

A club composed of Elizabeth Crawford, Jane Coleman, Margaret Tillman, Gladys Griffin, Martha Bratton and Margaret May Pippold from the sixth grade of the seminary voted to give dues they had saved amounting to $3 to the fund for crippled children.

Annual Meeting.

The Uncle Remus Memorial association will hold its annual meeting and election of officers at the Winecoff hotel Tuesday, February 2, at 11 o'clock.

Each officer and chairman is expected to read her year's report.

This meeting, of unusual interest to all members of the association, will be followed by a luncheon at 1 o'clock, to which each member is most cordially invited. The honor guests of the occasion will be Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wagoner, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Camp, and the gentlemen of the advisory board. As the association is planning a beautiful reception to the visiting ladies of the Georgia D. A. R. conference in February, the luncheon on Tuesday will not be complimentary, as on other occasions, but each member will be served a delicious luncheon at 50 cents per plate. Reservations should be made early as possible through Mrs. Thomas T. Stevens, treasurer.

Kelly-Weisinger.

Mrs. Marshall Barnard Kelly has issued cards announcing the marriage of her daughter, Ruby Anne, to Mr. John Faber Weisinger, on Wednesday, January 27, in the city of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Weisinger will be at home at the Tampa Bay hotel, Tampa, Fla., after February 12.

Supper-Dance.

The guests of the Adair hotel entertained at a beautiful supper on last Saturday night in honor of Miss Wyolene Love Purtell and Mr. Keum Perry, whose wedding takes place Tuesday, February 2. The table was beautiful in pink roses and narcissi. About sixty guests were entertained and speeches were made by Judge Roan, Mr. Will Curtis and Mr. B. H. Rowe. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Curtis, Mr. Will Curtis Jr., Walter Curtis, Miss Emmet Curtis, of Columbus, Ga., and Mr. J. L. Woods, of Nashville, Tenn. After supper dancing was enjoyed.

To Overcome Winter Complexion Troubles

If the chill air causes your skin to dry and scale or become unduly red or spotted, before you go to bed spread a thin film of ordinary mercolized wax over your entire face. Remove next morning with warm water. This is the ideal complexion treatment for the winter girl. The wax gently absorbs the dead particles of surface skin, so gradually there's no discomfort. This gives the underlying skin a chance to breathe and to show itself. In a week or so the new and younger skin is wholly in evidence and you have a really matchless complexion. Naturally all the defects disappear with the discarded cuticle—as chaps, roughness, blotches, pimples, freckles, blackheads. Usually an ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is enough to renovate even the worst complexion.

Wrinkles need bother you no more if you'll use this simple face wash: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. Just one application will affect even the deepest lines, and soon your skin will be smooth as a child's.—(adv.)

Informal Dances Added Much to Gayety of Past Week

The gayety of the past week leaned largely to informal entertaining, and even with extra events on the calendar of informal club dances, there was the usual dancing enthusiasm and large attendance on every occasion.

The largest of these entertainments was the informal dance at the Capital City club Thursday night under the auspices of the educational committee, Atlanta Woman's club, Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, chairman. The presence of several hundred guests netted a comfortable sum for the club's educational work.

Features of the evening were demonstrations of the more elaborate ballroom dances by Miss Ethel Moulton and Mr. Robert Bell, of the Georgian Terrace, and interpretative dancing by Miss Helen Stewart.

Miss Stewart's Dancing.

The work of Miss Stewart, who is the pretty school girl daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stewart, was like a breath of the spring-time woods wafted through the brilliant superficial atmosphere of the ballroom, and leaving behind the fragrant reminiscence of buoyant youth and naivete.

Making her entrance for Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" without the music of the orchestra, Miss Stewart's own rhythmic movement suggested its own music, and merged almost unconsciously into the matchless grace of Mendelssohn's translation of the spirit of spring, when the orchestra took up its part. As fresh as the dancer's girlhood was her airy conception of the song. She followed it with an expression nearly as spontaneous and charming of the beauty of Chaminade's "Flatterer," reading through the music the posey of that inborn coquetry which, when it is inherent in a woman, is irresistible.

At the Georgian Terrace.

At the Georgian Terrace on Friday night there was a company of two hundred or more for the fortnightly informal dance, and the occasion was one of the happiest of the week.

Among those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. John Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Read, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wessels, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Valdemar Gude, Mr. and Mrs. George Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Chipley, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hockaday, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Atchison, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Harrison of New York, Mrs. Charles Miller and the Misses Miller, of Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, Mrs. Ida H. Cranson, Mrs. Horace Jones, Miss Erna Eiseman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. King, Miss Madge Horne, Miss Anna Terhune, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Worthen, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Beck, Miss Adelaide Singleton, Miss Aline Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. George Nicolson, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ruse, Miss Corinne Wellhouse, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell and Miss Eugenia Caldwell of Chattanooga, Miss Bishop, the Misses Robinson of Philadelphia, Miss Mel Horine, Miss Madeline Bellinger, Miss Lee Harvey, Lieutenant Bailey, Mr. Russell Richards, Mr. W. G. Chipley, Jr., Mr. Sarton Lewis, Mr. Cail Johnson, Mr. T. B. Higdon, Mr. F. M. McGonigal, Dr. J. A. Gentry, Mr. John Armistead, Mr. Jack Pappenheimer, Mr. W. E. Brown, Mr. Sidwin Jones, Mr. Walter Hill, Dr. Charles P. Hodge, Mr. Prince Webster, Mr. Eugene Haynes, Dr. A. G. DeLoach, Dr. J. G. Williams, Mr. Winter Affriend and others.

At the Capital City Club.

The popularity of the informal dance found another proof last night at the Capital City club, when the first of a series of Saturday night dances assembled a congenial gathering of the dancing element.

This event, like the Tuesday night dances, was delightfully informal, and adds one more bright feature to the week's social calendar.

CONYERS, GA.

The Maids and Matrons' club had a most enjoyable meeting with Mrs. Tharpe Baldwin on Wednesday afternoon. The afternoon was very pleasantly spent doing fancy work of all kinds. Delightful refreshments were served.

Those present were Mrs. H. H. Elliott, Mrs. Shellie Elliott, Mrs. Cliff Patrick, Mrs. John Hanna, Misses Mary Lou Tucker, Grace Francis, Kate O'Kelley and Mrs. Tharpe Baldwin and Mrs. Augustus Corley, of Edgefield, S. C.

Mrs. E. O. Leftwich was hostess to the Sewing club on Thursday afternoon.

The members of the U. D. C. were entertained at the home of Mrs. W. S. Veal on Tuesday afternoon, and an interesting program a salad course was served.

The members of the Civic league held an important meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. D. C. Langford was the charming hostess to the Matrons' club on Wednesday afternoon. Assisting in entertaining were Misses Rosalie Langford and Nellie Belle Street, and Mrs. Harry Langford. At a late hour tempting refreshments were served.

Mrs. Augustus Corley, of Edgefield, S. C., is the guest of her mother, Mrs. R. H. Cannon.

Miss Sally Fanny Gleaton attended the annual conference of the missionary societies which was held in Augusta this week.

ROCKMART GA.

Mrs. Harry Ferguson was a pleasing hostess to the Woman's Christian Temperance union Wednesday afternoon. The next meeting, with Mrs. Wesley Hubbard, will be devoted to civics, with Mrs. Rob Everett chairman, and a practical, interesting afternoon is anticipated. Mrs. Ferguson served each guest with a delicious course tea, with salad and crackers.

Misses Lovella and Ruth Wilson gave a theater party Monday night at the Palace theater. After the play a hot repast was served at Pinches.

Miss Isabelle Clark has returned to Augusta, having been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark.

Mrs. Tom Clements honored the seventieth birthday of her mother, Mrs. M. E. Williamson, with a spend-the-day party the 22d.

Mrs. Lamar Smith entertained at dinner recently in honor of her husband's birthday.

Dr. and Mrs. G. M. White had as their guests for tea Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark and Mr. Callaghan.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mack will christen their little daughter, Grace Latimer.

Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Gibson, of Villa Rica, will be the guests of friends here for a week.

Miss Florence Hubbard spent Sunday in Rome.

A unique "Dixie prohibition" chorus will be sung Sunday at the Baptist church by a large choir of girls.

FATE OF BURNS' AGENTS NOW IN HANDS OF JURY

contended. He stated that Solicitor Dorsey is his dear friend and exonerated him from any complicity.

Judge Powell made a scathing attack upon the testimony of Ragsdale, and stated that if Ragsdale's statement is true, Attorneys Rosser and Brandon are as guilty as the rest. He declared that Ragsdale committed perjury upon the stand both in his statements and demeanor.

"Ragsdale is perjuring himself now," said Judge Powell; "to play in with the solicitor general and save his poor old hide. He is looking for protection."

Judge Powell closed with eulogising character sketches of the defendants, and called the attention of the jury to the fact that Lehon is a man with a family.

POWELL'S THEORY.

The theory of the case, as presented to the jury by Judge Powell, was that Ragsdale needed money and thought that there was a "big Jew slush fund," and decided to testify on the Frank side of the case with the hope of getting money.

When the money gave out on this score, Ragsdale would then appeal for help on account of his financial embarrassments, and would proceed otherwise to try to get more money. But, contended Judge Powell, Ragsdale did not get the first money he had expected, or he would never have stopped until he got more. Failing to get money there, Ragsdale turned elsewhere, wherefore the recanting of his affidavit was not due to a prick of conscience at all. In proof of this, Judge Powell declared that had conscience been the motive, Ragsdale would not have lied on the stand in the present trial, as Judge Powell alleged to the jury he did.

Solicitor Dorsey, in opening his argument, declared to the jury that if they found in their minds the slightest reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendants he did not want their verdict.

"The defense," he said, "tries to make it appear that I am anxious to convict these men. My interest is no more than yours or any other good citizen. It does not mean a nickel in my pocket and it gives me no pleasure to prosecute these men, nor would it give me pleasure to convict them and separate them from their friends and families."

He stated that if the jury is convinced of the guilt of the defendants, it is their duty as jurors to return a verdict of guilty.

Offsetting the contention of the defense that Ragsdale's misstatements constituted perjury, Solicitor Dorsey cited that Attorneys Rosser and Brandon, "able lawyers with trained legal minds," and the stenographer, "have also became confused and had to correct their statements, wherefore it was to be expected that Barber and Ragsdale, under terrific strain, would make mistakes.

IMMUNITY BATH DENIED.

Regarding Judge Powell's charge that Ragsdale is playing for the mercy of Dorsey, the solicitor said:

"The defense insinuates a promise of immunity for Ragsdale and Barber. That is untrue. But when they come into court and plead guilty, as they will, I will plead the old man's unfortunate predicament by which he was used as putty in the hands of Thurman, Tedder and Lehon, and will ask the mercy of the court, though I have never made any such pomise. If you were solicitor general," he said to the jury, "who would you put on trial first, these instigators here or the old man they used as a cat's paw? Ragsdale and Barber will suffer, but they will suffer more for the crime of these three defendants than they will for their own crimes."

Solicitor Dorsey declared that Thurman was the man who got Ragsdale into the original trouble that led to all the rest. He dared the defense to lay hands on a single deed which was not attested by Thurman.

The defense protested, but Judge Hill ordered Dorsey to proceed, although Dorsey offered to allow the defense time to reply to that charge.

When the solicitor declared that Burns came to Atlanta to upset things and to send Pat Campbell, Starnes and other city detectives to the penitentiary, the defense again protested that there was nothing in the evidence to support the statement. Judge Hill allowed the solicitor to proceed.

OPPORTUNITY OF LIFETIME.

"You have the opportunity of a lifetime," said Mr. Dorsey to the jury, "to throw back into the teeth of the Burns men the crookedness they came here to do."

Solicitor Dorsey outlined the theory of the case, as follows:

Frank is convicted. Enter Burns and Lehon. Times flies; something must be done quickly. There he said:

"I'll bet there was rejoicing in Burnsdom when those affidavits were signed, and Tedder and Lehon were the heroes of the moment.

He cited Attorney Haas as saying that Burns was here eating up money, and he said that the money was paid just at the time the affidavits were made.

Money was needed. Ragsdale was in Thurman's hands. Thurman needed money. Burns was hungry. Lehon was anxious. Enter Tedder. "I would have told them all that both Tedder and Bill Smith knew for nothing," said Mr. Dorsey, "and they could have saved that $500."

"I knew that Tedder was working for Dorsey," said Dorsey, "but neither Tedder nor Bill Smith claim that I put Tedder up to it. But if they did claim that I put Tedder up to anything I was going on and that I knew about it, I would require oaths other than from Tedder and Billy Smith. Judge Powell exonerates me, but I seek nowhere else to lay responsibility. If this had been going on in my office I would have known about it."

Solicitor Dorsey read the contract between Tedder and Burns agency, which stipulated that all information furnished by Tedder must be the truth.

OFFER AN INSULT.

"The offer of such a contract as that," said Mr. Dorsey, "would have been an insult to an honest man."

After pointing out that the principal function of a contract is to stipulate the compensation for services rendered, he cited that the contract between Tedder and the Burns agency stipulated that the compensation should be an amount verbally agreed upon previously, and did not state the amount.

"The sense of this," said Mr. Dorsey, "is, 'Deliver, Mr. Tedder!'

"On that contract," continued Mr. Dorsey to the jury, "$250 was paid immediately. Maybe you can wash that down, if you are just tired bent on turning these men loose anyway."

Mr. Dorsey stated that the defense, contrary to its claim, did not produce evidence until the prosecution showed them that they could produce the evidence anyhow. He cited the remarkable fact that the expense accounts of Tedder for going around the country had never been produced. He also pointed out that Rogers and other Burns operatives had numbers and made reports, but that it had not been shown that Tedder had a number, nor that he made any reports. There were other unproduced papers, which, Sears had said, were in Birmingham, which Dorsey declared could have been produced in Atlanta within five hours, had the defense been desirous of producing them. The register showing Tedder's presence in Birmingham, Dorsey declared, had been tampered with, and there was no evidence to show that Tedder had been elsewhere on the $250 expense money.

MEMORY FAILS.

After citing the testimony of Dr. Wildauer as to the specific amount and specific date of payment to Lehon, Dorsey cited the record in the Frank case to show that fourteen days after Lehon declared that his memory was not clear on the point and that it was after much "poking" to the facts that Lehon told the facts.

He held Lehon up to ridicule as the great detective who "couldn't remember."

He also criticised Lehon as a detective upon the allegation that Lehon was not familiar with the contents of the Ragsdale affidavit further than that Thurman knew "a preacher" who knew something, and letting the affidavit be made on this much knowledge.

He interpreted this to mean that Thurman was holding Ragsdale in the offing until he was assured of his money before he disclosed the identity of his man to the Burns people.

He declared that if any honest citizen had known what Ragsdale was supposed to have known, no power could have held it quiet.

In speaking of the difficulties a solicitor has to labor under to get the evidence on the right men, Dorsey said to the jury:

"It's a job to catch 'em; don't let 'em go."

Argument Begins.

Argument in the case began at 3:25 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when each side rested its case, and Mr. Clair Adams, an attorney of New Orleans, La., opened the argument in behalf of the detectives with a brilliant speech, in which he branded as false every part of Rev. C. B. Ragsdale and R. L. Barber's testimony.

The defense, throughout the morning hours, introduced evidence tending to impeach Ragsdale's testimony. Several grand jurors were called, and when I. N. Hirsch was placed on the witness stand by Judge Powell to tell what Ragsdale told the grand jury last Monday, a lively tilt ensued between the grand juror and Solicitor Dorsey, who asked him if he had not told about Ragsdale's testimony before the grand jury to the attorneys for the defense.

Had Consulted Counsel.

Mr. Hirsch admitted he had informed the defense's attorneys of Ragsdale's conflicting testimony. Mr. Dorsey then reminded him of his oath as a grand juror, but Mr. Hirsch retorted that he had advised the defense's attorneys after consulting counsel as to his right to do so.

Shortly after the beginning of the afternoon session, the three defendants, Dan S. Lehon, C. C. Tedder and Arthur Thurman, were placed on the witness stand to make their statements.

Thurman and Tedder denied any knowledge of money being paid to Ragsdale for his sensational affidavit alleging that he had overheard a confession of Jim Conley to slaying Mary Phagan in the National Pencil factory.

Lehon also denied any knowledge of the alleged payment of a considerable sum of money to Ragsdale for the affidavit, and during his statement bitterly assailed the tactics of the city police, charging them with persecution of himself and the Burns detectives.

Burns' lieutenant was severe in his statements:

"The police of the city have willfully persecuted me, and the Pinkerton detective agency has been behind the whole affair. I was treated worse than a dog when I visited police station to investigate the Frank case evidence.

Mobbed in Marietta.

"I was nearly mobbed in Marietta, Ga., and throughout I have been needlessly dragged into a number of courts, and placed in embarrassing positions. The city police even tried me at one time on the minor charge of working as a detective here without a license, I did no work as a detective myself."

In Mr. Hirsch's testimony it was brought out that Ragsdale had made an impression on the grand jurors that he was not at himself when he states he made the sensational affidavit, purporting a confession of Jim Conley.

M. E. Lively, another member of the present grand jury, was brought upon the witness stand, and under cross-examination by Judge Powell he testified that Ragsdale had testified that he was not at himself, meaning mentally, throughout the whole affair.

Two other star witnesses for the defense were two Baptist ministers, T. E. McCutcheon, of Lithonia, and J. J. Jackson, of Atlanta. They testified that they had called on Ragsdale after he had recanted his affidavit and stated that he (Ragsdale) had told them that he didn't know why he ever made the affidavit.

Said He Felt "Hazy."

"He said he had a drink of water in Thurman's office, and after that he felt 'hazy,' and only remembered he had gone to another office and signed a paper," they both swore. "He said they started to give him a drink of water out of a small glass in Thurman's office, and somebody said, 'No, get the big one,' and that after that he felt dazed. He said he went back to Thurman's office the next day to see the paper he had signed, but it was not shown him."

The defense then put on a number of witnesses to show that Tedder had paid a number of good-sized debts during last April and the beginning of last May. This was done to account for the way in which $500, given to Tedder by the Burns agency as a salary, was spent.

Witnesses were also introduced to show that during this month Tedder took a trip to Birmingham, and that much of the money was spent on this trip.

Throughout the morning and the afternoon it became evident that the jury was restless, and wished to finish with the case as early as possible. When asked by Judge Hill if they wished to adjourn the case until Monday they all replied that they wished to stay on the job until the case was ended.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—(adv.)

DRINK MORE WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble—Neutralizes Acids.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, weak and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist five ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Dabney Company Preparing For Their Auto Opening

Carpenters and painters have been busy for several days overhauling and preparing the pretty show rooms of the W. J. Dabney implement company, on Forsyth street, in anticipation of its automobile opening early the coming week.

Now en route to the company is its first shipment of Paige cars, which are expected to reach here Tuesday or Wednesday. A good shipment of Maxwell cars have already arrived, and are now on display.

Under the management of J. M. Boykin, the Dabney company has recently installed its auto department, and with a complete line of Paige and Maxwell cars, in which the best of the 1915 models are included, it is predicted by friends of the company that it will make a splendid success from the start. Both these lines of cars are not only well, but popularly known, in this territory.

Mr. Boykin will have the assistance of some of the best-known and most widely experienced men in the automobile game to aid in demonstrations and in the sales end. One of the men already secured by the Dabney company is W. M. Perryman, well and popularly known in this section as an energetic and high-class auto salesman. Mr. Perryman has been recently with one of the well-known auto houses of the city, and previous to that time was for four and a half years with the Ford agency in this city. Mr. Perryman's experience and wide acquaintance will bring early prestige to the auto department of this well-known farm implement company.

FORD PLAN BOOSTED AT NEW YORK DINNER

Reports of Active Sociological Workers Prove to Be a Big Feature.

It was a year ago, January 12, that the Ford Motor company put into operation the profit-sharing plan for Ford employees. In recognition of the gratifying results which in one year have been accomplished, a dinner to 200 Ford sociological workers, men intrusted with the distribution of these profits, was given at the Hotel Cadillac, Detroit, on the anniversary date. Henry Ford himself, Norval A. Hawkins, Charles A. Brownell, John R. Lee, Frank L. Klingensmith, Gordon MacGregor and other active executives of the Ford Motor company, were present. Remarks were made by Rev. S. S. Marquis, Hon. Charles B. Warrne, Kirk Alexander and Edward Guest.

The most interesting features of the dinner were the reports made by the active sociological workers, who, in their work of distributing profits to workmen that deserve them and know how to use them, have accomplished wonderful results in improving the living conditions and stimulating the ambitions and morals and patriotism of 15,000 workmen, representing fifty-six different nationalities. Perhaps this sentiment on each program best characterized the spirit of the remarkable gathering: "So closely interwoven are the moral and the spiritual with the material, that the higher wage almost immediately became secondary to the larger, fuller life, with wholesome living environment."

One officer of the Ford Motor company thus epitomized the Ford idea: "After all, the Ford car is but a means to this end. Our profit-sharing plan is a success."

DODGE CAR IS "SOME CLIMBER"

ing. Auburn had 3 called on them for the same reason.

During the intermission between halves a three-round boxing exhibition was staged between Douglass Barbour and Clarence Meeklin. Three furious rounds were fought and the bout was declared a draw by the referee, Russell Thompson. The decision was very popular.

The stars of the contest from an Atlanta standpoint were many, and every man who was in the game played good ball. Individually, Forbes, Dubard, J. Graves and Frank Carter put up good exhibitions of basketball. However, the main feature of the evening's entertainment was the team work of the club five. Their passing was fast and accurate throughout, and time after time they would work signal plays from the tip-off for pretty field goals.

The Auburn, Clements at right forward, played the best game. Clements has an uncanny habit of dropping foul goals and last night he shot four out of five chances. Louisell, at guard, and C. Forbes, also at center, also played well.

The line-up and summary:

Atlanta (28)	Pos.	Auburn (18)
Forbes (18)
Marvin (10)	R. F.	Clements (16)
J. Graves (10)
Frank Carter (4)	L. F.	Paine (6)
Dubard (12)	C.	C. Forbes (2)
		Louisell
Ed Carter (4)	L. G.	Louisell
F. Carter (18)		C. Forbes
Weaver (4)	L. G.	Burbage
		Schomberg

Summary—Time of halves, 20 minutes. Referee, Gilbert Govan (Grant Athletic club). Field goals, Atlanta 27, Auburn 7; fouls called, on Atlanta 5, on Auburn 3; fouls shot, Forbes 2, Clements 4.

Winning Teams Often Fail To Make the Fans Enthuse

BY BILLY EVANS,
(American League Umpire.)

Why are certain clubs, much inferior in playing strength to others, the better drawing cards? Why is it that the Philadelphia Athletics, one of the greatest teams of all times, should lose money last year while other clubs, which finished several notches lower in the race, should make money? Why should the Detroit team be a better drawing card than the world's champions? Such a condition existed in the American league last season.

Perhaps the first reason that should be advanced is that the Athletics outclassed the field. Much as the baseball fan loves a winner, he doesn't regard a cinch winner with high favor. That seems to be the way the Athletics appeared to the American league fans, Philadelphians in particular. Last season when the Athletics won something like forty out of forty-five games in a stretch, the attendance at Shibe park was very ordinary. Fifteen hundred fans would perhaps be a conservative estimate of some of the crowds that turned out to see the champions while on that mad winning streak, which really decided the pennant race.

The next reason that might be advanced, and probably it is just as important, is the fact that the average fan likes a tang with a lot of color. The Athletics were one great machine, every part working in unison, with the least possible noise. While the club boasted of a number of star players, they were stars who confined their brilliancy entirely to their work on the field. The club went on the ball field with a set purpose, that of winning, and, in a majority of cases, succeeded in so doing. The intention was simply to win with the least possible show, for the Athletics are anything but grand stand players. Fans got to feel that when the Athletics played it was a pretty good bet that the opposing team would be beaten if not overwhelmed, and the result would be brought about without anything out of the ordinary happening to liven up the proceedings.

Fans Like Close Games.

When the Philadelphia club was the attraction, there was little to say in advance of the meeting, except that the home team seemed to be in for a good trouncing. When other teams appeared, it was entirely different. There was always some angle to dwell upon, other than the probable outcome of the series. There was a chance that any number of things might happen, which would tend to enliven the proceedings, regardless of the outcome of the game. Whether it is a condition to be desired is questionable, but there is no denying the fact, that the average fan is often drawn out to the game with the hope that he will see something out of the ordinary, something that may not have a direct bearing on the game.

The Detroit club seven or eight years ago was a slugging aggregation. Fans went to the parks to see the Tiger batsmen wallop the opposing pitcher. While the club no longer boasts the old-time hitting strength, the past reputation still lives, perhaps because two of the leading hitters, Crawford and Cobb, still grace their old positions in the line-up. The fans get a great deal of pleasure out of seeing those two star batsmen in action. When Cobb steps to the plate, they are prepared for anything to happen; nothing that he may try to do would surprise them. They get a thrill when they see him start for a base. It is a treat to see him run and slide. The average fan always likes to see Cobb get on the Detroit lines in particular. For when Cobb reaches first base, it makes the position of Crawford all the more important. Sam Crawford, since his advent into the majors, has enjoyed the reputation of being a mighty hitter. A perusal of the records would show game after game which he has broken up with some mighty wallop at a most opportune time. Crawford is the poetry of motion at the plate. His position and swing are perfect. The best compliment I ever heard anyone pay Crawford was a remark of a usual remark made by a Boston fan. Dutch Leonard had succeeded in striking Sam out, only after he had driven two long foul flies, either of which would have broken up the game had they fallen safe.

Paid Crawford Unique Compliment.

"Why, that fellow Crawford looks like a great hitter when he strikes out," was the way the Bostonian expressed his opinion of the Tiger outfielder. To me that is a big bit of praise, for if a fellow impresses you as a great hitter when he strikes out, he surely must have some style at the plate when he comes to the bat. Crawford combination will still be talked about.

Then there is Hughey Jennings, the somewhat different manager. The thing original. When Jennings introduced his new style of coaching, featured by unintelligible remarks, and antics of a ballet dancer, the public placed its approval by flocking to the ball parks to see him perform. The stunt introduced in baseball in years was so widely advertised. Photographers were kept busy snapping Hughey in new poses, while scribes were kept busy grinding out new stories about Hughey's latest creation. All kinds of tales were printed, some of them as ridiculous as they were interesting. One would have a story saying that every move made by Jennings was a signal for the coacher or base runner, others told about how Jennings gave his signals through the medium of the weird remarks he uttered from the coaching lines.

While working in Washington five or six years ago, the man sitting next to me in the street car engaged me in conversation. He asked me if Detroit was the team playing Washington, and I replied in the affirmative. He wanted to know if Mr. Jennings would play. This question rather surprised me, from a man going out to a ball game.

"No, Mr. Jennings won't play," I answered, "but he will do some plain and fancy coaching unless he happens to be sick in bed." I was much pleased when the gentleman informed me he was not a regular baseball fan, for I couldn't figure how a real fan would ask if Jennings was going to play. I was even more surprised when he remarked:

"This is to be my first big league game. I never took much interest in baseball, but lately I have been unable to pick up a paper without reading something about this fellow Jennings, or seeing a picture of him in some acrobatic pose. Frankly my curiosity has been aroused. I am not at all interested in the game, but I want to see what this fellow Jennings really does. He must be a bit out of the ordinary or he never could have commanded the attention which the newspapers have given him. I have decided to see for myself."

The remarks of the stranger interested me. Before the game I told Hughey about the incident. "Do your best this afternoon," I remarked, "for it would be a shame to disappoint this fellow viewing his first big league game. The contest was made to order for Hughey's best act, for the Tigers were in a batting mood. When he appealed to Crawford to hit for two bases, Sam would come through with the wallop; when he muttered the outfielders to back up, Cobb would chase them to the fence with a long drive. It seemed as if his every order was carried out, naturally he looked at his best. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if Jennings made a regular baseball fan of that chap.

When the New York Giants play, the fans go out looking for McGraw to pull something, or see Mathewson at his best. When Washington played, Altrock and Schaefer received much attention. I know a lot of people who didn't approve of their knockabout tactics, yet I know a greater number who got their money's worth watching the two clowns in action. There is no denying the fact that the average fan likes a dash of the tabasco with his baseball diet.

EFFICIENCY METHODS FOR SHOP EMPLOYEES

Factory School Has Been Established by the Hupp Motor Car Company.

The education of shop employees along efficiency methods has for the past year or two commanded the attention of the entire industrial world. Big manufacturing establishments in various lines for a long time have had their factory schools, where employees are drilled to work with precision, safety and in a manner which will be to the employees' own advantage.

One of the first automobile manufacturers to see the light of educational work in benefiting not only to the employee, but also to the factory and factory product, is the Hupp Motor Car company, which recently established a factory school, open to all their employees.

It is the opinion of S. H. Humphrey, manufacturing manager, that it will not be long before the factory school will be as important a part of an automobile factory as any of its other departments.

"One idea in opening the factory school," said Mr. Humphrey, "is to teach our men to become efficient mechanics, to show them the fundamental principles back of motor car designing, to give them reasons for accurate and careful workmanship and to make them more valuable to themselves.

"This mechanical school will be a big benefit to every man who attends. We teach them the principles of motor car construction, how to read blue prints, the functions of the different parts of the engine, their relation to each other, why it is necessary that each man stick to his job and that we have no shirkers, and the results of shoddy work after the car is on the road.

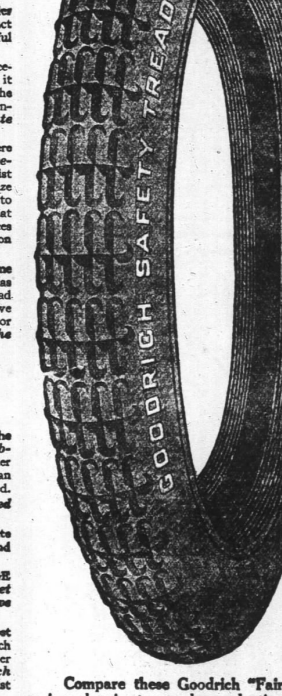
"Right here is where I think we will accomplish our biggest aim, for if we can show the mechanic why it is necessary that we have accurate and careful workmanship in every part that is placed in the Hupmobile, we will be able to say without hesitancy that it would be impossible to build Hupmobiles better.

"The school is in charge of R. G. Blaine, son of the noted professor of mechanical devices at Belfast, and a graduate of Edinburgh university. Mr. Blaine, besides being an expert mechanician, has had a liberal education along mathematical lines. He is an ideal man to have in charge of such a school.

"Our idea is to hold meetings twice a week, and we shall have experts to talk to our men at frequent intervals on different subjects.

"It is the aim and object of this company to build Hupmobiles in the best way possible, and for this reason the thorough education of our employees is of utmost importance. I know that this school is going to bring us big results, for the short time the school has been in operation—only a little over a month—its effect throughout the factory has already become evident."

For FAIR Price-Lists— —that can be "taken SERIOUSLY"



THIS is a deliberate Attempt to cut the "Haggle" out of Tire buying and selling,—for Consumers.

It is also an Attempt to set right,—with the Public,—thousands of well-intentioned Retailers of Tires and Auto-Accessories.

These have, by circumstances, been forced into the gradual adoption of a most Unwholesome Custom, Viz:—that of selling "PRICE-LISTS" instead of selling Tires, to Consumers,—of selling Discounts OFF Price-Lists, instead of selling Mileage and Service in Tires.

It is not an Attempt to make things harder for the kind of Tire Manufacturer whose Product apparently cannot be sold without the doubtful Expedient of the Padded Price-List.

—Said Expedient consisting of an alleged "Price-List" which is purposely printed "UP" so that it may then be deliberately discounted DOWN by the Dealer,—to provide "a Special Bargain" to the Consumer who is Unwary, or who is too busy to investigate Values.

This Attempt is being made also with a sincere desire to save the Retailer of Tires from the consequences of further growth of that Padded Price-List CUSTOM which is inciting Consumers to patronize CUT-PRICE SPECIALISTS and band together to maintain "Supply Depts." with which to fight what they, erroneously, consider EXTORTIONATE Prices and Profits supposed to be charged by Retailers, on "Price-List" basis.

Without the PADDED Price-Lists, which in some cases show as much as 55% Retail Profit on Tires (as much as $11.00 Profit on a single 34 x 4 Plain-Tread Tire), the "CUT PRICE SPECIALISTS" would have no reason for existence, could not make headway, nor threaten to cut the market from beneath the Dealer's feet.

WITH the Padded Price-Lists, and the bitter Price-Cutting conditions that abnormal profits always invite,—the Dealer makes, in the end, much less profit, on average, than the normal and reasonable one to which he is entitled.

Thus he loses three ways, through the Padded Price-List Custom.

1st. Through the impairment of his legitimate Market and Volume, by "Cut-price Specialists," and by Consumers Supply Depts.

2nd. Through obtaining a lower AVERAGE profit per Tire during the year, because he must meet the keen price-cutting Competition which excessive profits always invite.

3rd. Through the heavy increase in the cost of Selling Tires, for Salesman's Time, when each Customer feels that he must Shop-around a number of different Dealers Stores, in order to find out which will give him the largest Discount off the Price-List of the Tire he wants to buy.

More costly and dangerous to the Dealer than all three of these is the Undermining of Public Confidence, in the kind of Store that is popularly believed to have several Prices for the same article —(an unreliable method of Selling Goods).

That, and the TO-MORROW, which comes out of it, is the DEALER'S side of the Case,—

The CONSUMER'S side now claims our Attention.

TIRES are often Emergency needs! When the Car Owner needs a new Tire he is more likely to need it on-the-road, and "P.D.Q." than to need it under leisurely "order-far-in-advance" conditions.

If he can step into an Auto-Accessory Store,—a Garage—or Repair Shop,—in the neighborhood of his need, and there get the Tire he wants, PUT ON in 20 minutes, it is worth a great deal to him to continue his outing without laying up his Car while he awaits Shipment and Delivery of same Tire, on his Telegraphed order.

But, if Auto-Owners do not patronize Auto-Accessory, or localized Tire Dealers, these must go out of business, and such convenient Sources of Supply would then be missed more by Tire-Users than by anyone else.

That is why the adoption of a FAIR Price-List, and the cutting out of the seemingly Extortionate Padded Price-Lists, means so much to both Consumer and Retailer of Tires.

That is why WE take the RISK of lining up the entire Tire Manufacturing Industry against us,—in a sincere effort to put the Selling and Buying of Tires on the same sound, safe, and progressive basis that practically all other Merchandise is to-day retailed upon.

WE want to see Price-Lists that are dependable,—Price-Lists that correctly and fairly represent the Mfrs. own sincere Valuation of the Mileage and Service he puts into his Tires.

—Price-Lists that are reasonable, logical, and reliable,—not made to QUOTE DISCOUNTS OFF, but to sell Tires on.

OF course there will still be wide differences in the Value to Consumers,—as great as the difference in the Facilities, Capacity, and Skill of each Manufacturer.

It is not expected, nor required, that Price-Lists shall accurately gauge relative Values, but only that they shall accurately and reliably measure the Value which each Manufacturer intends to give Consumers, for the amount each Consumer invests in his Tires.

It is not desired that the Manufacturers' Price-List shall cut the Dealer's margin down to a profit on which he cannot afford to do business and make money.

It is only expected, urged, and desired, that the Retail Profits offered by Price-Lists shall be moderate enough to be bona-fide.

—Not preposterous "Paper-Profits," that cannot come true without ruin to the future of the Retailers' business, but actual Profits that he actually makes, and that reduce his selling cost, per Tire, to the minimum that moderate Profits and the "One-Price System," can alone make feasible.

That is our Hope, and Wish, for the future of the Tire Industry.

WE set the pace, to-day, by List-Pricing our own Tires so as to carry a moderate but REAL profit to the Retailer, instead of the Visionary "Get-rich-quick" profits, of 30% to 55%, that other Tire Price-Lists offer, but cannot deliver, when the price-cutting such huge margins invite, does the settling.

WHEN, therefore, YOU,—Mr. Auto-Owner, and Tire-User,—find a Retailer who recommends GOODRICH Tires to You, bear in mind that he not only offers the Greatest Mileage for what it Costs YOU, but proves his Good-faith by offering a Tire carrying only a moderate and Normal profit for him, when he might have recommended other Tires Price-Listed to carry 30% to 55% profit for him instead.

That's the kind of Dealer to "Tie-To"!—

—And you'll find him "doing business at the Old Stand" when the "Get-rich-quickers" are chasing for people who knew the Ways of the World better than they did.

A DISCREDITED SYSTEM THROTLES A GREAT CITY.

By way of introduction:

J. M. B. Hoxsey is vice president and treasurer of the Southern Bell and Cumberland Telephone companies.

He has been active in unselfish civic and philanthropic projects in Atlanta. He is a public-spirited citizen without bias or egotism or impracticability or anything else but a desire to serve and to build. His record proves these things.

Now, then—

Mr. Hoxsey, in a temperate and business-like card, published today, deals with the industrial and the municipal situation in Atlanta—and the two situations today cannot be separated.

He has served on many chamber of commerce boards, and is now on one charged with investigating the problem of unemployment. This latter feature he describes in a manner that appeals and convinces.

He does not believe in artificially-created employment for the unemployed.

He says that in the building of schools, the extension of parks, street work, work on sewers and our water plants, on many other municipal facilities, there is plenty of work to employ nearly all the unemployed in remunerative labor.

He says what The Constitution has urged, that the city will save money by undertaking this work now because of the low material.

He says what we all know to be true, that at some time this work must be done, or stagnation will set in—and that the longer it is postponed the more expensive it will be.

His remedy is a very simple one, and the only one—a bond issue. He asks The Constitution's support.

We indorse every line of Mr. Hoxsey's card, but there is one snag in the way—

Our wretched, inadequate, squabbling and quibbling administrative system!

For a month council and the finance committee have been wrangling over the finance sheet, with not one thing accomplished.

Work in each department is held up. No department knows what to expect. The schools are menaced. In a city of nearly two hundred thousand there has been no new school built for two years. Factionalism, partisanship, whatever you want to call it, is playing hob with municipal efficiency, as it has done for many years under the existing system.

More than two-thirds of the registered voters would undoubtedly favor bonds for the purposes indicated if they had confidence in the city's system of administration—but

The people of Atlanta will not vote three millions or more in bonds to be expended under a system the inefficiency of which has been so glaringly illustrated for the past month!

This is now apparent—

It wouldn't be so bad if this year's disgraceful hold-up of the city's buldget was an unusual event.

But it is the same over and over again every year.

The people have become disgusted with the system that makes such a thing possible. The Constitution has urged a bond issue as the inevitable solution of the city's troubles. We have hammered the argument day in and day out, receiving overwhelming approval in our contention for a betterment of city conditions, but everywhere being met with the statement—

"WE WILL NOT VOTE FOR A BOND ISSUE THE PROCEEDS OF WHICH MUST BE EXPENDED UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM OF ADMINISTRATION!"

And can council wonder at this response?

Every day adds to popular protest against the city's administrative system and to a lack of confidence in those whose petty bickerings are penalizing thousands of laboring men in Atlanta and holding the city back when it should be going forward!

The duty of the council is clear—

If it cannot dispose of the city's budget and cut the leash which is retarding the progress of the city, then—

It is the duty of the entire body, from mayor down, to turn their commissions back to the people and give the city a chance to elect as their successors men who will lay aside petty politics and cheap bickering long enough to pull the city out of the snarl in which it has been permitted to drift by a top-heavy administrative system which is throttling the city's development and penalizing every man, woman and child in it.

The mayor has already offered to throw his commission back to the people and to go before them on a change of governmental system, if council will do likewise.

The only possible excuse for council not following him would be for its members to put their selfish interests before the welfare of the city, taking no chance at an expression that would weigh their individual welfare against that of the entire city. We do not believe that they would be content to assume this attitude.

But the strain is reaching the breaking point.

The city sees now, as never before, the weakness of an administrative system which is growing heavier and more unwieldy every year—and that the city will in due time apply the remedy there can be no doubt.

A ROLL OF HONOR.

In a communication published today Dr. Thornwell Jacobs cites what might truthfully be called a golden roll of honor of the men instrumental in the refounding of Oglethorpe university. Commendation from Dr. Jacobs is significant. Not only has he been elected president of Oglethorpe, but it was his amazing, whirlwind field work and unflagging enthusiasm that played a controlling part in the consummation of this splendid enterprise.

Dr. Jacobs states that it was fourteen men who, when it was even doubted if the project could be materialized, undertook to subscribe $500 each, or such part as might be necessary, with which to begin the campaign for Oglethorpe.

The inspiring feature of the story is that these men, mostly Atlantans, studiously avoided publicity. It was not that for which they were looking. Their chief aim was the success of a great enterprise in which they believed, and their motive power was unostentatious civic spirit.

Here are the names:

Wilmer L. Moore, Atlanta, Ga.; C. E. Graham, Greenville, S. C.; William Hensel, Atlanta, Ga.; J. M. Brawner, Griffin, Ga.; L. C. Mandeville, Carrollton, Ga.; Dr. T. P. Hinman, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. M. N. Armstrong, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. F. P. Calhoun, Atlanta, Ga.; W. F. Winecoff, Atlanta, Ga.; F. M. Inman, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. E. G. Jones, Atlanta, Ga.; John K. Ottley, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Atlanta, Ga.; Captain J. W. English, Atlanta, Ga.

Men of this type are the best assets of a community. Any state and city may feel its destiny and its ideals assured with such men ready ever to step unassumingly into the breach.

And the best feature is that every enterprise, of whatever nature, has proved Atlanta rich in citizens of this type.

EUROPE'S FRANKENSTEIN.

The censors have not given us a very accurate idea of the percentage of killed and disabled in the European war. But considering the numbers involved, and the time the war is likely to last, one thing stands out—Europe is building up a veritable Frankenstein in the shape of inferior men, deteriorated mentally, morally and physically.

The youngest and healthiest men of the leading continental nations have been placed on the firing line. The larger proportion will, of course, escape with their lives, though they may be wounded. But no mon who comes through that tornado of fury, unparalleled in history, but will have its mark left on him indelibly.

What of the children who are the offspring of these men? Are they likely to be strong, resistant, virile, productive? Hardly. Look at France. Today she is doing magnificent fighting. But she is stretched to her farthest resource, and the point is that the fighting is being done by undersized men, who do not match the Germans, the English or the Russians in physique. The responsibility for this condition, as for the tendency toward sterility in the French, rests largely upon the Napoleonic wars. These wars sapped the best blood of France. The effect was not immediately visible. It is counting now, and it may count disastrously before the present futile war is ended.

One wonders if the other nations have counted the cost in this direction, if no other. They wage war, ostensibly, in the name of national preservation. Yet, by a paradox, they are pursuing a course that may ultimately threaten national preservation.

That is just one reason why, even if Germany wins in the current struggle, she may lose in the long run. For she is sacrificing every available man, utterly reckless of the future, if the point of the moment may be gained. What the German historian of the future will have to say will be interesting.

The mothers know the frightful cost, the eventual consequences, of all this lordly blood-letting. It is upon them that the burden principally falls. They must see their menfolk swallowed up in an insatiable maw, all in the name of patriotism, with never a protest. Lucky is the United States that thus far it has escaped the far-flung effects of the madness that has seized all Europe.

POSSIBLE, NOT PROBABLE.

The reluctant admission was drawn from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in his testimony before the commission on industrial relations that there was a possibility donations by the great foundations, such as the Rockefeller, the Carnegie, etc., might exercise an undue influence on educational tendencies in this country. It is unfortunate that the chairman of the commission is one John D. Walsh, of St. Louis, who seems more bent upon occupying the spotlight than in maintaining the perspective that is essential in investigations of this magnitude.

Princeton, Harvard, Yale, Berkeley, Leland Stanford, and all the great universities of the country, not forgetting the University of Georgia at Athens, and the Tulane university at New Orleans, have been recipients of endowments and loan funds from individuals of all manner of faiths. Yet it is not of record that the young men issuing therefrom have been influenced by the views of the donors.

It may be objected that in the case of the great modern foundations, the gifts are so huge, the control so absolute and stipulations so implicit, as to impress participating young men with a sense of obligation, and of subtle, unconscious yielding to influence. That theory belongs much more to the doctrinaire than to the man of practical sense. What a boy goes to any institution for is an education. When he emerges, diploma in hand, he bears the college stamp, of course, just as he does when he emerges from Athens or Harvard. But deal with him in matters of religion, of business or of politics, and it is a long shot that you will find him swayed by the fact that he was tutored by men paid by multimillionaires.

The country needs a rebaptism in common sense and a wholesome forgetfulness of some of the bogies raised in the era of the muckraker and the demagogue. Rockefeller and Carnegie may harbor sinister designs on the minds of the future generation. But their lives and utterances of latter years do not bear out any such nonsensical assumptions.

WHAT HURTS DEMOCRACY.

When General Wotherspoon, former chief of staff of the army, assumed charge of the department of public works in New York city, he declared one of his first cares would be to dismiss the men whose chief "qualification was to help get out the vote on election day." That is practically the platform upon which General Bingham headed the police department in New York city. In New York they still point to the regime of Bingham as one in which efficiency ruled machine politics. It is probable General Wotherspoon's administration will make the same record. But—they "got" Bingham in the long run. Will they "get" Wotherspoon?

That question really compresses the core of rule by the people. A reform wave starts, given impetus by intolerable conditions, and some such unchallengeable personality as Wotherspoon or Bingham is put in to clean the rascals out, and to give the city a decent administration.

Then, what happens?

Sad to relate, the people go to sleep again, thinking they have accomplished wonders and forgetting that the price of efficient government, like the price of liberty, is eternal vigilance.

The prevailing trouble is the average voter thinks he has done his part when he votes a good man, or men, into office. He forgets to watch for the sure and insidious encroachments of the petty small politicians, the men who make their livings by politics, who could not earn a "meal ticket" in any other calling, but who seem to be adepts in fooling "part of the people part of the time."

As a consequence, matters gradually drift back into old conditions, the good man is either corrupted or grows discouraged from lack of encouragement, and after awhile there is the same old job to do over again.

No city in America is exempt from the spectacle—including Atlanta, whose exhibitions of indifference toward her municipal system are perfectly incompatible with the city's characteristics in other directions.

Fortunately, for genuine rule by the people, more voters are constantly realising the necessity, in self-interest, for vigilance. Only when the entire voting population is thus educated will we have government that can accurately be termed efficient.

When they become president for a day they are quickly informed that they didn't see Mexico first.

Now, really, are the bunched birthdays of all the kings on earth worth a prize fight on a battle front?

Don't look for a thunder of bands. Prosperity is in the ranks, waiting for the recognition of a handshake.

The war-kings wear the worried look. The slaughter is so slow!

UNIVERSAL PEACE POSSIBLE ONLY THROUGH WORK OF OUR WOMEN.

By Isma Dooly.

Back on woman falls another burden—that of carrying from the cradle to high places the message of universal peace. This message cannot happen at the psychological moment and absorb in its truth all at once the world of men and women. It is a message that will have to grow and reach out, and finally become a doctrine. The old tradition of patriotism will have to be changed, and even when the little boy of the cradle tightens for the first time his fat fist, to fight—he will have to be told that to fight for his country does not mean to strike at a brother, but to become so good and strong as a citizen that he can push principle and win victories with that, rather than a strike with the blow of his cave-dweller ancestors.

To the mother it becomes the task to teach this first lesson—the lesson that will broaden as it goes on. This first lesson is a composite one of country-loving and brotherly love. The coming generation may begin and receive their training in it through the educational organization of the nation, for logically the thought has taken root in the fountainhead of the university, and will permeate, let us hope, every department of education.

Dr. Guthrie's Plea.

While Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has been the first to plead for the "international mind," as he calls it, which must exist before universal peace can, Dr. William Norman Guthrie, one of the most scholarly of American men, pleads for the same ideal, through what may be called the medium of brotherly love. In his discourse on the possibilities of the American national drama, in Atlanta this week, he expressed condemned our mode of dealing with our alien brother. In depriving him, the alien, of his right of ideals, his poetry, his art, we deprive ourselves as well of the best there is in him.

To illustrate this point, Dr. Guthrie mentioned the request made to him by a group of seventy-five Italians in New York to preach them a sermon. "And I did it," said the eminent lecturer. "I scolded them, abused them and called them all the names I knew in Italian. They liked it, for the politicians always talk gently and sweetly to them. I abused them for ignorance of their own country and its ideals. I asked them questions about their own greatness, which they could not answer. I told them if they wanted to be good Americans and recognized citizens they must pay for that privilege by bringing to America the best they had of their own—their gods, their ideals, their poetry, their art. I was well rewarded when afterwards these same Italians organized a class in Roman history."

This same theory of brotherly law, with the highest patriotism the heart of it, has been beautifully expressed by Mary Antin, in that illuminating book, "The Promised Land," when she reminds us that the humble alien with the bearded face and the pack on his back may have the soul and the spirit that will some day adorn the brightest page in our national history.

War Brides.

And now comes the products of the war in literature all pleading for universal peace one way or another.

But of all the pleas and appeals yet made through literature, through the public assembly, from the pulpit or from the lecture stage, I believe none rings stronger, truer, than in the one-act drama by Marion Craig Wentworth, entitled "War Brides."

The drama represents the passionate protest of the women of the world who are "strong to keep the world going, to keep sacred the greatest things in life—love and home and work—yet are kept dumb, silent drudges."

"Promise to see to it that if we bear you the men for your nation, there shall be no more war. See to it that they shall not go forth to murder and be murdered. That is fair. We will do our part—we always have. We bear and rear and agonize. Well, if we are fit for that, we are fit to have a voice in the fate of the men we bear."

Then cries Hedwig, whose husband Franz is killed in the war:

"Oh, it is an insult to our womanhood! You violate all that makes marriage sacred. Are we women never to get up out of the dust? You never asked us if we wanted this war, yet you ask us to gather the grapes, cut the wood, keep the world going, drudge and slave, and wait, and agonize, lose our all, and then bearing more men—and more—to be shot down! If we breed them for you, why don't you let us say what is to become of them? Do we want them shot—the very breath of our life? . . .

"One day we will stop giving you men. Look at mother Fonda, torn from her in one month, and none of you ever asked her if she wanted war. You keep us here helpless. We didn't want dreadnoughts and armies and fighting, we women. You dug mines, bands, our sons, from us—you never ask us to help you find a better way—and haven't we all gone that way?"

Brides of the Sixties.

Those of us of this generation who have heard from the "war brides of the sixties"—those of the "blue," those of the "gray"—know the tragedy of the confederacy. We know that the war brides of our country fifty years ago were separated from their sweethearts, their husbands, their lovers, and we know the trail of sorrow that followed. We know of the devastated plantations, where the woman were left single-handed to gather the crops, to nourish the children, to save for the dead, to decorate the graves of the very flower of southern knighthood. It is a heritage, this story that their sons might yield.

There still shine among us the blessed faces of those silver-haired women whose brave spirits have carried them on, bearing the story of the tragedy war brought to them. They will tell you of the flags they made and the banners they gave as the soldier boys marched away, of the women who have gathered the history and records, and kept them as sacred as the memories in their hearts.

These women I would ask: "You know what war is—you who have felt and lived its tragedy; why, then, can't you raise your voices high in this cry for universal peace? With your perpetuating the history of the great past, combine the inspiration of your work for the future, and instill into the minds and hearts of the women of the present, and the child who will build the future, the Christ message of peace!"

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs Gives Credit to the Men Who Nursed Greater Oglethorpe

Editor Constitution: There are certain men living in the city of Atlanta whose names have not been sufficiently associated with the founding of Oglethorpe university in the public prints, but without it would have been impossible for this institution to have ever been refounded. It is characteristic of these men that they have themselves praised others in this connection while no one has had a word of appreciation of what they have done.

It is not generally known to the public that the majority of people, even the most hopeful among us, despaired of the day ever coming when the city of Oglethorpe university should really be laid. These men not only believed, but put good yellow gold behind their belief.

Up in the Oglethorpe office they are known as the men who back their faith by their work, for each of them engaged to give $500, or as much thereof as was necessary, to pay the promotion expenses of the institution and they paid it monthly during the year preceding the Atlanta campaign.

I want to give you their names, and I want to ask you to publish them so that the public may know who these men are. I, myself, know them well enough to be assured that they will not object to this publication, but I, for one, do not wish that their names should ever be forgotten in the history of education in Atlanta.

I believe in fact that an editorial on this subject having to do with the needs that far-seeing business men are utterly invaluable in the execution of our best ideals would have a fine effect upon your constituency.

These are the names of the men:

Wilmer L. Moore, Atlanta, Ga.; C. E. Graham, Greenville, S. C.; William Hensel, Atlanta, Ga.; J. M. Brawner, Griffin, Ga.; L. C. Mandeville, Carrollton, Ga.; Dr. T. P. Hinman, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. M. N. Armstrong, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. F. P. Calhoun, Atlanta, Ga.; W. F. Winecoff, Atlanta, Ga.; F. M. Inman, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. E. G. Jones, Atlanta, Ga.; John K. Ottley, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Atlanta, Ga.; Captain J. W. English, Atlanta, Ga.

I find no words wherewith to express the keen sense of appreciation which every lover of higher education should feel towards these men.

THORNWELL JACOBS.

The Lady of the Valley

(To Corra Harris.)

By FRANK L. STANTON.

I.

THE Valley lies still in the beam
Of Winter's wild, lingering light,
But I know of a glory far-thrilled through its dream—
The fairy-like phantoms of flowers that seem
The shadows of angels of night.

II.

FOR the Valley is dreaming of Spring—
Of the starlight that shines from the eyes
That out of all season makes mockingbirds sing,
While the silver-soft bells of the dim thrushes ring
Of morning and violet skies.

III.

AND I sing to the Valley: "When Sleep
Has lavished her love-gift of dreams
That hold the high Lady of Light in their keep,
Breathe far to this dreamer one rose that you reap,
With a song of the star-haunted streams!"

IV.

IT is not a Valley of tears
Where the Lady of Light has her home.
For there falls the splendor of magical years;
World-lovers come singing of hopes and far fears,
And sea-kings, from over the foam.

V.

BRAVE knights from the rich realms of old—
Gallants of Time and of Space;
For backward Time's star-sprinkled curtain is rolled,
Dead dreams leap to life with their dust and their gold,
In the light of her beautiful face.

VI.

THERE lovers and lady-loves meet
As once in high-garlanded hall;
The Dream-Valley thrills at the print of their feet,
But the voice of the living and lowly rings sweet:
"The Lady of Light loveth all!"

VII.

SING, birds, of the bloom-brightened way
Where her smile shall awaken the Spring,
When the heart o' the Valley beats wild with the May
And the Sun for Her sake makes a dream of a Day
And Stars all Love's litanies sing!

VIII.

BREATHE, blooms, of Earth's Eden, new-found
Where no flame-guarded gateways are seen;
Where Life, to its dream-bright and uttermost bound
The brow of its wonder-sweet Lady has crowned
And the Valley-flowers kissed her as Queen.

J. M. B. Hoxsey Says Bond Issue Would Save City Money And Men Suffering---But!

Editor Constitution: I have noted with much interest the publicity given in this morning's Constitution to the report made to the directors of the chamber of commerce by the committee on unemployment.

It has so happened that during the past four months I have been called upon to serve on five boards or committees, including the one which made the report referred to, which have approached this subject from various angles. Upon four of these much active work has been done. As a result of the study made of the subject and of information received in this connection the work upon each of these committees has led to the same conclusion.

The amount of quiet suffering endured in this city at the present time is appalling. No conceivable amount of charity, public or private, could begin to cope with the distress, even if it were not the fact that the majority of those affected, thus placed for, perhaps, the first time in their lives, would approach actual starvation before appealing for charitable aid.

The report to which reference has been made has shown the conclusions of the committee as to the total number out of employment. I am informed from reliable sources that in the various branches of organized labor in the city from 45 to 75 per cent, and in one small trade 100 per cent, are out of employment. Contrast this with the state of affairs in England, her industries disorganized by the war. The maximum percentage of trade union members unemployed was in August a fraction over 7 per cent, and this fell each month until in November it was a fraction under 3 per cent. Yet the situation there was regarded as so acute that the Prince of Wales fund for the relief of war distress had reached by the middle of December over $26,000,000, while in addition many boroughs or municipalities have undertaken relief work for the sake of providing employment.

The question with some of the members of these committees is not merely one of cold statistical information as to conditions. Since the publication of my name as one of the members of the chamber of commerce committee on unemployment, many individuals have assumed that because of this I had work to distribute. Doubtless the same thing has occurred with other members of the committee.

All Classes.

There has been a daily stream of men and women in my office asking for employment. They represent all classes—day laborers, skilled mechanics, clerks, engineers, salesmen, skilled accountants, stenographers and others. Not one of these has asked or hinted for a dole. Some of them, evidently of large earning capacity in ordinary times, have been taking the few odd jobs they could get at rough outdoor manual labor and are eager for a chance for more. The hopeless despair of some of them at finding any other effort fruitless has not been pleasant to witness.

Society owes something to these men, able, willing and eager to work. Their vitality is being sapped, their purchasing power is nothing and retailers must consequently be seriously affected.

What is needed is employment, rather than any further material extension of charity. The possible sources of additional private employment have been thoroughly canvassed and, while good constructive work is being done in this direction, there is no possibility that adequate relief can be provided from this source. The situation will long outlast the winter months, and public employment is a necessity and should be undertaken on a large scale, if the funds can be spent for improvements actually and vitally necessary.

As stated in the committee's report, the effort should be to see how much needed improvements can be economically and wisely undertaken, rather than how little we can get along with. The city's needs in this direction will doubtless be thoroughly canvassed by the chamber of commerce committee recently appointed to consider this subject. I am not trying to anticipate their work or to prejudge the conclusion which should be reached only after a most careful investigation.

The object of this communication, which is an expression of individual views and not of those of any committee, is simply to make such personal presentation of the case as is impossible in a committee report and to call attention to what I believe to be an erroneous impression which may militate against the success of a bond issue if the committee decides to recommend one.

There is a somewhat prevalent belief that it is flying in the face of the laws of supply and demand and is false economics to provide public employment at the cost of the taxpayer, with the object largely in view of providing employment. This is true only as regards what is known as "made work," that is to say, work which, having in itself no permanent value, is provided and paid for merely as a sort of test of the fitness of the applicant for relief.

Actual Value.

The soundest students recognize the importance of providing employment on public works during periods of distress, if such work can be utilized for objects of actual economic value to the community—if, for instance, schoolhouses, hospitals, sewers, parks, street improvements, etc., are actually needed and will have sooner or later to be supplied.

Nature has her periods of rainfall and drouth, but it is not flying in the face of natural law to construct dams and impound water during the period of rainfall that the flow may be evenly distributed. Just such is the relation of the construction of public works to labor. If they are undertaken at a period when the community is prosperous, it results in municipal competition with private employers, in an increase in the price of labor, perhaps beyond profitable private employment, with a consequent decrease in employment. But during a period of depression, with no public works to be constructed, labor is out of employment, its vitality, efficiency and purchasing power is diminished and the whole body politic is adversely affected.

On the other hand, by the construction of actually needed public works during periods of depression, the labor market is equalized as is the flow of water by a dam, the increased purchasing power of labor benefits retail and wholesale industries, houses are more readily rented and every class in the community shares in the increased prosperity thus brought about.

It could be argued, and with truth, but it is to suppose, that this increased prosperity and added property values together with the saving in interest on bonds issued to work at a time of reasonable prices for labor and commodities, will more than offset any increased burden of taxation which may be thereby incurred.

For these reasons, if the chamber of commerce committee should find that the funds of a large bond issue can be wisely and profitably expended, I urge that The Constitution give its powerful support to the movement.

HOW SOUTH GEORGIA MAYOR VIEWS THE CONSTITUTION

Editor Constitution: Please enter my name as a subscriber to the Daily and Sunday Constitution.

This is the only way I can show you my deep appreciation of your interest in the material development of the state.

I have always felt that there was a deeper tie that bound south Georgia to Atlanta than any other section of the state. We have no jealousies and Atlanta has always seemed to be as proud as we of any advancement we made.

South Georgia is a great section, and there are many great opportunities of advancement.

Again thanking you, I beg to remain, very truly yours,

Drama League to Hear Brieux Play.

Next Tuesday's reading at the Drama league will be a preparation for the coming of Eugene Brieux, when "The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont" will be read by Mrs. Emmet Lunceford. Mrs. Lunceford is a delightful reader, trained at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York, and her reading of this play, which has already been heard at the Drama League Study class, is a wonderful and delicate interpretation of one of Brieux's masterpieces.

In "The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont," Brieux assails the conditions that surround French marriages—conditions which, many of them, are paralleled in America. Its reading will be of the highest interest, as Brieux himself is to be in the city from Thursday to Sunday as the guest of the French Alliance. On Saturday the members of the league will meet him at a reception at the home of Governor and Mrs. Slaton.

Brieux Coming.

The noted academician and dramatist, Brieux, accompanied by his wife, will be the guest of the Alliance Francaise on the 5th and 6th of February.

He will lecture on "Drama" and his literary career, the lecture to be delivered in the Ansley hotel ball room at 4 p. m. Friday. Brieux's fame has crossed all frontiers, his "La Robe Rouge" is bringing a terrible indictment against judicial system; "Les Avaries," translated into English with the title "Damaged Goods," has been translated and published by G. Bernard Shaw, who hails Brieux the greatest dramatist Europe has produced since Moliere. In that play, which has been censored both in France and in England but uplifted by all of the clergy, doctors and professors, Brieux exposes ignorance as one of the social evils. Useful plays, useful truth, is his achievement and aim. "Damaged Goods" has been played all over the states and was produced at the Atlanta theater last year with George Bennett as leading character.

Brieux's lecture next Friday will be free to all members of the Alliance Francaise; non-members will be admitted to that rare treat by a fee at the door which will go to the women victims of the war.

Benefit Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. B. Hoxsey will give a dance at their residence, 282 Piedmont avenue, next Friday evening for the benefit of Chapter No. 2 All Saints' guild. Miss Goodrich and Mr. Newton Thomas have consented to demonstrate the newest dances.

Mrs. Berry entertained the Ladies' auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Atlanta lodge, No. 246, at her home on Park avenue, the past week. Mrs. O. P. Hodo served punch.

The afternoon was spent in a progressive game, Mrs. Leohr making the highest score, and was presented with a beautiful hand-made centerpiece. Mrs. Martin was given the consolation. Delightful refreshments were served. Ninety ladies were present.

Nicknames of Famous British Regiments

By H. M. Snevily

"FIGHTING FIFTEENTH"; THE 15TH (KING'S HUSSARS) SAVING THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA, 1749 FROM THE SKETCH

WHAT'S in a name?

"Forces not to be measured; life, death, divine courage, a rampant spirit of reckless abandon; these are in a name," comes the living, pulsating answer to this trite question—an answer which reverberates around the world to the accompaniment of cannon music from the plains of Flanders, where fighting British regiments are once more inscribing in blood on the scroll of Fame their "nicknames" won on many a shell ploughed, shot down field.

Because of its simple eloquence the "Fighting Fifteenth" is one of the most striking of nicknames of British regiments now at the front. The name is an intense concentration of the regiment's history. It is fighting now; it has always fought when there was a cause, and it has never questioned the cause—that it was Britain's was enough.

This was the first regiment of light cavalry organized in the British army, and dates from 1759, when it was officially the Fifteenth Light Dragoons and popularly known as Elliot's Light Horse, from Colonel Elliot, whose defence of Gibraltar is one of the epics of history.

The Earl of Pembroke, Sir William Erskine and David Dundas were among the distinguished men who held commissions in the "Fighting Fifteenth" at the first. At Emsdorf, July 16, 1759, under Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, the Fifteenth Hussars began to earn their nickname of the "Fighting Fifteenth."

The regiment performed notable achievements at Groebenstein, and at Friedburg it made the first of a series of famous rescues when it saved Prince Ferdinand, who had been surrounded by the enemy's cavalry.

Later they were to rescue the Prince of Schwarzenburg. It was near Le Cateau and Landrecies that a squadron of the "Fighting Fifteenth," under Captain Pocklington, advanced to support a reconnaisance made by the Prince of Schwarzenburg and a regiment of Uhlans.

The most famous exploit of the "Fighting Fifteenth" was the rescue of the Emperor of Austria at Villiers-en-Couché in 1794. The regiment was then serving with the Austrians against the French revolutionary forces in Flanders, where some of the fiercest fighting is in progress to-day.

The "Black Watch" is another name famous throughout the United Kingdom and the colonies. The Forty-second Highlanders, the oldest Highland regiment, does not get this name from the performance of any particularly gallant action, but the name has come to stand for all that is glorious, dashing and courageous in battle. The "Black Watch" has an enviable reputation as a fighting regiment.

It was organized by combining several Highland companies raised in Scotland in 1725 to 1729, recruited first for the purpose of maintaining order in Edinburgh, and its members were for the most part from the clans of Campbell, Grant and Munro. These clansmen wore their own tartan, but when John, Earl of Crawford and Lindsay, welded them into one regiment, known as "The Highland Regiment," a new tartan was devised by abolishing the color from those worn by the men in the ranks. Crawford, being a lowlander, had no family tartan, and it was from their black garments that the regiment got the name of the "Black Watch."

The "Gunners" means to the Briton the Royal Regiment of Artillery, whose record is the record of British arms in every quarter of the world.

It was not cavalry alone which attained immortality at Balaklava. The Second battalion of the Ninety-third regiment of Foot was there, and against it the Russians hurled the flower of their cavalry, a body of men in gallantry and dash rivals of the Light Brigade. In a "thin red line," only two men deep, the Ninety-third, with bayonets fixed, sprang to their feet and charged the Russian horse, not waiting for the enemy to reach them. It is hard to ride horses onto cold steel, and the Tsar's cavalry wavered, but only for a second. Urged by spur and voice, the horses plunged forward again.

There was a furious clashing of steel, plunging horses, stabbing, slashing and shooting men.

The thin red line swept onward, the wave of Russian cavalry rolled back.

That British regiment is still the Ninety-third Foot in the files of the War Office, but to Britons throughout the world it is simply the "Thin Red Line."

The Royal Welsh Fusiliers is a pretentious and elegant sounding name, but the men and officers of the regiment prefer the title which has been conferred upon them by admiring thousands, the "Nanny Goats." It was in 1686 at Ludlow that the "Nanny Goats" first became a regiment, being developed from thirteen companies of foot recruited three years earlier in the Welsh marshes by Henry, fourth Lord Herbert. Among the battles where the "Nanny Goats" earned distinction are the Boyne, Namur, Schellenberg, Blenheim, Ramillies, Wynendale, Oudenarde, Malplaquet, the siege of Lille, Douai, Dettingen, Minden, Fontenoy, Bunker Hill, Corunna, Gibraltar, Copenhagen, Martinique, Torres Vedras, Badajos, Salamanca, Burgos, Vittoria, San Sebastian, Alma, Inkerman and Sebastopol. It also served in Egypt, Spain, Nova Scotia, Hanover, the Indian Mutiny, Ashantee, Burma and South Africa.

Quite a warlike record for a "Nanny Goat," which name was given to the regiment because of its mascot. In the officers' mess on St. David's Day the goat, escorted by drum and fife, is marched round the table while each officer and guest who has not done so before must stand on his chair and eat a leek while a drummer beats a long roll behind him.

The "First Tangerines" are officially the Queen's Royal West Surrey regiment, but they won their nickname by their defence of Tangier in 1662, which fortress had become a British possession as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza.

The "Devil's Own" was a name given to the Connaught Rangers, or Eighthy-eighth Foot, because of their notorious rascality. General Picton had described them as the greatest blackguards in the army, but after their terrific fighting at Fuentes d'Onoro he was obliged to admit they had redeemed their honor. At the taking of Badajos the "Devil's Own" rivalled their feats performed at Fuentes d'Onoro, and since then they have been continually bettering their reputation as fighters.

George II. was the last British monarch to appear on the field of battle actually under fire. At the Battle of Dettingen he witnessed the remarkable bravery and excellent work of the East Surrey regiment, then known as the Thirty-first Foot, originally a marine regiment. As the survivors went swinging past him in the midst of the battle he cried out:—

"Well done Old Buffs!" mistaking them for the Third Buffs.

When his error was pointed out to the King he exclaimed, "Well done, Young Buffs, then." The name has stuck.

The "Carabiniers" were originally the Ninth Horse and the Queen Dowager's Cuirassiers, so called in honor of Catherine of Braganza, whose master of horse was their first colonel. The regiment dates from 1685 and won its nickname at the Battle of the Boyne, where it fought in the cause of William III. so effectively that he termed it "Carabiniers" as a distinguishing compliment. The present official title of the regiment is Sixth Dragoon Guards.

At Albuera Colonel Ingliss commended the Fifty-seventh Foot, who were defending an artillery battered wall. As the enemy pressed home their last charge Colonel Ingliss shouted above the din of battle:—

"Die hard, my men; die hard."

That the Fifty-seventh Foot did die hard was attested by the heaps of the enemy's dead. That was in 1811. Since then the "Die Hards" have been dying according to their reputation.

When General Monk marched to London in 1660 to insure a free Parliament and the restoration of the Stuarts he took with him from Coldstream, in Berwickshire, his own regiment of foot, who were known thereafter as Monk's Coldstreamers. There is an unauthenticated story that when the escorting force met Charles II. at Blackheath this regiment kept the still disloyal troops from mutiny, and the King, on learning whence they had come, dubbed them "My Coldstream Guards." To this day they are known as the Coldstream Guards.

There are several traditions concerning the origin of the name "Scots Greys." The most generally accepted one is as follows:—When the Royal North British Dragoons, as the regiment was styled up to the time of the Crimean War, landed in the Low Countries in 1742 the Stadtholder noticed that the men were without mounts. He immediately ordered his own guard to turn over their gray horses to the Scottish corps.

MINERS ARE SLAVES, DECLARES LAWSON

Labor Leader Tells Industrial Commission of Conditions in Colorado, and Again Attacks John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

New York, January 30.—John R. Lawson, of the United Mine Workers of America, who yesterday denounced conditions in Colorado mining camps in testimony before the industrial relations commission, and sharply arraigned John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his alleged failure to inform himself as to conditions there, continued his testimony today.

"There is no social life in the camps," Mr. Lawson said. "The companies own all the houses, grounds, schools, churches and stores. Complete despotism exists in the mining camps."

Men worked in mines, he said, because they were forced, not because they wanted to.

"If they complain, it is down the canyon for theirs," he said. "And if the man who does work is hurt he is taken to a company hospital. If he dies, a company coroner conducts the inquest over the body. As long as I can remember only two verdicts unfavorable to the Colorado Fuel and Iron company have been rendered—and I think the company furnished the cemeteries. The coroners have a habit of giving a verdict of suicide or death due to carelessness. One coroner wrote, on a certain case, that the victim of an accident had no relatives and damned few friends."

Young Rockefeller Quoted.

No coal miner, Mr. Lawson said, has ever shirked his duty in protecting life and the interests of the operators.

Mr. Lawson called the commission's attention to a statement which he said was made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., April 8, 1914, in which Mr. Rockefeller was quoted as saying that the Colorado Fuel and Iron company would never recognize the United Mine Workers of America and that it was a fight to the finish.

"Two weeks after that to the day came Ludlow," Mr. Lawson said. "I do not know whether there was any connection between these two things. I hope not. A man like Mr. Rockefeller should be careful of the things he says, however."

Mr. Lawson thought it was a mistake on the part of organized labor to re-elect union officials who had been convicted of violence.

The witness read a list of the laws of Colorado which he said the corporations in that state had violated. Commissioner Weinstock asked if it were a fact that the Colorado Fuel and Iron company had refused to treat with the United Mine Workers of America on the ground that the mine workers were lawbreakers.

"That was one of the charges," said the witness.

Commissioner Weinstock read a notice distributed by the United Mine Workers of America calling upon the mine workers to form into companies and arm themselves. He asked if that action did not constitute a defiance of the laws of Colorado, or, being a call to arms, a rebellion.

No Violation of Law.

"That is no violation of the law," Mr. Lawson said, "I defy any one to prove that we violated the law. If my neighbor called to me and asked me to get my rifle or revolver and help him defend his property and the lives of his family, would that be a violation of the law?"

"It would be if I got a thousand men together that way," replied Mr. Weinstock.

"Yes, you would be violating the law against blocking traffic," the witness replied.

When questioned by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, of the commission, as to details of the arming of men, Mr. Lawson asked to be excused from replying as he was one of those indicted in connection with the troubles in Colorado. The so-called "call to arms" he said was issued to the miners two days after the shooting at Ludlow.

Mr. Lawson was questioned as to statements alleged to have been made by operatives asserting that the United Mine Workers of America were contract breakers; in connection with strikes in District No. 2, which includes part of Pennsylvania. Mr. Lawson replied that if the complaints had been taken up with the executive board the miners would either have gone back to work under the contracts or would have been put out of the union. If a group of miners in one mine went on a strike on their own account, that did not constitute a violation of contract by the United Mine Workers of America, he said, although many operators so considered it.

Mr. Lawson said there were nineteen indictments pending against him in Colorado. Altogether, he said, three thousand coal miners are under indictment in Colorado, and not an operator has been indicted.

Mr. Lawson said he was shot down several years ago by an operator. When the hearing came up, Mr. Lawson said, the district attorney, John L. Gray, said the case should not be pressed, as it "was a charge growing out of a strike." So the operator was discharged.

Views of Amos Pinchot.

Amos Pinchot, a New York attorney, the next witness, declared government ownership of mines and other natural resources which are foundation of industry and labor, was the "only panacea in which there is any hope" for the alleviation of industrial evils. Those resources now were controlled by monopolies, he said. Mr. Pinchot favored collective bargaining and recognition of the union as the only means of breaking the system of so-called benevolent absolution," but said that assent by the employers to such recognition, while a step in the right direction, "does not provide jobs for the jobless. This can only be done," he said, "by opening up opportunities for more industry and more labor."

"In almost every great industry the thing which both capital and labor must have in order to apply themselves are so cornered or contracted by a small monopolistic group that business cannot be extended and employment cannot be increased, and there results on the one hand a restriction of product and consequent high price to the consumers, and the restriction of labor and consequent unemployment and poverty in the labor class."

Acceptance by educational institutions of donations from the Rockefeller foundation or the general education board, Mr. Pinchot considered a "grave danger." Smaller colleges, he declared, were full of instructors and professors, "who have not been deliberately driven from larger universities on account of economic opinions unfriendly to benevolent exploiters in industry, but who nevertheless have found their chairs in the large universities untenable and have left them owing to influences which were irresistible, but too subtle to complain about."

Pinchot Attacks Press.

New York, January 30.—The commission adjourned until Monday before Mr. Pinchot had completed his testimony, but he was permitted to place the remainder of the record in the form of a prepared statement. In that he advocated an investigation by the commission, or a similar body, into the handling of news in labor controversies.

The effect of public opinion could only be justly exerted, he said, when the public was put in possession of the facts. He declared that there was "no element which gives labor a feeling of such helplessness and bitterness as its knowledge that the merits of its side of the question will not be presented to the public through the press."

The Associated Press, in particular, he said, failed to carry news relating to labor troubles in an impartial manner, and "takes affirmatively the side of capital." He asserted that he had been informed by "a representative citizen of Colorado, himself a newspaper man of high standing and a subscriber to the Associated Press, that the failure of the Associated Press to carry news impartially in the labor troubles was a serious element in giving strikers the feeling that they could not hope for justice."

Speaking of labor troubles in the West Virginia coal fields and in the Michigan copper mine region in 1913, he quoted what purported to be dispatches of the Associated Press as "characteristic evidence of its partiality to the operators' side of the case." He declared that the Associated Press reported a rifle attack by mine guards from an armored train upon a miners' tent colony at Holly Grove, W. Va., as if the miners had made an unwarranted attack upon a passenger train."

"Perversion of News."

As "another typical instance of oppression and perversion of news" by the Associated Press, he compared testimony of Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, before the congressional commission, which investigated the Michigan copper strike troubles, with what he declared to be an Associated Press account, both referring to circumstances surrounding Moyer's departure from the mine district for Chicago.

"Both in the West Virginia and Michigan strikes the Associated Press grossly misrepresented the real condition of affairs," said Mr. Pinchot. "This was due, in part, to the fact that in West Virginia it got its information from a man identified with the coal companies, while in Michigan, during a large part of the strike, the Associated Press received its information from two newspaper offices controlled by the mine operators. But whatever the machinery may have been through which suppression and misrepresentation occurred, the fact remains that it did occur and that it resulted in blinding the public to the actual facts until congressional investigations brought them out."

MRS. JOYCE TO SUE RIVAL FOR $10,000

Suit to Restrain Mrs. Hazel Sherman From Seeking to Win Publicity Man's Affections Dismissed.

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the superior court, Saturday denied the petition of Mrs. Arthur St. George Joyce, wife of a publicity expert and the former financial editor of The Philadelphia Public Ledger, to restrain Mrs. Hazel C. Sherman, of Philadelphia, from seeking to win her husband's affections from her.

Now comes Mrs. Joyce with a positive declaration that she will proceed to sue Mrs. Sherman for $10,000 for alienating the affections of her husband.

The hearing on the petition for a permanent injunction lasted exactly one hour.

After court Mrs. Joyce gave out the following signed statement to a reporter for The Constitution:

"Judge Ellis did not see fit to grant the injunction I asked for, solely on the grounds that Mrs. Sherman agreed to leave Atlanta in the course of the next few days. Knowing she would then be out of the jurisdiction of the superior court and not amenable to any order it may have issued, there was nothing else for the court to do.

"The chase is just beginning, and I intend to end it in Philadelphia, where I will shortly bring suit against this woman for $10,000 for alienating the affections of my husband. Well see just who will lead in this chase.

"The charge that the injunction suit was brought because of jealousy on my part is absurd.

"This suit was regarded in some circles as a joke. It is the most serious move ever made in the superior court, and was done with the idea of protecting other good women in the south from women who make a practice of breaking up happy homes."

WAR ON WHITE SLAVERY IN THE TURKISH CAPITAL

Constantinople, January 30.—Through cooperation of Henry Morgenthau, American ambassador, Bedri Bey, the chief of police, has begun a vigorous attack on white slavery in Constantinople and its suburbs. One hundred and thirty persons have been arrested, and the chief headquarters of the illicit traffic has been raided and closed.

White slave traffic has hitherto flourished in the Turkish capital through the inability of the consuls and local authorities to co-operate in checking it.

ANOTHER RAINY SUNDAY, SAYS THE WEATHER MAN

Present Week Will Start Off Like Many Others During Past Few Months.

WANTED—First-class weather man.

One who can guarantee to give Atlanta at least one sunny Sunday a month. Apply to Mr. or Mrs. Outdoor Fan.

Atlanta is on the still hunt for a first-class weather man.

Mr. Von Herrmann is all right, and all that sort of thing, but he is just a bit too partial to rainy Sundays, according to Mr. and Mrs. Outdoor Fan and all the little Fans; consequently, they are looking for a weather man who can dole out at least one fair Sunday a month.

It has been almost a month of Sundays since Atlanta has experienced a bright, sunny Sunday. The Sabbath program, insofar as the weather has been concerned, has been one rainfall after the other, and just as folks were beginning to believe that the monotony of the thing would be broken, out comes Sunday's weather forecast, and guess what it says.

More Sky Juice Due.

You're right, the first time.

Sunday will be rainy and unsettled.

This much is certain. The elements have been assigned to the task of making Atlanta and Atlantans just as uncomfortable on Sunday as possible.

All of which means that there will be rain, rain and more rain.

Rain, according to reports, will bring colder weather. Possibly, it will bring on that blizzard which has been hung up in Nashville or Chattanooga, but we can't possibly figure out how any respectable blizzard can condescend to visit Atlanta with her streets all puddles of mud, and the atmosphere heavy with dampness and fog thick enough to take the crispness out of any old blizzard.

However, one can't tell what will happen next in the weather line.

It might hail, or snow, or the sun might shine.

Maybe it will rain.

AMERICAN PENSIONS PAID TO FOREIGNERS

Washington, January 30.—The pension bureau has promised the house appropriations committee to ascertain how many persons drawing pensions in foreign countries are still American citizens, and whether there are any pensioners who are citizens or subjects of the countries in which they reside.

"I am so thoroughly American," Commissioner Saltzgaber told the committee, "that I believe a man who adjures his allegiance to this country ought not to receive any reward from it." The commissioner added that more pension money was paid out to persons living abroad than ever before.

The pension appropriation bill will be taken up for consideration in the house after the naval bill is disposed of.

JIM CORBETT HAS NEW "WHITE HOPE"

Is Developing Tom Cowler, an English Giant, Who Shows Some Possibilities in Rough.

By JAMES J. CORBETT.
(Former Heavyweight Champion of the World.)

New York, January 30.—(Special.)—Well, here is the story of my "white hope"—as much as I know about him. His name is Tom Cowler and he is an Englishman by birth, stands 6 feet 2 1-2 inches in his hole-proofs, and weighs in the neighborhood of 220 pounds.

I am not writing this as an advertisement, but in response to numerous inquiries made by sporting writers and fans throughout the country since it was announced recently that I had taken a man under my wing for development.

Therefore, anything I have to say about him here I trust will be taken by my readers in the spirit I am writing it—as a matter of news and not an attempt to obtain some free advertising for my boxer. If he develops into the man I confidently hope and predict, his record will speak for itself and there will be no other boosting necessary.

I first met Cowler about a month ago, when he called on me at the stage door of Pantages theater in Portland, Oregon. He asked me if I would look him over as he wanted to learn more about boxing and believed I could teach him. His manner of talking and his actions impressed me favorably, and it is no new matter for me to talk with aspiring heavies, believe me.

I have met them by the score since Jeffries' defeat by Johnson, of all shapes and sizes, weights and peculiarities. One or two of the more prominent of those now before the public asked me to take them in charge several years ago, but none looked good enough in the crude state to warrant giving up my time and attention in an attempt to develop them. Their present standing in pugilism is proof that I made no mistake in passing them up.

Corbett Boxes Him.

I took Cowler to a gymnasium in Portland and gave him a try-out. And in spite of what those who may imagine I am passe as a boxer may say or think, it was a good work-out. And this youngster, although very crude in the matter of boxing, made a hit with all those present by his actions and style and willingness and quickness to learn. I lost no time signing a contract to take him with me on my Australian trip next month.

In San Francisco last week I arranged to give Cowler a good work-out for the benefit of the newspaper writers and my old friends at the Olympic club—an organization, by the way, that has turned out many great boxers in the past quarter of a century.

Cowler's opponent in a three-round bout on that occasion was Rudie Peterson, a young heavyweight who is being groomed for the ring by George Green, the original "Young Corbett," and a famous middleweight of twenty years ago.

Cowler toyed with Peterson and would unquestionably have stopped Green's fighter even in that limited space of time but for the fact that Peterson fought almost entirely on the defensive, and at covering is a bird.

But read what one of the Frisco newspaper experts has to say about Cowler and the bout with Peterson. This is from The Chronicle, and one of the most conservative stories written of the try-out:

"Cowler is green, of course, but there are many points in his favor. Taking the milling of yesterday purely on its merits and Cowler would have been returned the victor as he left a decisive mark on Peterson's right eye and had the local man staggering around the ring with none too clear an idea of what was happening.

"Cowler is remarkably fast on his feet for so big a man, and shapes up like a boxer. He is fast with his punches, and evidently carries a good one, although he must needs learn some of the finer points in delivering it with better effect. Peterson covered up considerable, so much so that Cowler could do but little with his left and had to await his opportunities with a right upper cut.

"On the whole if he is brought along in easy style he may have a bright future. And Jim Corbett is the best tutor in the world."

Take Him to Australia.

I leave for Australia on a vaudeville trip next month. I am taking Cowler with me, as it will give me a great opportunity to work with him regularly, teach him what I can, and also give me the chance to try him out thoroughly in regular matches before bringing him back home to put his skill against the best in this country.

"Snowey" Baker, the Australian promoter, has already communicated with me asking me to sign for a match or two between Cowler and the best of the big men over there, and just as soon as I have given Tom a thorough coaching and have put him through a systematic training course. I will see that he gets all the ring work he needs.

Cowler is no raw novice, as he has been fighting about two years in England and Canada. In fact, he has boxed with such men as Bombardier Wells, Frank Moran, Ian Hague, George Rodel, Denver Ed Martin and others of more or less notoriety. Cowler boxed the Bombardier, when a raw beginner, an 8-round no-decision exhibition. He lost to Frank Moran in seven rounds on a foul. He knocked out Rodel in six, Ian Hague in eight, and Denver Ed Martin in two rounds. So, my readers will appreciate that it is not exactly a raw recruit that I have taken hold of.

His record has been sent to me by a friend, but I refer to it here only to acquaint my friends with the fact that Cowler has been boxing with fairly good men and has not been beaten so far, with all his lack of experience. However, his previous efforts have cut no figure with me in sizing him up. It is what he will do in the future that will interest me from now on. But the fact that he has held his own since entering the field and with comparatively no training, is proof that he is made of pretty good stuff.

Is a Hard Hitter.

I believe that he is one of the hardest natural hitters I ever met up with. His blows apparently carry the weight of a pile-driver. But at present he is too aggressive. He has been told in what little instruction he has picked up here and there to keep on top of his man all the time. Which is good advice at times, but not all the time. I will devote my time to teaching him how to manage himself in the ring, when to cut loose and when to stand off. I will not attempt to teach him any method of boxing which will deprive him of his wonderful hitting power, for that is a natural asset which will win many battles for him in the future.

Cowler doesn't appear to need so very much to cope with his rivals in the heavyweight division. A little more experience coupled with the systematic course of boxing lessons and conditioning I will give him ought to make him fit to face the best in the game in a year from now—and with every chance of success.

Once Famous Baseball Players

Two of the star players on the old "Osceolas," a home team that played for Atlanta forty years ago. On the left, George E. Johnson, now the recorder of Atlanta. On the right, the late Edward T. Payne, who was city tax collector just prior to his death.

By Gordon Noel Hurtel.

Fifty years ago when baseball was in its prime, the home teams were composed of well-known and prominent citizens who played for glory and renown and not for salaries. Forty years ago there was organized in Atlanta a baseball club known as the "Osceolas," which played all the other local clubs in Georgia and won the championship. There was no club that could go up against the "Osceolas" without defeat. But once a club was organized that caused the Atlanta team to return home defeated and humiliated—and that makes a most interesting bit of baseball history.

Like the college teams, the old-time baseball clubs, organized in each city by patriotic citizens, played for "blood." It may have been that the games were not scientific, that too many hits and runs were made, but the players played for all they were worth, for the honor of their town was at stake.

The fans and rooters in those days were almost as ready to fight for their home teams as they were to coach and bet on them. The umpires—well, one may well imagine that his "umps" had no soft job under such conditions. There was a strict rule, however, which said that any player who disputed an umpire's decision would be at once taken from the field and forever disbarred from appearing on the diamond again.

The rules of the game were not then what they are now. More balls were allowed before a base was taken, the catcher did not take "em hot off the bat," and a second catcher was allowed to act as a backstop.

So it was under these conditions that the famous "Oceolas" were organized forty years ago, and won the championship in Georgia. On the team, playing second base, was the man who is now Atlanta's recorder. Another player who is prominent in the business world today was W. Woods White. The full team in 1876 was as follows: Edward T. Payne, pitcher; Charles Pemberton, catcher; John Savage, first base; George E. Johnson, second base; Bud Lester, third base; Oscar Collier, shortstop; Lem Butler, right field; W. Woods White, center field; Lewis Morris, left field.

It was said that George Johnson, who is now holding down the police matinees, was a great second baseman, and it was woe and disaster to the man who dared to steal second. Woods White was said to have been a wonderful fielder, catching high flies as easy as a hopper takes in corn.

The "Osceolas," as stated, won great fame, glory and renown, but, alas! there came a day of disaster. There was no rule about getting outside players. So the club at Rome, Ga., which had been organized by the late Henry W. Grady, secured a professional pitcher from New York city. The "Osceolas" never made but one measly hit, and that was by George Johnson, and did not make a single run. The erstwhile champions were ingloriously and ignominiously defeated and they returned home to disband and to play no more.

Yet their former glory, like the odor of the roses in the shattered vase, still hung around them, and, though the diamond saw them no more, the people often spoke of them in after years with reverence and respect.

COURTNEY RETURNS FROM A FINE TRIP

Henry S. Courtney, of the firm of Courtney-Field Motor company, southern representatives of McFarlan Motor company, has just returned to the city after a highly successful trip through many of the southeastern states.

Mr. Courtney was on a mission of establishing agencies, and says that he met with much success in securing corps of live men in the cities visited. He states that conditions are getting much better in the country, and that with a spell of good weather he believes conditions would get back to normal once again.

Pelham 36, Thomasville 25.

Pelham, Ga., January 30.—(Special.) The Thomasville Y. M. C. A. and Pelham varsity basketball teams met here last night in their first encounter of the season, which resulted in a victory for the Pelham boys, the final count being 36 to 25.

During the first half the visitors had the game their way, but the local five came back strong in the latter half and by fast and snappy team work and consistent goal-throwing, soon had a lead that the Y. M. C. A. boys could never overcome.

Spence, who is home for a week from Georgia Tech, was easily the star for the Thomasville team. Without him they would have been minus some 15 points. The team work and guarding were the particular features of the game for the home team.

Indoor Walk Record.

New York, January 30.—An American record for the two-mile indoor walk—13 minutes 35 2-5 seconds—was made tonight by George H. Goulding, of the Toronto Young Men's Christian association, at the games of the Dioceesan union in Brooklyn.

John J. Eller, of the Irish-American club, made a new American record in the 100-yard hurdles, covering the distance in 14 4-5 seconds, one-fifth better than the former by himself.

Jack Britton Wins.

New York, January 30.—Jack Britton, of Chicago, outpointed and outfought "Kid" Graves, of Milwaukee, in a fast and clever ten-round bout in Brooklyn tonight. Britton weighed 139 and Graves 142½ pounds.

VERY FEW SPOTS WILL RUST ON 1915 INDIAN MOTORCYCLE

One of the most interesting features to be found on the latest type of motorcycle for 1915 is now being shown in the display rooms of the Hendee Manufacturing company's branch at 457 Peachtree street. The Indian machine, which during the past few years has introduced the cradle spring fork, the spring frame, footboards, foot clutch control, kick starter and all the other radical departures from the usual type of construction, is this year showing models having the majority of the nickel work finished in black japan, such as handlebars, spokes and other parts most liable to rust.

The great advantage of this innovation is readily apparent, especially to such riders as use their mounts for business purposes. Solicitors, collectors, messengers, delivery boys and others whose business takes them on the streets rain or shine and leaves them little or no time in which to care for the appearance of their machines, have found that constant exposure to the unfavorable weather conditions will cause the nickeled parts to rust in spite of their efforts to the contrary. It is to relieve this situation that the new finish has been put upon the market. It will appear regularly upon the Indian four-horsepower service models, which are designed primarily for delivery service, and can be secured as optional equipment on all other models, including the big twins and the three-speed models.

Are Proving Popular.

The machines having the black japan finish are meeting with unusual success, although they have just been placed upon the market. One of the oldest motorcycle riders in the city was especially enthusiastic when he first saw them on display. "I have had some such thing as this in mind for my own machine for several years," he stated. "It has been simply impossible for me to keep my mount in the trim condition that I desired simply because of the nickel work which lost its surface in spite of all I could do. I had thought that it would be necessary to have some sort of red finish to match the machine, but I now find that the black lines against the rich crimson of the enameled parts is the most effective thing that could be done."

Although this finish has recently been announced, a number of telegraphic orders have been received, and there is every indication that it will be extensively adopted for the use for which it is intended during the present season. This is only one of a number of features that are giving the motorcycle an increasing appeal for commercial purposes.

Reduced Salary Limit In State League Causes Just Kick From Waycross

Waycross, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Prospects for baseball in the Georgia State league, with a salary limit of $700, the player salary limit being only $50, are regarded as anything but bright, as local baseball enthusiasts view the situation. It is asserted by one whose experience makes him sufficiently posted to know what he talks about that no team can be secured with salaries not higher than $50 a month.

It appears that as far as Waycross is concerned no effort will be made to have baseball in 1915. It has been suggested that if the salary limit is made high enough to allow players outside of the manager to receive $75 a fairly good season might be had. Otherwise little hope for the season is entertained.

That the directors will be urged to reconsider the salary question at the next meeting is evident. Under the league's present rules none of the teams of the Georgia league will be able to hold players who made up the 1914 teams. Secretary Farrell's reply to a communication sent him from here recently is awaited with much interest and it may be the means of causing several changes in rules passed at the Americus meeting.

The president of the league, Dick Jemison, holds the same opinion as the Waycross moguls, and he will use every effort to get the directors to rescind their action and boost the salary limit.

Mr. Jemison is in favor of $900 or $1,000 for twelve men, exclusive of the manager. This limit can be met and if observed will permit a margin for the league to work on, but it must be observed.

Such a limit would permit the securing of promising young players at a salary limit of $75 each. The $50-a-man limit is entirely impractical and out of the question.

There are several rules passed at the American meeting and others already in the league rules that need some modification, according to the league head.

However, it is believed that all matters will be adjusted amicably and the league will start at the time stated, May 1, with the same six teams as comprised the league last season.

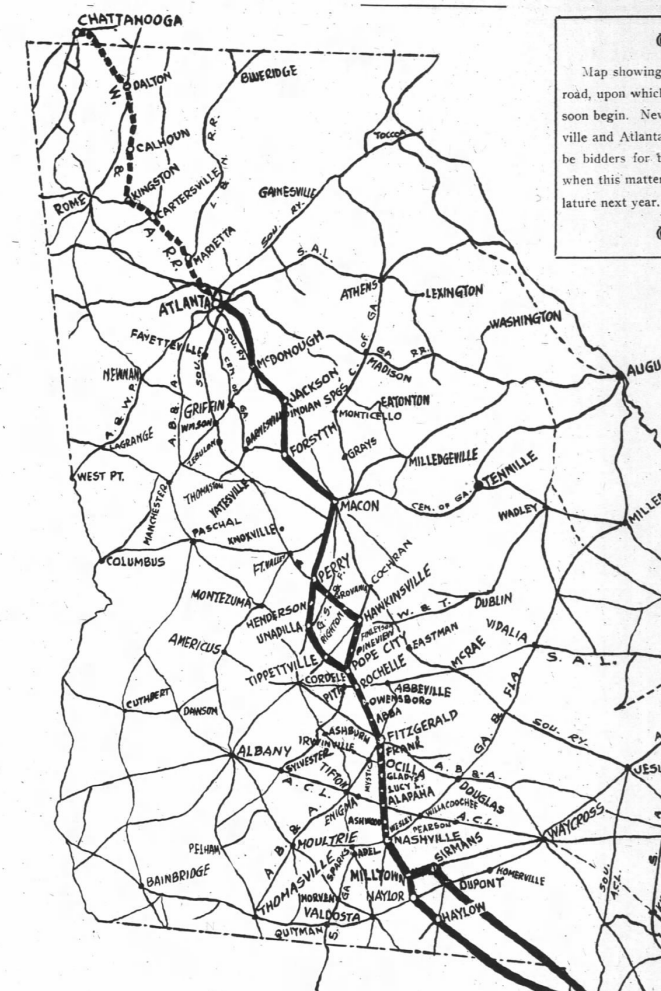
Another Great Trunk Line Railroad for Georgia Soon; Actual Work of Construction Starts Within Few Days



Map showing route of new Georgia railroad, upon which work of construction will soon begin. New line will connect Jacksonville and Atlanta. The promoters will also be bidders for the lease of the state road when this matter is considered by the legislature next year.

Another great trunk-line railroad for Georgia and one of the most important that has been constructed in the south in many years is now under way. So far have the plans materialized that the actual work of construction will begin within the next few days.

This announcement was made by J. J. Henderson, president of the Ocilla Southern Railroad company, when seen by a representative of The Constitution. Mr. Henderson was in the city on a business trip in connection with his road, and asked about the proposed new railroad, said that the plans were about completed. Coming from such a source, the news cannot but carry joy to the heart of every Georgian who feels a pride and interest in the welfare and prosperity of his state.

Mr. Henderson, as is well known throughout the south, is no dreamer of dreams. He is a man who "does things." He has done things before, and great things, for he has built railroads and carried to success many other enterprises. Having served ten years in the Georgia legislature, he is fully cognizant of the needs of the state in the way of railroad development. He is a born promoter and one who has never failed to carry out any project he has undertaken. This much is stated in order to give a strong assurance of the reliability of the good news which The Constitution now heralds.

ROUTE OF NEW RAILROAD
NORTHWEST TO SOUTHEAST

The new railroad will cut through the state in an almost air-line route from the extreme northwest to the extreme southeast border, making a commercial artery that will mean millions of dollars to business men and farmers throughout the state. It will give Georgia and the state railroad another direct outlet to the sea. The men behind this big enterprise are too well known for ability and success in the business world and have too strong a financial backing to admit of any doubt as to the railroad being built as proposed and in as short a time as possible.

The new road is sure to revolutionize commercial and farming interests in a great section of Georgia, as it will traverse many of the richest counties, touch some of the largest cities and connect a number of the most important towns in the state. It will also connect large cities with many small but important towns by short lines.

With a route diagonally through the state, with men of practical railroad-building ability and experience, with a sound financial backing, the success of the new road, states Mr. Henderson, is already assured.

WORK OF CONSTRUCTION TO BEGIN SHORTLY

The actual work of construction will begin with the next few days, a statement that dispels any doubt as to the soundness of the enterprise and the intention of the promoters.

The announcement that a new railroad—a great trunk line—is to be built in Georgia, and at once, is not only a welcome piece of news from a commercial and transportation point of view, but coming just at this time it will be far-reaching in its influence upon business, carrying, as it must, the assurance that capital is ready for such investment.

It is, therefore, with no little degree of pleasure that The Constitution voices the news of the building of a railroad through one of the richest sections of the south and at a time when every investment of capital and the expenditure of money means not only the employment of labor, but stamps a guarantee upon the prosperity of Georgia and this section of the country.

ACCOMPANYING MAP SHOWS IMPORTANT ROUTE OF ROAD

Look at the accompanying map. Note how this new road will cut from northwest to southeast through the state. See what a direct route it makes from Atlanta to the sea. Read the list of counties it will traverse and the important cities and towns it will touch. The magnitude of the enterprise can then be more fully realized.

It will be seen that the proposed route is, first, from Jacksonville, Fla., to Atlanta. The promoters, as will be seen by a statement from Mr. Henderson further on, will be bidders for the lease of the state road next summer, when a new lease is almost certain to be made by the legislature. If the state road is secured by the promoters the new trunk line will extend from Jacksonville to Chattanooga.

While the main and general route of the road is practically agreed upon, there may be some changes and deviations in order to take in important towns, as many such are clamoring, it is said, to get on the line. Owing to propositions that have been made it is not improbable that two important changes may be made at two points on the route as shown on the map. These changes, however, will not alter the route as a whole.

Mr. Henderson, who is president of the Ocilla Southern, as stated, and from whom The Constitution obtained the good news, said that it has always been the idea of the Ocilla Southern to make a connection with some line running to the gulf, probably the South Georgia railroad from Sparks, Ga., into Florida, which would be a very desirable route if secured. It is already built and would reach far in the direction of the gulf. It has also been the idea of the Ocilla Southern to make an extension to Jacksonville, either a direct line from Milltown to Jacksonville or via the Waycross and Western from Milltown to Waycross and from Waycross to St. Mary's via the Atlantic, Waycross and Northern railroad, which is now proposed and partly constructed and which is known as Captain Lem Johnson's line. There is a strong sentiment for this last named route and it is being seriously considered. With this line another link would be to Fernandina and then on to Jacksonville.

CONNECTING LINKS OF NEW TRUNK LINE

The Ocilla Southern runs at present from Nashville, Ga., in Berrien county, to Rochelle, in Wilcox county, a distance of about 65 miles.

The first construction work on the northern extension will begin at Rochelle, where the right-of-way has been secured for quite a distance and work ready to commence.

This first seven miles is between Rochelle and Pope City, in Wilcox county, where it gives a northern connection with the Hawkinsville and Gulf line.

From Pope City there are two prominent propositions before the company, as can be seen by reference to the map. One is to construct from Pope City to Tippettsville, then to Unadilla, then to Emerich, then to Henderson and from there into Perry. This will be a most excellent line, traversing a very rich section and one that is thickly populated, and with the exception of Unadilla, without any railroad facilities.

The other route is a trackage privilege over the Gulf Line from Pope City to Hawkinsville and over the Hawkinsville Western railroad to Perry.

The next connecting link will be built from Perry to Macon. From Macon the road will be further constructed to Forsyth, and from Forsyth to Indian Springs, from Indian Springs to Jackson, in Butts county; from Jackson to McDonough, and from McDonough to Atlanta. The line will intersect within 14 miles of Atlanta with the Georgia and Carolina roadbed, to the southeast of the city, thereby giving an easy way into Atlanta.

WILL BID FOR LEASE OF THE STATE ROAD

As it seems to be a certainty that the Georgia legislature will this coming summer find it necessary to lease the state road, the promoters of the new trunk line have arranged to be a bidder and there is a probability that they will secure control of the road. Under such a lease the state road will be operated in connection with the line, as proposed, from Jacksonville to Atlanta, thereby giving the state road the long-desired outlet to the sea.

The members of the Georgia legislature will no doubt read with interest the proposition to construct such a road, as they will doubtless find it a necessity to make a new lease this year of the state road.

COUNTIES OF GEORGIA WHICH WILL BE TRAVERSED

An inspection of the map will show that the following large and important Georgia counties will be traversed by the new road between the Florida line and Atlanta:

Fulton, DeKalb, Henry, Butts, Monroe, Bibb, Houston, Pulaski, Dooly, Wilcox, Ben Hill, Irwin, Berrien, Lowndes, Clinch and Echols.

The following are the counties in Georgia through which the state road runs:

Fulton, Cobb, Bartow, Gordon, Whitfield and Catoosa.

Among the important cities and towns through which the new road will pass are:

Atlanta, McDonough, Locust Grove, Jenkinsburg, Jackson, Indian Springs, Forsyth, Macon, Avondale, Perry, Haynesville, Hawkinsville, Wallace, Mashburn, Pineview, Bartonville, Finleyson, Pope City, Rochelle, Fitzgerald, Ocilla, Alapaha, Ashwood, Nashville, Milltown, Sermans, Dupont and Homerville. This does not include the towns along the state road nor the ones that may be taken in if the deviations of the route, as mentioned, are decided upon.

POPULATION AND AREA OF COUNTIES ON LINE

It is interesting to note the size and population of the counties through which the new line will pass. Not counting the state railroad, the total area of the counties through which the line will pass is 6,626 square miles. The total population of the counties is 478,004, or nearly half a million of people. The total number of counties thus affected is sixteen. On the state road the number of counties is five, the population 92,756, and the total area 1,669 square miles. This makes a grand total in Georgia of a population of 580,760 and an area of 7,895 square miles to be affected. By adding Jacksonville and Chattanooga the population will be increased some 150,000 and the area of square miles made close to the 10,000 mark to be served by this new enterprise.

The population and area, according to the census of 1912, by counties between the Florida line and Atlanta are as follows, the first figures giving the population and the last the area:

Fulton—177,733, 174. DeKalb—27,881, 271. Henry—15,927, 337. Butts—13,624, 179. Monroe—20,456, 480. Bibb—56,646, 254. Houston—23,669, 591. Pulaski—22,835, 477. Dooly—20,554, 400. Wilcox—13,480, 342. Ben Hill—11,883, 275. Irwin—10,461, 312. Berrien—22,772, 714. Lowndes—24,426, 455. Clinch—8,424, 1,077. Echols—2,209, 365.

The population and area of the counties on the state road are as follows:

Cobb—28,397, 341. Bartow—25,383, 485. Gordon—15,861, 387. Whitfield—15,934, 285. Catoosa—7,184, 171.

PRES. HENDERSON TALKS ABOUT NEW LINE

When President Henderson of the Ocilla Southern, was seen by The Constitution representative and asked about the new trunk line that is to mean so much to Georgia, he said:

"Yes, it is true that we have all matters concerning the road now well in hand and there is no reason why the people of Georgia should not be informed about the facts. The route has been practically agreed upon, the right-of-way has been acquired for quite a distance; and we expect to begin the actual work of construction within the next few days. I would like to state that the people along the proposed route, including the line where there are two propositions, have given rights-of-way freely and almost without an exception without a dollar of charge. They realize the value of such a road to a community, even in sections that are already served, because they want competition.

"We have practically in hand the profile of the new road from Nashville to Atlanta, and we expect little or no trouble when we begin the work of construction.

"I would like to say in this connection that the construction work will be done far cheaper than any line has been built in this section of the country in recent years. There will be no waste of either time or money. There is frequently extravagance in the building of a railroad just as there can be in the keeping of a house.

"While the main route has been agreed upon there are two changes that might be made. One between Pope City and Perry and another between Milltown and Jacksonville. We are very much divided as to which route will be taken between Pope City and Perry, both routes having made propositions which have strong points.

"One thing in connection with the building of the new road which will be of special and great interest to the people of Georgia is that this road will in all probability be a strong bidder for the state road when it is leased.

"One strong reason why the new line would like to lease the state road is on account of the terminal facilities at both Atlanta and Chattanooga, owned and controlled by the great property of the state.

"Our canvass of the section through which our road will run has convinced me that not for many years has there been projected a railroad that will mean so much to Georgia. The entire state will be benefited."

STRONG FINANCIAL BACKING
BEHIND ENTERPRISE

When asked about the financial backing of the new road, Mr. Henderson said:

"We are operating 65 miles from Nashville to Rochelle and the road is bonded and comfortably financed, and we have made still further financial arrangements to begin work and make further extensions.

"The large area and population to be affected in the counties through which the road is to pass speaks of the importance of the road. With over half a million of people in these counties and with nearly ten thousand square miles of territory, to say nothing of nearby counties served by this line, the route is one that will grove a wonderful developing agency to the state, and, for that matter, to the south.

"It may be of some interest to state that we have already been approached about the shops for the new road. Many are anxious to know what place will get the shops, with their payrolls. As to this I can only state at this time that the matter of shops has not as yet been decided upon. We will give this very careful consideration before reaching a decision."

Mr. Henderson stated that since he has found among financial people in the east, as well as in this section, that there is a better feeling existing between the railroads and the interstate and state commissions, as well as between railroads and the law-making bodies, there is a greater willingness on the part of financiers to back up enterprises needing capital. He said that the cessation of nagging of railroads by the people has brought about a most beneficial change that means much to the upbuilding of the south, thereby furnishing work and homes to the idle and homeless.

NEWS WILL BE READ WITH GREAT INTEREST

Now that the announcement of the building of this great trunk line has been made public, the news will doubtless be read with absorbing interest by the citizens of Georgia, the people of the south and the members of the state legislature.

It will create renewed interest in the leasing of the state road.

It will stimulate activities throughout the state and herald a brighter prospect for Georgia and give an impetus to many kinds of industries. The very fact that capital is to give Georgia a new railroad and that men of push and energy are behind the enterprise, is sufficient guarantee of better times.

Mr. Henderson returned to his home Saturday. Further news of the projected railroad will be furnished by The Constitution as developments take place, and the people of Georgia will await such developments with keen and wide-awake interest.

DANCING IS THE ELIXIR OF YOUTH THESE DAYS

before his noted bar of justice. He held on that occasion that I was guilty of disorderly conduct for cheering and encouraging a downtown policeman to whip me.

He was therefore with a keen spirit of vengeance that I yearned for the music to break forth that I might clout in the spectacle of my own judge attempting a unlimber his age and rheumatism into accord with the vivacious brunette who sat across the table.

Presently the orchestra rippled into tune. I recognized one of the most popular ragtime arias of the day. Harmony instantly permeated the air. Hips, shoulders and arms and ankles of the guests as they arose from their chairs.

The fountain of youth had begun to spout.

It was a fox-trot, one of those tiddle, tiddle, tiddle, tiddle, tiddle, tum things. And at this juncture, it might be appropriate to add that a fat man dancing the fox-trot is so forcibly reminiful of a jelly fish that for the life of me I am made homesick for Hall county. I wonder if it shouldn't be called the oz-trot.

But all this failed to deter the judge. He tried to dance and appear unconcerned at the same time, which speaks so like credible.

To do the fox-trot, if you don't already know, you execute a limited number of short two-steps. Then lead up to a sort of barn dance, jog-trot that is even more effeminate. In its entirety, the dance creates the picture of a curly-haired "pretty boy" approaching a field of daisies thusly:

MISTER DAISY AND THE DAISIES.

"Oh, dear! oh, dear! what an exquisite field! I shall have to explore it!" (Stepping mincingly forward). "How superbly beautiful! I can restrain myself no longer!" (Plunging with a hop and skip into the field.)

Homerun! If I were a fox I'd sue for malicious slander.

The music stopped and my attention was drawn to voices. Peering down I saw two exquisite young pets of society, Harold and Clarence, with pomaded hair and talented features. One occasionally drew a handkerchief from his cuff and dabbed it carefully to an eyebrow.

Harold, having charmer, whose beauty wasn't profiting any by the rich food and late hour, breezed over and took Clarence's place for the next dance. Since observing Clarence I would believe in most anything. I don't know whether Clarence reminded me most of cream puff or charlotte russe.

Clarence danced with such elfish abandon that he outgraced anybody on the floor. Which impelled me to speculate that it must have been the Clarences who were responsible for most of the modern dances.

But why an ordinarily rational business man, who is a pillar in his church and a staunch support to most anything else he puts his hand to, will try to outdo Clarence is something you'll have to figure out yourself.

ALL OF THEM DANCING THEMSELVES YOUNG.

But this same ordinarily rational business man was there in large numbers. I noticed a lawyer who knew enough about statutes to stagger Webster and who could frighten a whole courtroom with bombastic eloquence mincing over the floor with his granddaughter's best chum. It must have taken all the courage he had acquired by strenuous battles in the courtroom to ever venture upon the dance floor, yet his bland smile betokened that he was not only having the time of his life, but was showing the other dancers a thing or two.

Lawyers, doctors, jaggers, financiers, retired and otherwise, business men of every possible type—men who loll in wealth and position and professional rank—some with profusely gray hair and others who would have been gray had there been any hair to turn color. They had come here to seek the elixir of youth.

They were dancing. And they danced better than most of the young men; a fact which the young men must have known, for I observed a marked preference on the part of the younger female contingent for the older male contingent. Boys, we had better speed up. Our papas are throwing dust in our eyes.

Tempus certainly does fugit.

It used to be that the father sat up and waited for son to leave the bright lights and come home. Now the son, tired of sitting up and waiting, must go and drag father home.

Father and grandfather tread the light fantastic with the season's debutantes. Son must stay home and content himself with the victrola. Times are changing. Youth no longer has the right to have its fling. It must give way to age that grandfather can sow his wild oats.

It is wrong for a youth to overfeed himself two hours before midnight, dance until 3 a. m., then follow the milkman home, but grandfather, who long ago discarded his crutch for a dance program, can get away with it in grand style! Age must have its fling!

It was getting long after midnight. Morning was on the wing. But the dancing never lagged. The hum of voices was as spirited, the encores for additional music as frequent. Grandfather's fling was truly a fling in every sense of the word. Grandfather didn't seem to know when to quit flinging.

The orchestra was becoming listless and sleepy. It needed intermittent injection of highballs and sharp rebukes from the floor manager to stir it into activity. Along about 2 o'clock, it grew indifferent. The musicians would play a rousing strain and, when finished, the dance-mad guests would clamor for more.

MUSIC NOW JUST ONE-STEP OF NOISE.

They weren't exacting, either, in their choice for music. Just anything sufficed so it had a syncopated meter to it. By this late and faded hour, the musical ingredient of the fountain of youth could emit anything and still impart a required spirit of youth—yea, it had become Attenille.

As I said, the musical ingredient, by now, didn't mean music as much as it was now adapted to one-step time. The drummer pounded it. He played a solo on the cowbells and had half the dining room dancing the ta-tao. The orchestra's nightly combined Tipperary with the Star Spangled Banner, Yankee Doodle and Die Wacht am Rhine, and still the dance went madly on.

The violinist nodded and his bow scoured blue notes in profusion; the cornetist hoisted his soals, and the clarinet player gave up in disgust. The pianist propped his right elbow upon the music rack and languidly struck notes with his left hand only when the time beats required.

But none of it kept grandfather from having his fling down there beneath the bright lights and in the whirlpool of midnight gaiety. Why should he worry of home and the morrow? His wayward son had got home long ago and would be there to let him in! And tomorrow is another day, while tonight is a night of nights.

Remember, grandfather only discovered the fountain of youth a short time ago! It was not until then that he was wise to the fact that he had another fling coming.

Ponce de Leon searched for it and gave up in despair. Grandfather can now reach it in fifteen minutes from home by his limousine or by trolley.

It is truly the fountain of youth, for frivolity is the essence of youth.

May it ever sparkle, as effervescently as it bubbled that night.

I left it bubbling at 2 a. m.
I had to get some sleep.
I'm not an old man!

More.

GRANDMA NEVER LET HER HAIR GET GRAY

Kept Her Locks Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Common Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is musty and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

TU-BO-LAX CORRECTS CONSTIPATION

Corrects CONSTIPATION —in 2 MINUTES—

Adrienne, the Editor of "Health & Beauty" page in The Philadelphia Inquirer, gives Mothers this very sensible advice:

"Try to do without drugs. I say this, not from any dislike to the use of medicines in treating children, but because we are here dealing with a function that persists throughout life. If we control that function by drugs we injure the intestines in their action, so that larger and larger doses must be taken, and in the course of time nothing short of giant doses of the most powerful purgatives will effect the result desired, and as such drugs when habitually used injure the system—the condition of the sufferer is pitiable.

Had she written a whole volume she could not have said more. Only she might have added—that where children or grown folks are constipated they should—by all means, be treated with TU-BO-LAX. This laxative ointment, which acts through the nerves, gives immediate relief to the serious, dangerous stomach, intestines or any part of the body, and soon habituates the lower bowel to act regularly without assistance. Treating Constipation through the nerves in any case will soon be tabooed by the medical profession. We want everybody to realize the fact that the lower bowel is nothing more or less than a sewer pipe, and when it becomes clogged or fails to evacuate the refuse matter—it upsets digestion, creating dyspepsia, nervousness, liver ailments, sick headache and general debility.

If you are constipated—try TU-BO-LAX, and in 2 MINUTES you will be grateful for this advice. You will have no more use for Cathartics. TU-BO-LAX is a pleasant ointment easily used at any time, immediate relief, one complete evacuation, and avoid the weakening effect of Cathartics that may operate a half dozen times, just when it is most inconvenient.

For sale at Jacobs' Pharmacies and all first-class druggists, or upon receipt of 25c we will mail you a package. Large size (contains five times the amount of the 25c tube) 50c.

Friday Morning Study Class

The Friday Morning Study class met with the leader, Miss Susie Wells, at the Piedmont hotel on Friday morning, and "The Child at Play and at Work," the third in the series of studies on child welfare, was discussed by the following members: Mrs. W. R. Hammond, Mrs. F. B. Coleman, Mrs. John Hardwick, Mrs. J. T. Goodrum, Mrs. J. A. Hartsock, Mrs. Howard Jackson, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. Julian Webster, Mrs. M. D. Hoke, Mrs. F. M. Akers, Mrs. J. P. Printup, Mrs. A. B. Gartrell and Mrs. A. A. Butler. The topic for next Friday will be "The Child at School."

The New Era Study Club.

Mrs. S. C. Orr delightfully entertained the New Era Study club on Wednesday at her home on Washington street. She had asked each club member to invite a guest to share the very interesting program which had been arranged by the leader, Mrs. A. A. Braswell. Miss Miriam Orr assisted her mother in the reception of the guests. Pompoms of flowers and palms were used effectively in the decoration of the rooms. The roll call of the club was answered by Dutch custom, which provoked much merriment. Mrs. Blackmon read a paper on Dutch cities, which was received with approbation; Mrs. Crossland gave a bright paper on "Where the Sun Shines at Midnight."

Mrs. Allen Young then read the second chapter of the club story, "The Quest of the Topaz Ring," the first chapter of which was written by Dr. Florence Truax at a previous meeting. Mrs. Young involved the jewel and its wearer in many a tangle, but finally rescued them both, and delivered the ring to the next owner for further adventures.

Miss Hamilton rendered a number of piano selections and Mrs. E. J. White gave a beautiful dramatic reading, "The Little Violinist," and responded to an encore. The hostess served a delicious luncheon. Misses Lillian Johnson and Willie Hamilton poured tea.

To Miss Hazen.

Miss Mildred Hazen, of New Jersey, who is visiting Miss Mignon McCarty, will be the guest of honor at several parties this week. Among them will be Miss Helen Stewart Jones' informal supper-dance Tuesday; Miss Helen McCarty's luncheon Wednesday, and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Durant's dance Wednesday night.

Miss Hazen will be one of the visiting belles on Friday night at the Nine o'clock German club's dance.

Mrs. John D. Little entertained twelve ladies at luncheon yesterday at 1:30 o'clock. The table decorations artistically combined Liberty roses and white hyacinths, these arranged in bisque vases placed at intervals the length of the table. The party included Mrs. Charles Conklin, Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Robert Sheddon, Mrs. W. H. Glenn, Mrs. Marion Smith, Mrs. Charles Remsen, Mrs. Thallenberger, Mrs. Doughty Manley, Mrs. Milton Dargan and Mrs. Hugler Lowndes.

Sciple-Douglas Wedding Announced for February 16

One of the most interesting of the late winter weddings will be that of Miss Marie Sciple and Mr. Stanley Allen Douglas, of Chicago, which will take place on the afternoon of Tuesday, February 16, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. George W. Sciple, on Peachtree street. The wedding, while it will be a quiet one, assembling only relatives and a few close friends, will center the pleasurable interest of the social life.

Miss Sciple combines with beauty of a striking type a fine mentality, which is part of her social gift and charm. She has enjoyed the advantage of much travel, but holds at home the affection of many friends.

Mr. Douglas is a man of responsible business position in Chicago.

Gay Company Assembles At the Driving Club

The brilliant event of the past week was the dinner-dance at the Driving club last night, which assembled a gay company.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Sciple, who arrived Friday from their wedding trip, were given a cordial welcome. Mrs. Sciple, who was the beautiful Miss Louise Beidler, of Chicago, was the center of the party entertained by Dr. J. D. Osborne, who was best man at their wedding.

Murphy, Colonel and Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Colonel Robert J. Lowry, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd McRae, Mr. and Mrs. George Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hawkins, Mr. Edward Denny of New York, Dr. E. G. Ballenger.

Etherington Harrower, New Dramatic Baritone, Makes Hit at All Saints' congregation is enthused over his singing, and at every service are many visitors attracted partly by his voice.

Mr. Harrower's own attitude towards his art is explanation of the hold it has taken on the Atlanta public.

"I earnestly feel that the study of the human voice gives the individual an insight into life that no other form of education can. The question has often been asked, 'What effect has the study of music on the average person?'

"The effect produced is beneficial in more ways than one. From a standpoint of physiology and hygiene, it is good, in that it teaches the correct manner of breathing—the proper posture or carriage of the body; and it urges abstinence from indulgence in those forms of recreation that are of seeming small import, but are in reality detrimental to health. It will develop the requisite confidence to appear before people either socially or in business. It is also an important factor in the development of character and the finer qualities brought about by the understanding of the art of interpreting."

Career in New York.

Mr. Harrower has enjoyed the advantage of study with several of the best known teachers of the present day, notably Paul Savage, and later Perrey Rector Stevens, teacher of Paul Althouse, of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Warrenrath, of the Victor company. He has done successful oratorio and recital work in New York, and has had experience in chorus direction.

Second Annual Report Of W. G. Raoul Foundation

The second annual report of the W. G. Raoul foundation has been issued. It contains a separate report from the president, Mrs. F. G. Hodgson; from the treasurer, T. K. Glenn, and from the secretary, Major R. J. Guinn.

A study of the report shows that the year 1914 was a year of constructive work. The foundation reached directly 400 cities, towns and villages in the state with its educational work. Its agents visited more than twenty cities of the state. It contributed valuable service in the passage of the new public health law and the vital statistics law; supervised the Red Cross seal campaign, and reports more or less work being done in the following Georgia cities: Atlanta, Savannah, Macon, Augusta, Waycross, Valdosta, Americus, Columbus, Thomasville, Rome, Decatur and Brunswick.

The officers of the foundation express their high appreciation of the cordial co-operation and help they have had from a great number of good men and women throughout the state, from the Southern Express company, which carried their packages free, and from the newspapers of the state, nearly all of which have given it a splendid support.

The financial report of the treasurer, duly audited by the firm of Alonzo Richardson & Co., makes an excellent showing. Over and above the capital fund of $50,000, it has an unexpended surplus of $2,277.44—all of which is applicable to its current work, in addition to its regular income. The income last year from its invested funds was $2,822.72, and from the Red Cross seals $2,000. Its total disbursements for one item among its disbursements was taxes, $324.63.

The trustees of the foundation feel encouraged by the results of last year's work to believe that a considerable expansion in the work is possible; and that the operation of the new laws passed by the last legislature, when they are once put into effect, will in the next few years work a revolution in health conditions in Georgia. While their specific work is to carry on a campaign against tuberculosis, they recognize the fact that the sanitary laws which they teach in that campaign will be productive of great good insofar as general health conditions are concerned.

Bird House Building By Burroughs Nature Club

The campaign which is being waged by the Burroughs Nature club to help the birds in and around Atlanta through the co-operation of the school children was featured yesterday by the visit of Dr. R. J. H. DeLoach, head of the state agricultural experiment station, who gave a practical demonstration of bird housing at North Avenue church school.

The demonstration took the form of a lesson in bird-house making, Dr. DeLoach being assisted in his work by John Cooper, Jr., William Elsas and Richard McMillan, members of the club, who were afterwards presented each with a bird box, while the others made in the class were auctioned.

In order to stimulate an interest among children in the preservation of bird and plant life, members of Atlanta Burroughs Nature club visited this past week fifteen of the Fulton county schools, making short talks to each of the schools and kindergartens and also to the public schools through Superintendent Slaton.

The club has offered four prizes to the school girls and boys of Atlanta and Fulton county who shall make the best bird houses. The award of prizes will be made on Saturday, April 3, John Burroughs' birthday, and the boxes placed in position on the same day.

Later prizes will be awarded by the club for the greatest number of boxes occupied by birds other than English sparrows.

At the demonstration yesterday the invited guests included teachers from the county schools, kindergartens, and one each from the public schools.

G. N. AND I. COLLEGE.

A very interesting program was carried out at the W. Y. C. A. on Sunday evening, at which time Christina Hjort, chairman of the temperance committee, presided. The idea of the service was to bring before the students, especially the seniors, the influence they might have going as they do by the hundreds each year to teach in the rural schools. The first talk was made by Christine Hjort on "Influence of Seniors in the Rural Schools." "The Hobson-Shepherd Bill" was read and discussed by Ira Belle Rolton; "The Ways and Means of Getting This Subject Presented in the Rural Schools and Community," by Harriet Busey; "Co-operation of Missions and Temperance," by Ottie Warmsley; "Temperance Story," by Mary Love Bates; "Temperance Song," Marian Williams.

We had as a visitor to chapel one morning last week Dr. John S. Jenkins, the missionary secretary of the North Georgia conference, who was in the city to take charge of the United Missionary conference. His talk to the students was helpful, and very much appreciated.

The juniors and seniors were the classes allowed to attend the missionary conference at the Methodist church, finding the sessions both interesting and helpful. The talks given by Rev. F. V. DuBose about that wonderful country, China, he being a missionary to that place, held the attention of all.

The new Methodist presiding elder, Rev. R. F. Frazier, who made his first visit to this city in that capacity last week, came over to visit with us during his stay. He made a wonderfully good impression on all who heard him.

A veritable musical feast was the reward of those who attended the Lyceum on Saturday evening of last week, when the Schumann quintet gave a recital in the auditorium. The idea of giving a brief explanation of the number before playing, which Director Lampert did, was a happy one, and not only enabled those who knew little about music to enjoy it the more, but also made those who were familiar with it more deeply appreciative. From the first the large audience was almost breathless with attention, and the last number was encored as heartily as the first. Needless to say the Schumann quintet will be asked to return.

COMPLETION of the Nemo Self-Reducing IDEA

FOR seventeen years past, millions of women have owed their health, vigor and symmetry largely to Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets. A strong statement; but true, BECAUSE—

The Nemo Self-Reducing Corset introduced a new IDEA that was practical. It met a crying demand never before satisfied. It provides complete hygienic support for the abdomen and the delicate organs contained therein. It reshapes and reduces surplus flesh. It actually decreases both the size and the weight of over-full figures.

The standardized Self-Reducing Corset, with exterior reducing straps, is made in a variety of models, most popular of which are Nos. 322, 324 and 326, with the elastic Nemo Lasticurve Back. Made of stout material, well boned, and strong enough to control all heavy figures, these models are giving—and will give—complete corset-satisfaction to more than a million women.

Our new "Invisible" Self-Reducing Corset marks the COMPLETION of the Self-Reducing IDEA. It is a concession to women who want to enjoy all the hygienic features for which the Nemo is world-famous, but object to outside straps. The "Invisible" straps are concealed by the corset-skirt, but give the same complete support as the exterior straps.

The Master Key

By John Fleming Wilson

A Thrilling Story of Mystery and Romance

By special arrangement for this paper, a photo-drama, corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key," may be seen at the Savoy and Alpha theaters tomorrow. By arrangement made with the Universal Film company, it is not only possible to read "The Master Key" each week, but also afterward to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

9th Installment

SYNOPSIS—Doors open upon strange things. How many locked doors are there in this world? How many people are there trying to find "The Master Key?" Thomas Gallon found gold. He thought of two things: his daughter, Ruth, and gold for her. Gallon died because his partner, Wilkerson, whom he thought he had killed in the desert, came back and demanded a share of his find. Wilkerson is seeking gold for the sake of a woman. John Dorr, the mining engineer in whose charge Ruth was left, is also fighting to find the secret which Thomas Gallon apparently took with him to his grave.

When the train pulled into Los Angeles the next morning John Dorr's party got off and John left Ruth with Tom Kane while he went to engage an automobile to take them to Beverly Hills, a suburb recommended by Everett as quiet and restorative for shattered nerves.

As they stood there Wilkerson, Mrs. Darnell and Estelle also got off the train, still disguised, and were hurrying away when Wilkerson observed Ruth and called Jean's attention to her.

For an instant she was nonplused. Then she said in a low tone, "So much the better. We can keep an eye out on them."

"I must find out where they are going to," Wilkerson returned. "I don't like the looks of it."

He soon came back with word that they had ordered the car to take them to Beverly Hills.

Jean stood in deep thought a moment and then said decisively, "We have plenty to do. We know where they will be and Estelle can keep us informed. The place for us to go is to a quiet, comfortable hotel. I refuse to live in dog holes any longer."

After some inquiry Wilkerson found the address of a hotel that seemed to answer their requirements and they were soon on their way thither in a taxi. Within an hour the deft Estelle had installed herself and her mistress in a comfortable suite. Wilkerson took a room near by. They both were soon their real selves and sat down to a hearty breakfast in Mrs. Darnell's rooms.

This ended, Jean took out the papers and spent an hour going over them carefully. Wilkerson smoked nervously, but did not interrupt her. When she laid the documents down he saw a queer glitter in her tawny eyes.

"So it has come to the old game, eh?" she said in a low voice. "I thought you had had enough of that."

"Enough of what?" he demanded quickly.

She smiled maliciously. She formed the word slowly and precisely:

"Forgery."

His dark face grew pallid and his eyes flashed ominously. "I did it for you that time—and no thanks! But this is all right. Those deeds are genuine."

"Certainly," she said mockingly.

"Well, what's the matter, then?"

"They merely assure the property to Thomas Gallon and his heirs and assigns!"

"Of course not!" he muttered.

"And when you found Tom Gallon at last and had him ready to do anything you wanted just as the price of your silence, I suppose it didn't occur to you to have him deed over the Master Key mine to you, did it?"

"He wouldn't have done it!" he burst out furiously. "He shot me once. He would have shot me again to save the mine for the girl."

"Then what good are these papers?"

Gradually he perceived the drift of her speech. He looked at her for a moment dumbly, as if for instruction. But she was ruthless. He must propose the crime himself. She handed him the papers.

"I'll have to go out and buy some blank deeds," he said laboriously. "I may have to look up some other points, too, about these papers."

Ruth Makes a New Acquaintance.

Life at Beverly Hills was a welcome change to Ruth after the strenuous days that had passed since she left the Master Key mine. The very day that she arrived she insisted on walking out with John Dorr and Tom Kane, who were careful not to refer to subjects that might disturb her returning peace of mind.

There were not many at the hotel and the most prominent figure among the guests was a tall, carefully dressed Englishman, so typically the tourist that the old cook insisted on identifying him on the register.

"I ain't seen many of the new kinds of people," he explained. "I've been out in the mine so many years that the styles in real sports has kind of escaped me. I admire to know just what kind of birds I'm roosting with."

"Who is he?" laughed Ruth, as they gazed out at the rising hills.

"He's marked down as Sir Donald Faversham and he's from the British isles," Tom Kane rejoined. "He is here for his health, they say. I suppose that's why he has to wear them white ankle warmers on his legs."

"Those are called spats, Tom," said John, smiling. "That eyeglass is a monocle."

"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I reckoned he was near-sighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Oddly enough Ruth blushed at this. Sir Donald had seen her, and she had been made aware of it instantly.

John Dorr saw the blush and interpreted it rightly. He, too, had observed the Englishman's sudden interest in the lovely girl. For the first time he felt a sharp twinge of jealousy.

Therein he did not count upon the other man's resourcefulness. Sir Donald was a man of the world and well accustomed to mingling with all kinds of people. He was also a careful observer and the very next morning when Ruth and John came out from the hotel ready for a stroll Faversham lay in wait for them.

How it happened only Sir Donald could have told, but within three minutes he was exchanging remarks about the scenery with them all.

The acquaintance thus made was destined to have a great bearing on the lives of both Ruth and John.

The next morning John and Tom met Ruth walking with Sir Donald about the hotel grounds and the young man could not help showing in both voice and manner that he was little pleased that Ruth should have so suddenly taken up with a stranger.

That afternoon George Everett turned up and warmly greeted.

"I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth, in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine, but we must have the deeds, papers and surveys first. And they're gone, I understand."

"Yes," Dorr replied bitterly, "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago."

Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the discouragement on her face. He went quickly on, "However, I've made temporary arrangements which will relieve you of all trouble for the present, Miss Gallon. I'll talk over the business details with John and Tom Kane."

She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I knew everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly.

For the Woman's Sake.

For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. Occasionally a signal at the door would tell him that Jean was outside and he would carefully open to her and together they would contemplate his handiwork. At last it was done.

"I See a Way to Make You Owner of the Master Key."

"No one can ever prove that Old Tom Gallon didn't draw that deed himself," Wilkerson said triumphantly. "And it makes me the owner of the Master Key mine, Jean! and once in charge I'll make us both worth millions! Then—"

She shrank back at the flame in his gaze upon her.

"Now what are you going to do?" she demanded, attempting to bring the conversation back into business channels.

He bit his nails savagely. "Drake is out all right," he told her. "You see, Kane didn't turn up to prosecute the case and they turned him loose. What do you say to my wiring him to go and take charge of the mine while we decide just what to do? He can see what's going on and warn us."

"Dorr and the rest are still at Beverly Hills?" she inquired.

"Sure!" he said scornfully. "They're tying up with some blooded Britisher they think has money. They figure on getting him to finance them, I reckon. And I happen to know that Sir Donald couldn't finance anybody. We needn't worry about Dorr."

Mrs. Darnell remained in thoughtful silence awhile and then agreed to the suggestion. Wilkerson immediately wrote the message:

"Charles Drake, San Francisco, Cal.:

"Go to Silent valley at once and take charge of Master Key mine until you hear further from me. Am wiring Tubbs, engineer, to this effect.

"HARRY WILKERSON."

When he had sent this and a message to Tubbs he resumed his gloating contemplation of his forged deeds. He did not see the look of burning scorn on Jean's face as she left the room.

"Why must I always have to use fools?" she murmured bitterly. "A lovely pair—Wilkerson and Drake!"

Trouble Brewing.

Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram. San Francisco, he felt, was no place for him. He was known to the police and it had been intimated that his actions were being watched. So he took the next train for Silent valley and on arrival there procured a rig and drove to the mine.

On his arrival he was dismayed to see that no work was being done. The machinery was idle and the miners were loafing about the streets or gathered in little, sullen groups. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tubbs they made no comment nor asked any questions.

Following their directions he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house. He knocked and there was shuffling of heavy boots, then the door opened and an unshaven, bloated-faced man asked him gruffly what he wanted.

Drake produced Wilkerson's wire and instantly the engineer showed relief.

"Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink!"

The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his new quarters without regard to the decencies. But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and shared a drink with his host. A few words served to put the situation before him.

"There ain't no money to pay the men, the store's closed, the cook shanty ain't running, Wilkerson is away, Dorr hasn't turned up with the money he promised."

Two miners entered and Tubbs introduced them to Drake.

"This is the new boss, boys," he said.

"Who sent you here?" was the first question asked.

"Wilkerson," responded Drake.

"Humph!"

"I'm just here to take charge temporarily," Drake went on hastily, not liking the ugly tone of the man's voice.

The other man took this information, and after digesting it, said, "Going to start up and pay wages?"

"I'm not acquainted with the situation yet," was the evasive reply. "I'll go over things with Mr. Tubbs tonight and then in the morning I'll see what is to be done."

"The first thing is to give us money and food," was the curt answer. The men stamped out, leaving Drake to look at Tubbs in some dismay.

The next morning did not bring cheer. Drake's head ached from the fumes of Bill Tubbs' whisky and the chill of the mountain air was not dissipated by a cold breakfast. And before the sun had risen above the peak of the mountain the miners had approached him with questions.

For an hour or so Drake equivocated and tried to postpone action.

At last he saw that he must do something immediately. He called some of the leaders into the office and with apparent frankness told them he had known nothing of the situation and that he felt sure Wilkerson was unaware of it.

"What are you going to do?" came the demand.

"This," replied Drake, writing rapidly. He showed them the message.

"Harry Wilkerson, Los Angeles, Cal.:

"Come to mine at once. Trouble is brewing.

"DRAKE."

What Is to Be Done?

Meantime John Dorr, Everett and Tom Kane were spending long hours in discussing what was to be done to save the Master Key to Ruth. Tom once more went over the exact situation at the mine and asserted that unless prompt measures were taken not only would there be actual distress but likely rioting.

"I see," said Everett, at last. "Not having the papers I can't put this deal through the way I want to eventually. But something must be done on the spot."

"In the way of money," added Kane harshly.

"Precisely," Everett assented with all cheerfulness. "Now, I'm going to loan John Dorr here five thousand dollars today for the Master Key mine."

"But who will take charge of it? Who will go to the mine?"

The broken laughed at him. "Not you! You'd be in a fight in three minutes, specially if Wilkerson turned up. Tom Kane is our man." He turned on the old man abruptly. "Will you take this money and go?"

The old cook stared at the crisp bills and then at Dorr. "I ain't handled paper worth that much lately," he remarked. "But if you want me to go there and feed them people and get 'em back to work and keep things going till John can fix things up here, I'll go."

So it was agreed. After an affectionate farewell to Ruth, Kane left the hotel for the train that was to take him to Silent valley. He was very cheerful, but when settled at last in his seat in the train he muttered to himself, "I'll bet this won't be any picnic for your Uncle Thomas. If I know skunks, there'll be a smell named Wilkerson around the camp mighty nigh the time I arrive."

He was not astonished the next day to find Wilkerson on the ground.

The Battle for Control.

On his way to the mine Harry Wilkerson's courage, newly fired by a last conversation with Jean Darnell, commenced to ebb. She had employed every art of which she was mistress to persuade him that he must instantly obey Drake's telegram. And when he had surrendered to her wiles she laid down a plan of campaign and hurried him off, almost eager to be on the spot and seize the property that she told him was within his grasp.

However, as he recalled the situation which he had left, he could not blind himself to the fact that he was going to risk everything. From now on it would be open war between him and John Dorr.

Drake and Tubbs received him with unaffected relief. A few words sufficed to make the status of affairs plain.

Wilkerson had lost his sense of fear oddly enough; as he had come into the camp a dozen miners had recognized him and scowled. He had felt their hatred and it fed fat the man's sinister passion to do harm, to hurt, to destroy. Now he faced Drake and Tubbs arrogantly.

"It won't be long till these chaps find out who's boss," he said. With a significant look at Drake he pulled out the forged deeds and handed them to Tubbs.

"Those mean that I'm legally the owner of the Master Key mine," he announced.

The engineer peered at them dully. He haltingly mumbled over some of the legal phrases, grinned slowly and passed the papers back.

"I guess that'll fix 'em!" he said huskily.

"I guess it will," was the rejoinder.

Tubbs seemed thoughtful, glancing out of the window now and again. Drake voiced his feeling. "The sooner you let the miners know and get things settled, the better."

Wilkerson licked his dry lips. The battle was on. He broke the silence by saying gruffly: "Call 'em up here, Bill!"

When the men were gathered before him Wilkerson stepped forward and commenced to speak. He could not break their sullen silence, and after a few words of generalities he mustered his courage and shouted, "I am owner of this mine! I have the deeds right here!"

Ruth Parts From Old Tom Kane.

The effect of this was far other than he had expected. Not a murmur came from the still, motionless throng. It was as if they had not heard him. In a lower tone he repeated it. "I am the owner of the Master Key mine and all that goes with it."

There is a quality in the silence of the crowd of earnest men that is more questioning than any word could be. The men who had worked and toiled for old Tom Gallon, who had been deceived and baffled, who had had their loyalty tested to the utmost, now demanded through their imperious silence that Wilkerson open up his mind to them. If he was indeed the owner of the Master Key, what did he intend to do?

"You'd better say some more quickly," warned Drake, in a low tone. And Wilkerson, completely bewildered, set the match to the powder. He stepped forward with as ugly a look as he could assume and cried: "Now tell me what you want!"

Instantly the air was filled with roars of rage and disappointment.

Fifteen minutes later Harry Wilkerson was sweating within the cabin. With a shaking hand he poured himself out a tumbler of Tubbs' whisky. He had promised the miners back pay, steady work, full wages and food. He must make good and he did not know how.

Presently the liquor steadied him and he turned to Tubbs, who was chuckling to himself emptily, as if over some invisible comedy that was being played before his drunken eyes.

"Tubbs!" he said sharply, "you must find out what men we can trust. Say nothing, but get all the information you can. I'll make it worth the while of the men who'll stick by me."

The next morning he set Drake to work clearing up odds and ends of business while he himself busied himself in going over the mine and getting the gangs to work again.

It was late in the afternoon when Tom Kane appeared on the mail wagon. The driver had already informed him of how affairs were going and the cook wasted no time. He climbed down from the high seat, jerked his battered suit case out of the wagon and made straight for his shanty. Within five minutes he had divested himself of his black clothes and donned his official overalls and apron. Then he appeared on the porch as calm and unconcerned as though he had not been away.

In no time at all a couple of dozen miners had gathered to shake hands and swap news. Naturally their biggest item was Wilkerson's proclamation of ownership.

At this Tom Kane laughed scornfully. He derided the papers, ridiculed the miners for being fools taken in and stated in set terms that he, Tom Kane, actually held the place of authority.

This soon came to Wilkerson's ears and he hurried down the hill to stop what he knew to be a dangerous secession. Instantly the old cook locked horns with him, pooh-poohed him to his face, called him names of peculiar virulence and offered to fight him on any terms.

Before long the camp was in an uproar and it was due to certain cooler heads that trouble did not ensue immediately. These men insisted that there was time to settle the dispute of ownership, forced Wilkerson to withdraw his command that Kane leave the mine instantly and managed to bring a semblance of peace out of disorder. Kane bowed his neck to the yoke of their authority but dispatched a trusty messenger to the station with a telegram to John to come as soon as possible. Wilkerson resorted to a scene which was eventually to threaten the very existence of the Master Key. He sent Drake south to confer with a desperado whom he knew who could gather a band of Mexicans like himself on short notice, ready for anything that promised loot.

"Tell Jose to be here tomorrow night!" he instructed him. "I'll want about twenty men well armed."

Drake rode away as from destruction, cursing the luck that had put him in the power of such a man.

Dynamite.

In response to Kane's message John Dorr, Ruth Gallon and Everett left Beverly Hills for Silent Valley. They arrived the third day after the cook and from the moment they were recognized the miners dropped their attitude of sulky waiting and thronged about their mistress, cheering and shaking hands. When they had gone into the big house Kane arrived, apron and all, to report on the situation.

"It's come to a showdown," he remarked. "Wilkerson has several of the worthless fellows here and a lot of half-breeds back in the hills. He knows I have that money of yours and he's promised it to the Mexicans if they help him. You see Wilkerson will keep his skirts clear that way. He can say that it was a raid by bandits."

"How soon does all this happen?" drawled John.

Kane glanced at him curiously. He understood that warning not to frighten Ruth and went on airily, "Oh I reckon just as soon as Wilkerson gets Tubbs weaned from that bottle of his."

But when Ruth had gone to her own rooms the cook wasted no words in smoothing things over.

"You've got to act and act quick," he told John and Everett. "It ain't the time for fooling. Tonight may do the business, for those Mexicans are impatient. Remember that Wilkerson has the keys to the powder house and he has all kinds of chance to lay his traps."

"I don't think he expected us so soon," John remarked.

"A good cook always has grub for people that drop in unexpected like," was the grim response. "Just take a peek down there now!"

Through the window John saw that the camp was quietly but surely dividing into two parties. The older miners were gathered about the cook shanty. Around the office stood a dozen or so malcontents, half drunk, under the leadership of Tubbs, who was wholly drunk, and on the porch talking to Wilkerson were a couple of Mexicans.

"It looks as if they meant to rush the camp," Dorr said thoughtfully. He proceeded to arm himself and Everett quietly followed suit.

"I'm going to talk to the boys first," said Dorr. He left the bungalow and strode off down the hill, followed by the cook.

The events of the next few moments came thick and fast. Before Dorr had well started on his explanation that Wilkerson had no claim on the mine there was a gun fired up by the mine tunnel mouth.

"That's a signal that the Mexicans are making trouble!" Kane shouted. "Look out for dynamite in the shaft, John!"

Without a word further Dorr leaped down from the porch of the cook shanty and started up the hill, followed by a dozen faithful supporters. Other shots were fired. Wilkerson appeared at the tunnel mouth and then vanished inside. John sprang upon the trestle and rushed after him.

Instantly a band of Mexicans materialized half way down the hill, fired a few shots and retreated. John paid no attention to them but kept on.

Once within the tunnel he saw a faint gleam of light ahead of him. He understood that Kane was right. Wilkerson was playing a desperate game in blowing up the shaft and then in the ensuing confusion allowing the bandits to loot undisturbed. He could assert when all was over that he had done his best to fight them off, but was overpowered.

A few yards farther on John stopped. A dark figure rushed by him towards the open air. But the little glow of light remained. For a moment Dorr hesitated. Then he leaped forward and began trying to extinguish a lighted fuse.

He had almost succeeded when a bullet whizzed by him, then a second spattered on the rock overhead. He turned and fired blindly in the direction of the shots and resumed his task. The fuse was short, but he succeeded in extinguishing it and started back. He met a fusillade of bullets. He dashed on towards the mouth of the tunnel and suddenly emerged on Wilkerson, who, not being able to see into the murk of the shaft, was firing blindly into the opening.

With a shout John leaped for the man whom he now knew to be seeking his life.

Seeing their two leaders grappling, both sides ceased to waste the issue of that mighty conflict.

John Dorr for the first time in his life knew the absolute and terrific thirst of killing that sometimes comes to a man. It was either his life or Wilkerson's. And no one should interfere with his revenge. He threw himself on the man with but one object in view: to slay him bare handed.

Wilkerson fought tigerishly and for the moment had the advantage. The lofty trestle was an ill place for a heavy man like Dorr to fight on and the other's agility and lithe quickness seemed about to win when John by a sudden unexpected and desperate maneuver caught him and threw him clear into the air, breaking his clutch with a terrific blow. Then he jerked him to the edge of the trestle and flung him over.

Standing erect, John drew the air into his tortured lungs and let out a tremendous yell of triumph. For the moment he was no longer a product of civilization. He was primeval. He had slain his foe. The valley echoed with his wild proclamation of supremacy.

Ruth Gallon heard that barbaric yell and shuddered. Tom Kane stared upward at the figure on the trestle and his open mouth seemed lipless, for he, too, shared in the moment's blood lust.

And on the rocks below Wilkerson's figure sprawled grotesquely, its white and darkling face turned sightlessly to the sky.

Fair Listed Tire Prices For Dealers and Consumers

Goodrich sets the prices on a fair basis to dealers and consumers, effecting a big saving for tire users and guaranteeing a better business basis for all tire dealers and insuring fairer treatment to consumers.

In an interview today, R. J. Murphy, local manager B. F. Goodrich company, stated:

"It is also an attempt to set right—with the public—thousands of well-intentioned retailers of tires and auto accessories.

"These have, by circumstances, been forced into the gradual adoption of a most unwholesome custom, viz., that of selling tires under instead of selling tires, to consumers—of selling discounts off the price lists, instead of selling mileage and service in tires.

"It is not an attempt to make things harder for the kind of tire manufacturer whose product apparently cannot be sold without the doubtful expedient of the padded price list. Said expedient consisting of an alleged 'price list' which is purposely printed 'up' so that it may then be deliberately discounted down by the dealer, to provide 'a special bargain' to the consumer who is unwary, or who is too busy to investigate values. This attempt is being made also with a sincere desire to save the retailer of tires from the consequences of further growth of that padded price list custom which is inciting consumers to patronize auto-tire specialists and band together to maintain 'supply depots,' with which to fight what they, erroneously, consider exortionate prices and profits supposed to be charged by retailers, on 'price list' basis.

Padded Price Lists.

"Without the padded price lists, which in some cases show as much as 55 per cent retail profit on tires (as against the $11 profit on a single 34x4 plain-tread tire), the 'cut-price specialists' would have no reason for existence, could not make headway, nor threaten to cut the market in tires beneath the dealer cost.

"With the padded price lists, and the bitter price-cutting conditions that abnormally always invite, the tire dealer makes, in the end, much less profit, on average, than the honest, unprejudiced one to which he is entitled. Thus he loses three ways, through the padded price list custom:

"1. Through the impairment of his legitimate market and consequently the price specialists, and by consumers' supply depots.

"2. Through obtaining a lower average profit per tire during the year, because he cannot help seeing cut-price cutting competition which excessive profits always invites.

"3. Through the heavy increase in the cost of selling tires, for salesman's time, when each customer that comes to the store with quick-cut price list must shop around in order to find out which will give him the largest discount off the price list of the tire he wants to buy.

"More costly and dangerous to the dealer than all three of these is the undermining of public confidence, in the kind of store that is popularly believed to have several prices for the same article (an unreliable method of selling goods), that and the tomorrow, which comes out of it, is the dealer's side of the case.

"The consumer's side now claims our attention.

"Tires are often emergency needs!

"When the car owner needs a new tire, he is more likely to need it on-the-road, and (2) is, than at his latter leisurely 'order-far-in-advance' conditions. If he can step into an auto accessory store, a garage, or repair shop in the neighborhood of his need, and there get the tire he wants, put on in 20 minutes, it is worth a great deal to him to continue his outing without laying up his car while he awaits shipment and delivery of same tire, on his telegraphed order. But, if auto owners do not patronize auto accessory, or local tire dealers, these must go out of business, leaving such convenient sources of supply would then be missed more by tire users than by anyone else.

Means Much to Consumer.

"That is why the adoption of a fair price list, and the cutting out of the seemingly extortionate padded price lists, means so much to both consumer and retailer of tires. That is why we take the risk of lining up the entire tire manufacturing industry against us, in a sincere effort to put the selling and buying of tires on the same sound, safe and progressive basis that prevails with all other merchandise is today retailed upon.

"We want to see price lists that are dependable, price lists that correctly and fairly represent the manufacturer's own sincere valuation of the mileage and service he puts into his tires.

"Price lists that are reasonable, logical and reliable, not made to quote discounts off the face of, and there on. Of course there will still be wide differences in the values to consumers, as great as the difference in the facilities, capacity and skill of each manufacturer.

"It is not expected, nor required, that price lists of tire manufacturers shall be competitive values, but only that they shall accurately and reliably measure the value which they represent, and intend to give consumers, for the amount each consumer invests in tires.

"It is not desired that the manufacturers' price lists shall cut the dealer's profit down to the point where he cannot afford to do business and make money. It is only essential, urged and desired, that the retail profits offered by price lists shall be moderate enough to be bona fide.

"Not preposterous 'paper profits' that almost compel consumers to ruin the price specialists, and by consumers' supply depots.

"2. Through obtaining a lower average profit per tire during the year, because he cannot help seeing cut-price cutting competition which excessive profits always invites.

"3. Through the heavy increase in the cost of selling tires, for salesman's time, when each customer that comes to the store with quick-cut price list must shop around in order to find out which will give him the largest discount off the price list of the tire he wants to buy.

"More costly and dangerous to the dealer than all three of these is the undermining of public confidence, in the kind of store that is popularly believed to have several prices for the same article (an unreliable method of selling goods), that and the tomorrow, which comes out of it, is the dealer's side of the case.

"Compare these with 'Fair List' prices, showing tremendous reductions with prices you have paid for Goodrich tires, for instance, old price on Goodrich 34x4, smooth tread, $24.35. Present fair list price, $19.40. Ask your dealer for users net price list, showing prices on all sizes."

SEVEN TEAMS ARE TIED IN CHICAGO BIKE RACE

Walthour-Bedell Team With the Leaders—Other Five Teams Are a Lap Behind.

Chicago, January 30.—After forty-six hours the seven leading teams in the six-day bicycle race had covered 931 miles at 9 o'clock tonight. The other five teams were but a lap behind.

The leading teams were:

Walthour-Bedell, Moran-McNamara, Egg-Verri, Walker-Root, Drobosh-Piercey, Corry-Carman, Linhart-Dupuy.

WARS OF PAST DEADLIER THAN THE MODERN WARS

This Is Largely Due to Progress in Surgery and Use of Antiseptics.

Amsterdam.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Contrary to the popular impression that modern wars result in a greater number of deaths than those of the past, the reverse appears to be true, according to an article reproduced in The Tijd. It is pointed out that this is largely due to the progress in surgery, the use of efficacious antiseptics, the great development of modern army sanitation, and the high efficiency of the medical troops.

But the greater degree in civilization and the existence-generally of a highly developed humanitarianism have also helped to reduce the numbers of dead of the battlefield, it is stated. In antiquity prisoners of war were hardly taken—the massacre followed the battle, and when males were carried into slavery they generally were not part of the defeated army but members of the civil population of the country which had been invaded.

At Cannæ, the Carthaginians, for instance, lost only 5,000, but killed 70,000 Romans, or about 80 per cent of the entire force which opposed them. The Romans, on the other hand, suffered only a loss of 14 dead in the battle of Cherones, but massacred 110,000 of the enemy, 90 per cent of the army they had defeated.

During the middle ages this state of affairs continued. Wounded and captives were killed without mercy, and the cities whose entire populations was put to the sword were many. During the thirty years' war a similar ferocity prevailed, but an improvement began to make itself felt in the "decimation" of prisoners of war. The captured soldiers were stood in line and then every tenth man was executed, usually hanged on a nearby tree, with some sort of accident governing who the first "tenth" victim should be. Later on it became necessary to apply this cruel system of selection as a measure of discipline to one's own troops, especially when a mutiny had to be coped with and the men refused to say who their ringleaders were.

Beginning with the seven years' war, the number of deaths in battle and from wounds received have decreased in the following percentages:

Percentage of killed in forces engaged:

Seven years' war	42
Napoleonic wars	35
Crimean war	16
Italian war	10
France-Prussian war	9
Chinese war	10
Anglo-Boer war	09
Manchurian war	12
Turko-Bulgarian campaign	12
Turko-Serbian campaign	10
Turko-Greek campaign	08

The tendency of modern wars to show a constantly diminishing percentage of deaths is also indicated by some of the most important battles of these and other campaigns, as the following list of percentages of the losses through death during or after the action, shows:

Horodino	30
Austerlitz	27
Waterloo	27
Solferino	30
Mukden	23
Liau-Tjang	10
Lule-Burgas	10
Tschadaldja	10
Monastir	10

The absence of all reliable data on the losses so far sustained in the European war make even an estimate impossible.

MINISTERS WILL STOP SMITH-FLYNN BOUT

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 30.—Ministers will try to stop Monday's bout between "Gunboat" Smith and Jim Flynn by court action if Governor Willis will not prevent the fight, according to a statement today by the Methodist Ministers' association. An injunction will be asked for on the ground that fighting fosters public gaming.

The statement was issued by the association after a conference with John C. Speaks, chief state game warden, who as personal representative of Governor Willis was here investigating conditions surrounding the holding of the bout.

YANKEES' FRANCHISE TRANSFER COMPLETED

New York, January 30.—Transfer of the stock of the New York Americans to Jacob Ruppert and T. L. Huston was completed today. President Ban Johnson stated the new owners had paid the remainder of the purchase price due Frank Farrell and assumed control.

Waycross Budget.

Waycross, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—With over half the items of the 1915 budget decided upon, it is believed council will pass the budget at the first regular meeting of next month, which will be held Tuesday night. Considering the manner in which the budget, as it will outline in detail what the administration proposes to do during the next year, will not be new, none of the figures have been announced as yet, it is not believed there will be very different from the 1914 budget. There is more clamor for permanent paving than usual, and in the street department it is believed every effort will be made to take care of our or more paving projects.

Brautigan to Little Rock.

Little Rock, Ark., January 30.—Announcement was made tonight that George Brautigan, shortstop of the Appleton club of the Wisconsin-Illinois league last year, had been signed by the Little Rock baseball club of the Southern association. Brautigan will play third base.

More Horses Needed.

(From The Cleveland Leader.)

One of the commonest news items of the day is the one which tells how many thousand horses some agent of a foreign government is buying in the United States. Wherever horses can be obtained in large numbers such transactions are taking place.

The great war is simply consuming horses by wholesale. It is killing them and maiming them so fast that at the rate things have been going there will be nearly a horse famine if the struggle does not end very much longer.

Obviously, one of the surest sources of profit for American farmers is the raising of good horses. The end of the war will not only find Europe largely bereft of horses but it will probably find it will be followed by such demands for industrial and commercial purposes that the United States will be called upon to make good the Old World's lack, much as it is depended upon now.

The colts foaled next summer will be fully matured before the effects of the war upon the supply of horses and the need of them in many parts of the world can pass away or cease to keep prices above the normal zero.

WAR TALK CAUSED BY NAVAL MEASURE

State of Country's Defenses Discussed in House—Gillett Fears Victor in Europe May Dominate the World.

Washington, January 30.—Possibilities of war and the state of the country's defense furnished the subject of another long discussion in the house today, where the naval appropriation bill was under consideration. The naval construction program had not been reached when the house adjourned and the bill went over until Tuesday.

Points of order struck out provisions for the creation of a chief of operations and a naval board in the navy department, and for authority to use an expended balance of $1,000,000 for aeronautics. Representative Hobson immediately introduced the chief of operations section as a separate bill. Democratic leaders expect to pass the aeronautics money by adding $1,000,000 to the total of the bill.

Gillett for Strong Defenses.

Representative Gillett, of Massachusetts, made the principal speech of the day, arguing for strong national defenses. He said he had voted against large armaments in the past, but that recent events had caused him to change his mind. While the danger of such a thing is slight, he declared it would be possible for the victor in the present war to disarm all other nations and become mistress of the world.

"Among those nations we considered the most aggressive and militarized," he said, "has suddenly burst forth a warship of force, reversion to the primitive savage. It is lawless selfishness, a disregard of sacred obligations, of pity, of mercy and of humanity, which is depressing and confounding."

The German doctrine, of the conduct of war is not justice, and never acknowledged by Europe, might become one powerful source of trouble, he said. He also criticised the attitude "of some of our states" as "contemptuous, singling out the Japanese for unfriendly legislation."

Japanese May Resent.

"If this unfriendly conduct—this treatment of Japan as an interior and an outcast—continues," he added, "it may cause a wave of resentment to sweep the Japanese people into a hostile attitude."

Representative Padgett, in charge of the bill, told the house the nation was amply prepared in case submarine and in long range torpedoes.

"We have a full supply of torpedoes for every tube we have," he said, "and in addition a reserve supply equal to the amount on hand, lacking six, and if an order placed abroad had not been cut off by the war we would today have a surplus of one in the torpedo reserve."

Against the opposition of Chairman Padgett and other members of the naval committee, the house adopted an amendment of Representative Hobson, of Alabama, to the naval bill to prohibit the purchase of big calibered armor-piercing shells, unless it is demonstrated that at 12,000 yards the shells can penetrate ten-inch Kruppized armor plate with the use of standard service charges. Representative Hobson explained that the effect of this amendment would be to get a higher class of armor-piercing shells.

Daniels on Naval Program.

Secretary Daniels declared today, discussing the naval building program, that he thought this year's construction plans should be carried out without regard to the European war.

"We do not yet know enough about the war to have it influence this year's building program," said he. "We are observers in Europe and are planning to send more, so that by next December we can make recommendations to congress based upon the results of the great conflict. But for the present, battleships, submarines and destroyers are the bread and butter of the navy."

For these reasons, he said, he had not recommended a battle cruiser. Both he and his aides agreed that problems of naval strategy in the North sea, a comparatively small body of water, were altogether different than those confronting the United States with the Atlantic on one side, the Pacific on the other, and in addition the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean sea.

Secretary Daniels was on the floor with the naval committee watching the progress of the bill.

FOR ADEQUATE NAVY, ARGUMENT IS MADE.

New York, January 30.—The necessity for an adequate navy, kept at a high point of efficiency, was argued by Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, and George von L. Meyer, former secretary of the navy, in addresses at a luncheon of the Republican club here today.

"There is no harm in saying our navy is third largest today, and that France and Japan are progressing," said Mr. Roosevelt. "The future of the navy is in your hands and the hands of your congressmen, but unfortunately many people do not know the power our congressmen are. If we had not an adequate navy it would mean the loss of Hawaii, American Samoa, Porto Rico, the Panama canal and the Philippines."

The assistant secretary derided "amateur strategists, who say the day of the battleship is gone and advocate submarines."

Former Secretary Meyer declared an adequate navy as necessary to the inland cotton grower and manufacturer as to inhabitants of seaports. He called attention to the lack of battle cruisers.

"It was because the Bluecher was slow that she was sunk," he said. "Japan has four battle cruisers, and Japan could wipe out our entire commerce in the Pacific, because we have no ships that could overtake her battle cruisers. The fastest cruiser we have is 22 knots."

Herbert L. Satterlee, former assistant secretary of the navy, said:

"Some people say you can raise an army of a million men overnight. But you can't raise blue jackets overnight. You must have trained men in the navy and it's murder if they are not trained."

RECEIVER FOR ESTATE OF MISSING BANKER

Mobile, Ala., January 30.—Following a petition in chancery court here today, A. J. Leggett, of Waynesboro, Miss., was named receiver for the estate of C. C. Green, missing banker of that place, and president of the North Mobile Improvement company, of this city. Mr. Green disappeared from Mobile at the Louisville and Nashville railroad station January 13, and has not been heard from since.

The petition was filed by his wife and other creditors and debts totalling more than $30,000, "cast due." There is other indebtedness, the petition says, naming the City Bank and Trust company, of this city, as a creditor. Other creditors are banks in Alabama and Mississippi. The value of the estate is estimated at $200,000.

SUGGEST COUNTY FARM FOR WARE COUNTY

Waycross, Ga., January 30.—(Special.) That the county commissioners may soon investigate plans whereby the county can raise sufficient food for stock as well as supply many items of food for the convicts became known today. A centrally located county farm has been suggested as one way to cut expenses. The county at present has no farm and all foodstuffs have to be purchased, most of it coming from states other than Georgia. The question will no doubt prove an interesting one when brought up for consideration.

It is asserted that more children are employed in dangerous occupations now than when peace reigned.

NO WARNING GIVEN BY GREAT BRITAIN

That Purchase of German and Austrian Ships Will Be Considered Unneutral. Bryan Denies the Story.

Washington, January 30.—Diplomatic angles of the proposal embodied in the pending shipping bill for purchase of merchant ships by the United States government were widely discussed today as a result of a report that Sir Edward Grey had informed the state department that purchase of any German or Austrian ships would be regarded as an unneutral act.

It was stated positively at the state department and at the British embassy that no communication on the subject had been received from the British foreign office. Not only has the American government not asked or received from an official character treated Great Britain's views, but no move has come either Russia or France.

References have been made to the subject of transfer of flags in diplomatic correspondence over the steamships Lusitania and Britannia, but those cases involve transactions between private individuals, whereas under the pending bill the United States government would be a party to purchases. The state department holds that what might have been said in the Dacia or Britannia cases, therefore, does not apply to government ships.

At the British embassy the suggestion was volunteered that since the bill had not yet passed, negotiations would not be opened, and that even if the measure were enacted, there was no reason to suppose the United States would commit unneutral act. It was stated authoritatively, however, that the British government had told Secretary Bryan what, under certain circumstances, would be the view of the British government, pointing out incidentally that while England had recognized some transfers of flag during war, there was no doubt in his mind of the opposition of Russia and France.

What the hypothetical circumstances are to which the ambassador referred have not been disclosed, but they are presumed to relate to any wholesale release of German and Austrian ships now docked in American ports. Such a step, high officials declared, is not in contemplation. They have not yet even decided if it will be necessary to purchase any belligerent vessels at all.

Although the ambassador discussed the subject orally with Secretary Bryan recently, a distinction was drawn at the embassy today between his personal views and any official expression by his government.

Right of United States.

The right of the United States to purchase vessels hitherto under a belligerent flag is vigorously upheld by a number of publicists who have made an exhaustive study of precedents. They point out that even if the declaration of London can properly be construed as prohibiting transfers of flag during war, which the department does not admit, the United States is not bound by it. Article 65 of the declaration says:

"The provisions of the present declaration must be treated as a whole and cannot be separated," and the British order in council accepted some of the provisions and modified others.

To oppose the claim that France never has recognized changes in registry, officials point to the rules issued by the French minister of marine during the Franco-Prussian war, instructing commanders to inquire into whether or not each transfer of flag was bona fide. Before the declaration of London was drafted, England, too, it is claimed, held transfers legal where there was no question as to their bona fide character.

High officials here contend that the very fact of purchase by the United States government would establish the bona fide character of the sale. They say it could not be supposed a government would enter any secret arrangement for eventual transfer of a vessel to the original owner. Officials claim also that even under the declaration of London, where transfers are prohibited, "to evade the consequences of war," the American government could prove its purpose was obviously not to assist a belligerent, but to provide transportation for its own products. Confident of the position, American officials are preparing to take the subject up in formal negotiations after the bill passes.

Democratic Leader Underwood made a statement in the house denying, in the name of the state department, that Great Britain had given official notice that it would regard as unneutral the purchase by interned German and Austrian vessels under the pending ship bill.

He referred to a story published today saying a written statement to that effect was in possession of Secretary Bryan from Sir Edward Grey.

White Cars Make Big Hit At the Chicago Auto Show

The Chicago 1915 motor car show, the second big motor event of the year, opened at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, January 23.

As usual, it was held in the Coliseum and the First Regiment armory. The Chicago show is always a rival to the earlier New York show, and the latter this year was the best ever staged since the first shows were held in Madison Square Garden fifteen years ago.

The Chicago show this year marks another upward step in the history of the automobile industry.

There were 258 distributors at the Chicago show, and of these 74 display cars, 176 accessories and parts and 4 electric makers had attractive displays.

There is a marked distinction, however, between dealers who visit the New York show and the Chicago show in that the latter come with the intention of doing business, and it is a fact that more new agencies are placed at the Chicago show than any other in the country.

Although each of the 258 exhibitors has created something new or more efficient for 1915, yet the principal interest, as it always will be, is motor car body design.

All makers have competed in a final effort to produce a perfect streamline body. As one of the exhibitors expressed it, the streamline means a body whose lines conform to the natural course or stream of air current sweeping the surface of a moving object—the curves of speed and beauty and of least resistance.

The general sentiment was expressed that the White company, with their latest car, have most perfectly accomplished the true streamline body. This effect is produced and accentuated by the fact that the front at the back of the front seat is absorbed in a graceful arch, called the center cowl—which merges into the streamline. The open cowl is the keynote in a design which represents the finally-perfect streamline body.

White cars are a blend of unbroken curves, each complementing the other and producing in all a masterpiece of body designing which compiles the admiration of artists and laymen alike.

White cars have a distinctly foreign appearance, and it is said that designers of cars built abroad will adopt the White streamline creation. This will probably be the first time in the history of the automobile business that an American idea will be duplicated abroad. A practical turn is also to be found in the artistic achievement in that compartments have been built under the center cowl which makes an alcove into which the extra seats are folded and provides roomy compartments for wraps, packages and coats.

It was estimated that more than 250,000 motor car enthusiasts passed through the gates during the seven days of the show.

The Coliseum and the Armory were beautifully decorated and the color scheme was even more effective than last year. Another feature of the show was the large number of moderately-priced cars. Rumors are already abroad that a 12-cylinder car will soon be manufactured.

FINE YEAR EXPECTED BY MANAGER OF REO

Wonderful Season for Automobiles Is Predicted by Richard H. Scott.

"I can see nothing to it but the most wonderful year in our history," said Richard H. Scott, vice president and general manager of the Reo Motor Car company, when asked yesterday what he thought of the business outlook for the coming year.

"Speaking for the country and for business generally, seems to me every thing points to a record year. All the conditions are present to make it so. Crops last year were above average and prices are high. The banks are overflowing with money. The reserves have reached an unprecedented point. And hundreds of millions more are being added each month. The thermometer of business, the stock market, is showing higher all the time—a steady, healthy climb.

"One interesting phase of the present and recent past condition is the way the automobile business is getting through the war. Business in our line has been splendid. As early as November 10 we shipped the last car of the 1914 series from the factory and for nearly sixty days were unable to ship cars to dealers. All the time the demand held full.

"At present we are doing something we have never done before—running a full night shift. Trying hard to catch up with the winter demand. Think or it—and then talk of slack times.

"I know there have been men out of work—and perhaps a few more than usually at the same season. But not many. And I know of no skilled men—men with trades—who are not working. In fact we are constantly on the lookout for skilled craftsmen in all of the sixty-five trades that enter into the making of an automobile.

"I have talked with a good many bankers, manufacturers and merchants and they all agree that times are not and have not been half as bad as we have been saying ourselves and that we are on the eve of what promises to be the most prosperous in the history of our country."

Southern Trip for Illinois.

Urbana, Ill., January 30.—The University of Illinois baseball team, Western conference leaders, will make a southern trip during the Easter recess this year, according to the schedule announced tonight. Games will be played with Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical, at Starkville, April 2 and 3; Tulane, at New Orleans, April 5 and 6; University of Alabama, at Tuscaloosa, April 7, and Vanderbilt, at Nashville, Tenn., April 8.

COLUMBUS TOO STRONG FOR BIRMINGHAM TEAM

Score 56 to 30 in Favor of Georgia Boys—Game Fast and Interesting.

Columbus, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Columbus M. C. A. basketball team ran away with the team of the Birmingham Athletic association here tonight, the score being 56 to 30. It was one of the fastest and most interesting games played here this season.

Just 55 seconds after the whistle sounded for play Peddy scored the first point for Columbus, but the game had gone nine minutes and 45 seconds before McGowan scored the first point for the visitors.

Peddy's work was phenomenal. The exceptionally fine pass work of the Columbus was a feature that worked like a machine from the beginning. The guarding of Dozier was fine. Clay and McGowan did the stellar work for the visitors.

The end of the first half showed the score to be 26 to 10 in favor of Columbus (2). The second half Birmingham came back with exceptional strength.

The score:

Columbus (56)	Pos.	Birmingham (30)
Peddy (21)	F	Moore (12)
Struppa (14)	F	Braselton (6)
		Major (2)
Masser (8)	C	Clay (6)
Newman (4)	G	Bisak (0)

FEDS WILL HAVE A MINOR LEAGUE IN NEW ENGLAND

New Haven, Conn., January 30.—James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal league, announced today after a conference of baseball men, that the Federals have a minor league in New England. He declined to indicate definitely the cities it would embrace, but said it was planned to put teams in those places where organized baseball is now played. He said he had found conditions in New England much more favorable for such an organization than he had supposed.

President Gilmore said the league would be made up of eight clubs, each financed locally. The Federal league will furnish each with six players. The clubs will pay the Federal league $200 a month for each player, the parent league paying the difference when the player's salary is in excess of that amount.

SEMINARY GIRLS AID PENCIL FUND

By Purchasing Two Gross of Pencils—The Various Classes Have Picture Taken for the Annual.

By Elizabeth Macdonald

Such excitement today when the classes had their pictures taken. The photographers came out at recess and the pictures were taken, each class by itself, on and beside the porch. I hope they will be good. What a calamity it would be to have a poor picture in such an important publication as the annual.

The sophomore class is very much interested in the hospital for "our" crippled children, as the president put it this morning. We have ordered two gross of pencils in their behalf, and Miss Emma has very kindly resigned from the pencil trade in our favor until such time as we shall have sold them.

The sophomores are not the only ones interested in this work. Six of the girls in the sixth grade have formed a club and are making a donation. The president of this club is Elizabeth Crawford, and the other girls are Marsha Braddon, Gladys Griffin, Jamie Coleman, Margaret Lippold and Margaret Tillman.

Yesterday the seniors were surprised by a box of lovely orchids from Mr. Hollinsworth. There was one for each of the fifty members. You can judge how greatly the courtesy was appreciated.

Last Friday the faculty gave us a most delightful entertainment. Miss Macgregor gave an interesting talk on "American Composers," illustrated by a program of piano numbers most charmingly played by herself and songs by Mr. Scott and Mrs. Hurt.

A members of the Burroughs Nature club talked to us about preserving and attracting birds, and presented the school with a bird-larder, which we will all watch with interest. Pamphlets containing interesting information about birds and bird-houses were left for references, and we enjoyed hearing two "true bird stories."

FAIR STREET SCHOOL

Third Grade "A" Pupils Make Pretty Wind Mills.

The third grade A has made some pretty wind mills out of strawboard. They made these in connection with their history work.

The children in second grade A who have not been absent or tardy are Pat Hall, Dan Green, Lillian Williams, Christine Chambless, Lottie Hentschel and Inous Fambrough.

The second grade B did some good work in dramatizing "Hansel and Gretel." The children of this grade have written some very good compositions on the squirrel. The following one was written by Harry Barnett:

The Squirrel.

The squirrel lives in the woods. He climbs from tree to tree and in summer he gathers acorns and nuts for winter use.

He has a fur coat and a long bushy t[ail].

Mrs. Howard Payne begs that each parent-teacher association, whether affiliated with the Congress of Mothers or not, observe Founders' day, February 17. This should be a time to arouse the whole country to a sense of its duty and responsibility to childhood; to surround the childhood of the whole world with wise, loving care during the impressionable years of life which will develop a higher type of citizenship in health, morals and efficiency. February 17 commemorates the eighteenth anniversary of the founding of the National Congress of Mothers. From an humble beginning the organization has assumed gigantic proportions, numbering its members in every state in the nation. But never very ill nor well doing, the Georgia branch is even now planning a campaign for increased membership. Every association should put forth an extra effort on Founders' day to secure new members, as well as to strive to devise a way to increase the efficiency of their present working force.

The president is daily receiving letters from all parts of the state saying that the different associations are preparing splendid programs for Founders' day.

The annual meeting of the Georgia Congress of Mothers, which will be held in Macon, Ga., March 17, promises to be of unusual interest and largely attended.

Report From Twelfth District.

In May, 1914, the Cochran Parent-Teacher association organized and federated with the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Mothers.

In May, 1914, lectures on baby-saving and child hygiene by National Chairman of Child Hygiene Mrs. Anne Steese Richardson, were attended by visitors from several towns.

In June, 1914, the Bleckley Club of Cochran affiliated with the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Mothers.

In August and September, forty-three letters were sent and congress literature mailed to forty-three superintendents and principals of schools in the twelfth district.

In September, a reception to teachers held by P. T. A. of Cochran; all parents invited and a good program rendered in the school auditorium, with the mayor, school trustees and the editor of The Cochran Journal on program.

Every month a column edited in The Cochran Journal presenting the work of the Congress of Mothers and giving programs and work of the local congress.

Literature on baby saving and child hygiene kept in ladies' rest room of Bleckley county courthouse, also better babies health posters given by The Woman's Home Companion.

School children provided with material for sewing and manual training by mothers' club; also articles for school bazar to put encyclopedia and reference work in school library.

In December, 1914, school bazar held under auspices of P. T. A. and Mothers' club, $75 realized by the Mothers' club for school library. One feature of this bazar was the better babies health exhibit and child hygiene. In this exhibit literature on baby saving and hygiene given free.

The domestic science committee of the P. T. A. of Cochran school made $85 at the school bazar, to be used as a nucleus for a fund to equip a domestic science room in the school.

One P. T. A. association entered a contest in which they won a watch, the prize coming from the sale of watch to go for school playground equipment.

The vice president of the Twelfth district, Mrs. D. E. Duggan, of Cochran, has asked and been granted permission, to speak to the Pulaski county and Bleckley county teachers' institutes when they meet.

Will celebrate Founders' day with an evening program and collection on the 17th of February.

Round Oak P. T. A. announces thirteen new members.

Founders' day will be observed by Forsythe Street school at Macon. Six new members have recently been added. This club also celebrated Arbor day with appropriate exercises and tree planting.

Eleventh District—Brunswick.

The regular meeting of the Glynn Parent-Teacher association was held at the high school yesterday, with twenty-five in attendance.

Mrs. N. H. Ballard read a very interesting paper on the recently-enacted Sheppard law which will mean a great deal to be enforced in the state.

President A. V. Wood, of the board of education, talked interestingly on the subject of "Personal Hygiene and Morals" of school children as taught by parents and teachers. This is a work recently taken up in the schools and it is proving the worth of such a study to the children.

The suggestion of the introduction of first aid remedies in all the city schools was favorably received by the board of education, and all the medicines and equipment needed will be ordered at once by the board.

Mrs. L. J. Haym, who, as chairman of the committee in charge of the work, and her assistants, deserve much credit for their efforts in this much-needed innovation.

The report from the Belgian relief committee was that two bolts of material had been made into garments for children and sent to Mrs. Theodore Bixley, at Washington, who had gratefully acknowledged receipt of the things.

Mrs. Leavy, chairman of reading circle committee, was that several available books, suitable for the purpose, were owned by members of the association and the members desiring to join the circle may communicate with Mrs. Leavy at once.

It was moved that a letter be sent to Miss Hollowell, state president of the association, asking that she remain president another year, after which the meeting adjourned.

PREP LEAGUE SHOTS AND PASSES

Now that the fives in the local prep league have finished the first round of their schedule, one can get a pretty good idea of just how the teams will wind up the finish by observing the standing of the various teams. As will be noted, Marist Fraser is the leader, having won four wins and no losses to their credit, having won every contest except the Donald Fraser game which ended in a fight when some of the spectators interfered in the playing of the game.

Boys' High is close upon the heels of the Marist, and it now appears as though the pennant will be decided among either one of these two teams, as Marist defeated the High school quintet in the opening game of the season, played upon the Marist court. Boys' High was without the services of their star guard, Jim Lawton, in this contest, however, and with him in the game the next time the two teams meet there may be a different result.

Unless the Tech High fire shows a wonderful pick-up in their playing within the next week Tech High supporters might as well count their team out of the running for the championship. The team has greatly missed the services of two star men in the three most important games which they have played so far. This has been the reason of the Tech High team to show up as strongly as it would have looked had the regular five had been playing.

If the Donald Fraser-Marist game is ordered played over, and that is what will more by be done, the Decatur boys will have a mighty good chance to knock the Marist team out of its perfect percentage. When the game was called at the meeting of the prep schools last week, the teams were tied up with 12 points each to their credit, owing to the superiority of the Donald Fraser court, visiting teams are used at a great disadvantage when playing the Decatur boys in their backyard. In the past two seasons the Donald Fraser boys have not suffered a single defeat on their court, and they are not going to let this record be broken.

Boys' High have certainly slipped it to their rivals, the Tech High school, in athletics during the past year or so. Last winter the Tech High crew was unanimously picked to win the Henry W. Grady cup easily, when what should Boys' High do but come in and cop it with Donald Fraser and Marist for the pennant and then proceed to beat both of these teams in the play-off for the championship.

Last spring Boys' High met Tech High in a series of three baseball games, and in every one of these the former school emerged victorious. Last fall the Tech High boys were picked to win over the purple and white team anywhere from three to five touchdowns. After a fierce game Boys' High won out, 3 to 0. And, now that football is over, Boys' High proceeded to muss up Tech High basketball team to the extent of 32 points to 14. Boys' High has been having a bad day all around when meeting the teams from the purple and white school.

Athletics out at the Georgia Military academy have been somewhat on the down grade for the past two or three years. In baseball, basketball and football the College Park teams are invariably found winding up the season at the bottom of the league. The G. M. A. has never won a basketball pennant, while its baseball successes have been few and far between. In football, however, the cadets have won more pennants than any other school in the association.

Peacock's victory over the Donald Fraser five recently comes as a most pleasant surprise to the followers of prep basketball. Year after year the Fourteenth street boys have been plagued away without making very much headway against the stronger teams of the other preps in and about the city. However, maybe the worm has turned, and this win may spur the Peacock boys on to win more contests. The season is just half over, and if the team works hard during the latter half of the race they may succeed in capturing quite a few contests.

Since nearly every school in the league has at least one extra good player, and many of the teams two or three, the question of choosing an all-prep team this season is going to be very difficult. Last year the all-prep selection was not so hard to make, as there were a few men who stood head and shoulders above everyone else in the league.

Boys High will present Scott, Lowry and Adams, all three hopes for making the all-prep choice. Tech High will rely upon Cintz, Parmalee and Bedell to make the team, while Marist will concentrate their hopes upon Cook, Hubert and Dodge. Of this bunch, Scott, Cintz, Bedell, Lowry and Hubert have all made it in years past. Whether or not their work will warrant their being placed upon the team this year remains to be seen.

ADAIR CHILDREN GREATLY ENJOY PLAYING GAMES

The seventh grade B girls and boys are very interested in the games of captain ball and potato relay race. The girls are to play with Crew street in captain ball, and the boys with Bell street in the potato relay race.

The sixth grade are anticipating great pleasure in the games of circle ball they are to play with Perkinson and Walker.

In the running broad jump, Charles Allen, of the sixth grade, was among the highest in the city. Lena Mae Peters came second in the broad jump.

Last week we were favored by two visitors, Miss Harralson and Mr. Landrum. Miss Harralson gave excellent talks to the seventh grades in music. Mr. Landrum gave a fine report of the school.

The third grade are doing fine these days. On one table they have an Indian village and many things that the Indians used. On another table is an Eskimo hut covered with snow. All around the hut the ground is covered with ice and snow. Near the hut is a sled with dogs hitched to it and an Eskimo man in the sled. They are greatly interested in these villages.

On the birthday of Robert E. Lee our school had a good program. It was as follows:

Song, "America"—By the school.
Recitation, "Sword of Lee"—Annie Lovelace.
Song, "Keller's American Hymn"—Seventh grade.
Recital, L. Adams—Read given an interesting talk on the life of Lee.
The program was closed with a song, "Dixie," by the school.

CREW ST. CHILDREN ENJOY VISITING GRANT PARK ZOO

The Henry W. Grady Debating and Declaiming society held a meeting last Friday, January 22.

The contestants for the boys' medal were Joe Katzoff, Joe Gershon and Max Rosinsky. The contestants for the girls' were Helen Gershon, Ruth Florence and Lila Parks.

The subject of the debate was "Resolved, That Boys Should Be Taught Home Work." The speakers of the affirmative side were Helen Gershon, Thelma Roussey and Miriam Angel.

The speakers on the negative side were Joe Katzoff, Lee Amlet and Lucien Bell. The arguments were interesting and waxed warm on both sides.

The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

The medals for declaiming were awarded by vote to Ruth Florence and Joe Gershon.

Our sub team in basketball was badly defeated last week by Formwalt's sub team.

The children of the third grade took a trip to Grant park last week to study the animals of the cat family. They enjoyed the outing very much, especially since the keeper, Mr. Boyd, was kind enough to give them a talk on the habits and homes of these animals.

TECH HI ORCHESTRA PRACTICING HARD

In Preparation for the Program That Will Be Rendered at the Teachers' Convention in February.

By Clarence W. Felheiman.

Now that the past week has gone and has taken with it the quarterly exams at Tech High, there are many students who are much sadder, but wiser, young men than they were last week at this time. Sadder because their reports will be decorated with red marks, which, as usual, mean danger, and wiser because they have found out how little they know.

Last week the seniors thought what they didn't know about analyt, script and physics could all be placed on a postage stamp and not spoil it much; now, however, they know that what they don't know would fill enough books to fit out a new Carnegie library and not leave any empty shelves. In fact, the seniors have decided on "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are 'I've plunged again.'" as the class' favorite (?) quotation. Despite the fact that so many had to take the exams fully as many did not have to take them and enjoyed holidays on Monday and Tuesday last.

The 1915 senior class is about the hardest working bunch of young fellows imaginable. During an off period last Wednesday, shortly before our big basketball game, Professor Wade thought it advisable, for the benefit of the ladies, to have a cinder path built from the edge of our spacious and somewhat muddy campus to the gate of the court. This plan was hardly out of his mouth before some of the hard working seniors were busy shoveling cinders. The path was soon completed and now makes a beautiful ornament to our grounds.

Rehearsing orchestra is proceeding often in conjunction with Boys' High in preparation for the program they are to render at the teachers' convention on February 6. The music which pours out of the chemical laboratory when they practice sounds pretty good and will no doubt be much better at the time of their performance, when they will be in tip-top shape.

Work on the annual is going on with renewed vigor, now that we have gotten the school interested and Miss Tehisen this year bids fair to surpass any other junior annual in this part of the country.

GIRLS' NIGHT

Pupils Gladly Greet One of School's Graduates.

We were visited by Mrs. Herman Weintraub last Wednesday night. She is one of our oldest girls, and, of course, we were glad to see her. We were also visited by Miss Lynch and two of her young lady friends.

The attendance of division No. 1 was very good last week. These girls are getting ready to begin their examinations in spelling, and they are all going to work hard for the spelling medal.

The war has had no effect on Cupid in the foreign ranks, as Lena Mallon and Rae Levitt, of division No. 1, are both engaged.

Girls of division No. 2 are just taking up fractions, and seem to be very much interested in them. They are also studying the poem of "Hiawatha" in English.

Many of the girls in division No. 3 are out on account of sickness.

We have two new scholars in division No. 4—Misses Sarah Fleming and Annette Kimbrough. The class is still working on their notebooks.

Marist Five Leads Prep Teams At End of First Round of Play

Prep Standing.

CLUBS.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Marist	4	0	1.000
Boys' High	4	1	.800
Donald Fraser	2	2	.500
Tech High	2	3	.400
Peacock	1	4	.200
G. M. A.	1	4	.200

In one of the hardest-fought and most sensational games that have been pulled off in the prep league this season, the Boys' High basketball five emerged victorious in their fray with Tech High last Friday afternoon, upon the latter's court, the score being 32 to 29.

The game was a nip-and-tuck affair from the opening whistle until the timekeepers announced that the time was up at the conclusion of the second half. First one team would take the lead, only to relinquish it to the opposition in the next few minutes. Some idea of the closeness of the contest can be gained from the fact that the score at the close of the first period showed but one point difference between the two teams. Tech High was credited with 14 points and Boys' High with 12.

Immediately after the beginning of hostilities in the second half, Boys' High put up some of the prettiest work that has ever been shown by a prep team in the city. Tech High relighter was responded with a dash that carried them ahead of their opponents once more. About the middle of the half, Boys' High put up a great spurt, which was featured by the splendid work of Scott and B. Adams, and which enabled them to maintain their small lead until the end of the contest.

The stars of the game for the Boys' High five were Scott and the two Adams brothers. Scott's nice passing enabled his team to score a good many points, while he himself managed to roll in a total of 15 points. L. Adams' guarding was good, as he held Cintz like a leach, rarely ever letting him get a shot.

For the Tech High the playing of Harlan, Cintz and Colcord was the work a doubt, the best. Harlan showed up especially strong at the scoring end of the game, as he netted 18 points of the 29 made by his teammates.

Line-up:

Boys' High (33)	Pos.	Tech High (29).
B. Adams	R. F.	Harlan (18)
Calhoun (6)	L. F.	Harlan (18)
Scott (15)	C.	Pinchor
L. Adams (2)	R. G.	Bedell
Lowry	L. G.	Cintz

Summary—Time of halves, 20 minutes. Referee, Hoyt. Field goals, Boys' High 12, Tech High 11. Foul goals, Boys' High 9 out of five chances; Cintz 1 out of two chances.

Marist Defeats Tech High.

Marist continued their march toward the prep league pennant last Friday afternoon when the team journeyed over to Tech High and proceeded to hand the junior smithies their third defeat of the season. The score was: Marist 40, Tech High 27.

One of the largest crowds that have ever been present at a basketball game in the city was on hand to witness the festivities, and they certainly got what they came after in the way of a good game of basketball.

Although the Tech High bunch was very materially weakened by the absence of two of their best men—J. Bedell and Parmalee—they put up a game fight and made a most creditable showing considering the conditions.

Tech High got the jump on their opponents at the opening of the game, getting by for a while as if the game would be a runaway for the Marietta street school. However, Marist got their team-work to going after a while, and straightway proceeded to overhaul their opponents.

Due to some fast passing and some great shooting by Emery Cook, the elongated center on the Marist five, the Ivy street cadets rolled in goal after goal until the score at the end of the half showed 22 points for Marist to but 14 for Tech High.

After the ten minutes' intermission Tech High entered the game with renewed spirit, fighting as though they would win out in spite of the weakened condition and the eight-point lead that Marist had from the preceding half.

Tech High's team was certainly going fine, all the men feeding the ball to Cintz and never taking a shot themselves. This straightway brought forth some splendid results, for the scrappy little guard was the star of the Marist score. The effort was apparently too much for the Tech High bunch to maintain, as they slowed down a little and let Marist slip over enough points to win the game.

The stars of the game from the Marist side were Cooke, Dodge and Hubert. The two first named men were in the court all the time, passing and shooting goals in rare form. Cooke's height enabled him to get the tip-off almost in every case from the Tech High center, Tozzicher, the pair annexed all of the total number of points rolled in by Marist. Hubert did good work at the guard position, successfully breaking up the team-work of Tech High by his speedy playing.

For Tech High school the work of Cintz and Colcord was the best. Cintz put up a wonderful game, considering the fact that both Marist guards stuck to him continuously throughout the game.

The line-up:

Marist (40).	Pos.	Tech High (27).
Dodge (16)	L. F.	Cintz (21)
Harrison (6)	F.	Bedell
		Hamlett (2), Day.
Cooke (18)	C.	Crowder (2)
Hubert	R. G.	Colcord
Jernigan	L. G.	Hamlett, Bancher.

Peacock Wins First.

Peacock won their first basketball game of the season on last Friday afternoon when the Donald Fraser team was taken in tow on the former's court by the close score of 12 to 10.

The game was fast and furiously contested throughout, the fastness of the play frequently resulting in fouls by both teams.

The Peacock team got the jump on their opponents at the start of the game and kept it during the remainder of the struggle, although the Decatur boys made a most creditable effort for a win. The score was tied by Donald Fraser several times, but when the whistle blew for the ending, Peacock was always there.

The stars of the game for the winners were Parker, Jones and F. Knox. Parker made a number of very difficult shots, while the other two men played well on the defensive.

For Donald Fraser team, the playing of Stanley and H. Thompson was the best, although he was closely guarded by the Peacock players, Stanley managed to score a total of five field goals.

The line-up:

Peacock (12).	Pos.	Donald Fraser (10.)
F. Knox (6)	R. F.	Stanley (11)
Parker (4)	L. F.	H. Thompson
Mangat	C.	Thompson
Jones	R. G.	Hollinsworth
Pew	L. G.	Storey

Marist Wins Another.

Marist added another game to their won column during the past week by completely smothering the Peacock team in their clash on the Ivy street cadets' court. The final score showed the Marist bunch on the long end of a 48 to 22 score.

The fast play exhibited by the Marist team indicated that the Peacock fellows had a very slim chance of winning, even though they found hard evidence of two of their best men—J. Bedell and Parmalee—they put up a game fight and made a most creditable showing considering the conditions.

Tech High got the jump on their opponents at the opening of the game, getting by for a while as if the game would be a runaway for the Marietta street school. However, Marist got their team-work to going after a while, and straightway proceeded to overhaul their opponents.

ATHLETIC LEAGUE BADGE WINNERS

The following are the badge winners of the Grammar School Athletic league:

FORMWALT PUPILS MAKE GOOD MARKS ON GRAMMAR EXAM.

The seventh A children have tried to study it out by themselves whether they want an all day school or not and have at last decided to let it be settled by a debate.

The seventh A is ahead at last in attendance. The fifth succeeded in capturing the silk banner.

We are busy making different kinds of borders and feel that if we keep up the rate we have started, in a few years the manufacturers will want us to design patterns for them.

It is very discouraging about the girls' basketball team. Losing every game so far, but we will finally come to the front, I know.

The children certainly were delighted when the few flakes of snow fell last Monday, as they thought that it did not have a full-fledged snowstorm.

We have finished our grammar examination and if Mrs. Sams omitted anything on it, sorry it.

The seventh B is very proud of the fact that out of forty pupils in their room, thirty-nine made a 90 in the written grammar examination and out of thirty-nine in the second division made A in theirs. But the credit is all given to George Freeman, of the seventh A, and Mary Wade, of the seventh A. Both were perfect during the quarter.

Mr. Landrum paid us a visit Monday and gave us a very helpful talk.

The fifth grade children are practicing basketball and hope to be champions soon.

We all sympathize deeply with Lorena Cody, of the seventh A, in the loss of her mother.

The third grade A pupils are improving in writing. The best writers are Dorothy Pearce, Frances Nelson, Carmel Quinn, Madeline Dickerson, Homer Powell and Morgan Hawkins.

The first grade are delighted in the making of word books and they are getting quite nice words in them.

Our boys are doing better in basketball; they succeeded in beating Fryer street yesterday, the score being 7 to 6.

The whole school sympathizes with Lowell Battle, of the third grade, who has recently undergone an operation for a speedy recovery.

MARY LEE WILHELM.

EAST ATLANTA.

School Busily Preparing for Out-Door Show.

We had a very nice program for the celebration of Robert E. Lee's birthday. The recitations and dialogues given by the children were much enjoyed by the hearers. With the program for Robert E. Lee our society met also. Erline Olsan and Grace Ledbetter tried for the girls' medal. Sanford McDaniel and Carl Cortez tried for the boys. Erline Olsan and Sanford McDaniel have the honor of winning them. The program was progressive. The children's parts in this were fine.

We notice that Hill is preparing for an out-door program in May. We say so, too. We began preparations for it last fall. We are going to try to represent every department of our school work, or have something in that department. Miss Graves is now giving polk dances that will "show off" beautifully for her department. The dramatization in all the grades will be another help. Probably the most spectacular event will be the geography department. But I shan't tell any more. Come in May and see it.

HALE AND HEARTY AT NINETY YEARS, HE IS INTERESTING

Dalton, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—John D. Nelson, who resides just two miles south of Dalton, on rural route No. 3, has passed his ninetieth birthday, is hale and hearty, possessed of all of his faculties, even his teeth being in a splendid state of preservation, and which he has comfortably hard food. He is the father of eighteen children, sixteen of whom are living, and is widely known in his adjoinate age, the other two having died after attaining mature ages, leaving families. He has numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren, which would be a credit to even Moses.

When Mr. Nelson becomes reminiscent he relates many interesting incidents of his long and useful life. His recall recalls the time when "the stars fell," November 12, 1833, and the "cold Saturday" in 1835, when a kettle of boiling water thrown into the air would fall to the ground frozen, and when the fowls were frozen to their perches.

This interesting nonagenarian was born near Spartanburg, S. C., of Irish parentage, his father living during the revolutionary period of this country. He came with his parents to northeast Georgia when he was quite young, and subsequently moved to the county now bearing his name, Nelson, Ga., where he accumulated a considerable property, including that now owned by a company operating an extensive marble quarry, which he sold in 1854.

For many years Mr. Nelson followed his profession as a blacksmith and a gunsmith, being regarded as an artist in the latter line, the rifle made by him was particularly prized, and it was with much pride that he referred to the many weapons made by himself with which he provided his family and would "knock a squirrel's ear off in the highest limb," which frequently made it possible for him to supply the table with hunt laden with game, the wild turkey being a favorite.

He would purchase the bars of steel with a small hole through the length of them, from Coleman, Lancaster, Pa., and from it would fashion the rifle which the aged man considers far superior to a Krag, Marlin or even Krupp's 42-centimeter guns of the present day. Of the product of his skill and labor for the sum of $20 to the early settlers, some of the finest nice work on some early pioneers of Alabama, and at another time quite a number to some Indians who resided in the vicinity of the old guns are yet to be found in some of the homes of this section.—The Nelson rifle was the favorite possession of some old hunters, and lasting evidence of the sterling honesty of the maker, which qualities are likewise in evidence, durability and reliability. When reminded of the similarity of his given names to those of a well-known American, he remarked that he would not exchange places with him.

He gallantly served the cause of the south during the "recent unpleasantness," which, he says, was enough for him, and that he longs for the time when swords will be converted into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks, and that no more guns will be made, not even a "Leman-Nelson rifle gun."

The Gunsmith of the Cohuttas" well remembers when the spots now occupied by Atlanta, Chattanooga and Dalton were unknown and unnamed, and when the Indians were their forest inhabitants only the Indians where skyscrapers now stand.

Mr. Nelson is an enthusiastic Mason, being possibly the oldest living member of that order in Georgia, and he is a consistent member of the Baptist church. He attributes his long life to a busy outdoor existence, and abstinence from irregular habits. He has been married twice, both of his wives being dead. He chews only a moderate amount of tobacco and insists upon a particular brand which he has long used, and a few plugs of which he always keeps "handy."

Society

Mrs. Dickey to Entertain.

Mrs. James L. Dickey will entertain at luncheon Saturday in her apartment at the Ponce de Leon in compliment to Mrs. Charles M. Scipio.

Pioneer Meeting.

Woman's Pioneer society will meet at 2 p. m. Wednesday, February 3, at Phillips & Crew company, 82 North Pryor street.

Mrs. Nellie Peters Black will give an interesting history of St. Philip's church from 1847 to 1915.

Election of officers, and all members please attend.

Fund for Chapter House.

A "bridge for building fund" sounds constructive. For three years the Joseph Habersham chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has had constructive plans for securing a home of its own.

It is doubtful whether there is another organization in the city that can show a record like that of this one when it comes to working for its definite aim. It is the personality, temperament and the mental and physical efficiency of the members that are the determining factors in making success possible.

Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, with a corps of faithful workers, will give a bridge party at Druid Hills Golf club on Friday afternoon, February 5. The cooperation of all the members of the chapter and their friends is urged, as success can only be effected by united effort.

Being so vitally interested and alert for new ideas, the members of this chapter will follow up this benefit party with another on February 13. This entertainment will be a Valentine indoor picnic at the home of Mrs. Peel.

The distinctive feature will be the luncheon, in attractive valentine boxes or baskets, furnished by the ladies and auctioned to the gentlemen. Mr. Albert Howell and Mr. Forrest Adair, whose names are synonymous of fun, will be the auctioneers.

Unique attractions in fortune telling, hypnotism, conjuring and dancing are being arranged.

Keep in mind the two dates: Bridge party, February 5; indoor picnic, February 13.

A Beautiful Portrait.

A beautiful oil portrait of little Douglas Paine, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, is proving a source of pleasure to those who know and admire her. The portrait is the work of the young artist, Thomas Porter Miller, of Paris, who is at present in the city with his mother, Mrs. Charles Miller, and the Misses Miller. Mr. Miller interpreted in the pretty elf-like face of the little girl all the purity, innocence and buoyancy of youth. There was but one sitting, and that scarcely an hour in length, but long enough for the artist to bring life into the face of the subject impressed on the canvas.

HOW YOU CAN OBTAIN A TRIP

The plan evolved by The Atlanta Constitution whereby you can take one of these wonderful trips as outlined is as simple in understanding as it is easy of execution. Although The Constitution has a large circulation, there are some who at present are not subscribers. They want the Daily and Sunday Constitution, but have put off ordering from day to day. The Constitution desires your assistance in locating and placing these people on its subscription list, and for this favor you are to be liberally rewarded.

Points will be given on each new subscription payment to The Atlanta Constitution according to the schedule given above and after you have obtained the required number of points a wonderful trip to the greatest of all expositions will be yours.

You may nominate yourself or a friend as a candidate for one of these trips. The names of all candidates nominated will be published in The Daily Constitution from time to time, giving their respective standing.

Each candidate on nomination will be credited with 100 points free, and will be provided with an authorized Constitution receipt book. These receipt books may be had by applying to the Circulation Department of The Constitution. Each candidate obtaining one of these free tours may take the trip to San Francisco any time during 1915 he or she may desire. The exposition opens on February 20, and closes December 4, 1915.

Special arrangements have been made with the McFarland Tourist Agency to furnish the various trips we are offering and the starting point of all of the successful candidates will be Atlanta. If you want to go to the exposition this is your opportunity. Send in your nomination at once and request The Constitution Receipt Book, full description of "Itinerary" and complete instructions. Y. W. C. A. Holds Annual Banquet at Hotel Ansley

The recent annual banquet of the Young Women's Christian association at the Ansley hotel developed in an interesting way the success of the enterprise during the past year.

The guests and members of the association were received by Mrs. W. S. Witham, president of the Y. W. C. A., and the board of directors.

Covers were laid in the banquet hall for 110. After a delightful five-course dinner, Mrs. Witham, toastmistress, introduced the speakers of the evening.

Reports of the various departments of the work were given, showing a most gratifying progress in the activities of the association since the last annual meeting. Miss Alice Logan Wright, general secretary, outlined the plan and scope of the work and called upon the following representatives from the several departments for reports: Boarding home, Mrs. Emily McDougald; gymnasium, Miss Era Betzner, physical director; Jean Witham club, Mrs. Amma McCarty; S. I. S. P. club, Miss Elsa Stahl; Clover club, Miss Mary Pool; extension work, Mrs. R. G. Matheson.

The boarding home committee reported that the two homes that were operated last year had been combined and that a new location had been secured for a permanent association residence on Baker street, corner of Williams, and that an establishment with accommodations for 100 young women is now being operated. A steam heating plant has been installed and every comfort that could be asked is furnished the young women at reasonable rates. Mrs. Cornelia Bacon Osborn and Mrs. Betty Nelson are in charge of this department of the work and its success is assured under such capable management.

160 in Gym Classes.

The gymnasium department reported 160 members in the different classes, including matrons, business women, leisure girls, high school students and children. A new term is opening in January and a large number of new members are being enrolled. Special rates are offered during this term to those who register at once. Rehearsals have already begun for the beautiful pageant, "The Will-o'-the-Wisp," to be given in the spring. Miss Betzner's work is so well known in Atlanta for its exquisite daintiness and artistic finish that a new production under her direction is looked forward to as a rare treat.

The Jean Witham club explained the purpose of its organization, which is the intellectual and social development of its members. The club has just finished a three months' course in the study of the short story as a distinct literary form, and is beginning a course in the modern drama, under the leadership of Miss Wingo. This club, with a membership of thirty-one, was organized by the young women at the association residence and named for Mrs. Witham, because of her interest and untiring efforts in making the residence a comfortable and attractive home for girls away from home.

The S. I. S. P. and Clover clubs are organizations of business young women meeting every Monday evening at the headquarters building. In the motto of the S. I. S. P. club is given the purpose of its existence, "For the Spiritual, Intellectual, Social and Physical Development of Young Women." At the weekly meetings a vesper service is held at 5:15, supper at 6:30, a literary program conducted alternately by Miss Converse and Miss Wingo, at 7:15, and the gymnasium lessons at 8 o'clock. Miss Converse is beginning now a most interesting course of addresses on "The Economic and Political Status of Women." Both clubs reported helpful work along the lines of assisting the unemployed and dispensing clothing and provisions to needy families at the holiday season. The S. I. S. P. has set aside a loan fund for women temporarily out of work.

The extension work of the association was reported by Mrs. K. G. Matheson: Bible classes conducted at the noon hour once a week have been established in five of the large industrial institutions where women and girls are employed. There is a total enrollment of 146 in the following classes: American hat factory, taught by Mrs. Dunbar Ogden; Robinson shirt factory, taught by Mrs. E. E. Engan; National pencil factory, taught by Mrs. H. H. Tucker; Marcus' Loeb overall factory, taught by Mrs. K. G. Matheson; Robinson overall factory, taught by Miss Cornelia Brown.

Speakers Praise Work.

After these reports, the following speakers were introduced by Mrs. Witham and gave words of inspiration and encouragement for the future of the Y. W. C. A., and praise for what has been done with such meager equipment.

Mr. Hugh M. Willet, one of the members of the advisory board, said that he felt confident as soon as business conditions returned to the normal the Y. W. C. A. might expect from the citizens of Atlanta that which it so richly deserves.

Judge Ernest Konts assured the ladies that "we are going to have our daughters what we have already done for our mothers."

Miss Sarah Converse spoke both wittily and wisely of the needs of our Y. W. C. A. work.

Mr. A. McD. Wilson and Prof. Joseph Dacy gave brief talks in praise of the fine things already accomplished.

In giving her report, the treasurer, Miss Genevieve Sanders, called attention to the fact that the contributions from the citizens of Atlanta to the work of the Young Women's Christian association have averaged during the past nine months covered by the report $12.11 per month. "If anyone says to you that the Y. W. C. A. is a burden to Atlanta," said Miss Saunders, "give them these figures."

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Kirkwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Worried Man writes: "Let me say that my condition puzzles and worries me. In the last year I seem to have been growing old rapidly, though am only 28. My food and sleep do not recuperate my strength and energy, and lately I have dizzy spells, trembling, headaches, loss of appetite, memory and hopelessness. Despondency and worry over my condition are ever present."

Answer: Cheer up, get well and then conserve your vitality by proper, temperate living. Obtain three grain cudonese tablets sealed tubes with full directions, use them and an agreeable, pleasing restoration should ensue to your entire satisfaction.

Mrs. L. C. B. asks: "Do you think it is possible to reduce my weight from 240 pounds to about 190 pounds?"

Answer: It is impossible to say just how much one can reduce until after trying, but 3-grain arbolene tablets should be used according to directions with each sealed tube, obtainable at most any drug store. If the flesh is unnatural you should easily reduce as desired.

Mrs. L. B. writes: "What can I do for a bad case of stomach, liver and bowel trouble? My food sours in stomach, I belch, have heart-burn, and a full, uncomfortable feeling after meals; constipated at times, with coated tongue and bad breath all the time."

Answer: Thousands of people in this country are afflicted as you are and to get immediate relief and gradually effect permanent results, I advise you to buy of your druggist a dollar package of "double-strength stomach and bowel medicine" and use as per directions on the packet.

J. B. O. asks: "I am thin, angular, weak and tired. What can I take to improve health, strengthen my nerves and increase my weight about 20 pounds?"

Answer: Take regularly with your meals three grain hypo-nuclane tablets, sold in sealed packages, by druggists, with complete directions. These tablets improve the blood, increase nutrition, and strengthen the nervous system if used regularly for several months.

Lee writes: "I have tried so many remedies for rheumatism that I am afraid to try any more, but as you can tell me a sure remedy I will try it."

Answer: Do not be disheartened because you have not been able to find something that would overcome your rheumatism, for you can be relieved if you will take what I tell you. Get from the drug store: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, ¼ oz.; comp. fluid ballmont, 1 oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz., and syrup sarsaparilla, 5 ozs. Mix and take a teaspoonful at mealtimes and again before going to bed.

C. L. asks: "I have tried to cure dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair and baldness with numerous tonics, etc., but in vain. What do you recommend?"

Answer: I have been recommending plain yellow mingol for the past seven years and scores of my patients are delighted with the quick, pleasant action of this remedy in stopping itching, falling hair, dandruff, etc. It gives the hair health, lustre and vigor as nothing else does. Obtain in 4-oz. jars with full directions.

H. M. B. writes: "Can you please prescribe medicine which will relieve me of such distressing symptoms of kidney and bladder, as the following: Pains in small of back, soreness in region of bladder, frequent calls at night but scanty flow with pain, burning and foul odor, puffing of limbs, etc."

Answer: Those seeking relief from kidney and bladder disorders should begin taking balmwort tablets, a very successful formula sold in sealed tubes with full directions.

Mrs. N. C. B. asks: "I suffer from headache and constipation periodically and my blood seems too thick, causing languor and tired feeling. I will thank you to prescribe for me."

Answer: Three grain sulpherb tablets and sulphurs are most effective in relieving constipation, thinning the blood, and removing the symptoms of languor, etc. I advise you to begin taking as per directions with each sealed package.

W. Z. C. writes: "I have such a very severe cough and cold and have not been able to get anything to help me. It is weakening my system."

Answer: Use the following and your cold and cough will vanish and you will soon be strong again. Get a 2½ oz. bottle of concentrated essence menthoxlaxene and take every hour or two. This can be taken pure or made into a full quart of horehound syrup. Full directions as to use will be found on bottle. This is a mild laxative and will drive the cold from the system.

B. G. O. asks: "Will you please prescribe a home treatment for a bad case of catarrh of the nose and throat. Also, my daughter is affected with Pelvic Catarrh or green sickness."

Answer: Your daughter should begin taking a tonic flesh-building treatment and for such a case I recommend three grain hypo-nuclane tablets. Local treatment is also necessary for both catarrh of the head and Pelvic Catarrh. A simple but effective antiseptic and curative treatment can be followed at home by buying either a two or eight-ounce package of antiseptic Vilane Powder containing complete directions.

FRENCH CHASSEURS-A-PIED IN THE FIRST LINE NEAR ARRAS.
COPYRIGHT BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

FLANDERS, December, 1914.—The present war has abolished all that which until now went to the resistance, to the retaliation, and the abdurance of men a kind of grandiose splendor—has thrust to one side the fine array of troops that one sees in the ancient battle pictures; the variegated lines, the groups of staff officers going to the height of a plateau, the movements of the armies, the galloping of the cavaliers clothed in brilliant costumes, the beating of the drums—all that which created the ardor, excitement and courtesy of the combat. Warfare was gallant because it was made between adversaries who were in view of each other. What would such men as Napoleon, Murat, Lasalle, Wellington and many others think about this clandestine war?

Formerly a campaign consisted of one or two great combats of half a day, sometimes a whole day; then a joyous entry into the towns conquered. Good fortune and intrigue held in these wars as much place as did the encounters of the enemy.

"It is as impossible to recount a battle," affirmed Wellington, "as to describe a ball."

But without wishing in the least to diminish the valor of the ancients, we must recognize that one of their battles would be merely a pleasure excursion for our soldiers of to-day. If Napoleon exacted from his "Grongards" (Grolliers) such discipline of iron, such impersonality, so contrary to the temperament of our race, and which the modern tactics force; if he had attempted what is indispensable at the present time—to transform their natural impetuosity into abnegation—the formidable grenadiers would have found the task too hard and would have said without dissimulation that it did not please them.

To-day a hole in the ground, ordained silence, immobility under the rain that falls and the shrapnel that descends, under the sounds of the cannon that roar; battles of forty days' length, without a single instant free from the deafening noise of the artillery, more or less near. On a front of four hundred miles in extension the soldiers of the Allies arrange things, and the French soldier accommodates himself with as much cheerfulness, gayety and good humor as our ancestors acquitted themselves in their light and rapid adventures of former times.

Let us judge of it.

The trenches are long narrow ditches, on the front border of which is arranged an embankment or parapet formed by the earth from the ditch. The trench for the firers (riflemen), seated or lying, has a depth of a little more than a yard and a parapet of at least half a yard. The trench "for kneeling" has a depth of nearly a yard. If there is the time to make a trench for "stander" it must be a yard and a half deep. That is not all. If one can, one covers the trench with a slight shelter: doors, planks and pieces of wood cover the ground, providing that one has time to place them.

These rudimentary shelters afford a means of protection, the importance of which one does not at first imagine. In fact, the shooter, seated more or less comfortably at the bottom of his trench, laughs at the rifle shots that brush the ground in their strident flight; above his head. But he must take care not to show his head higher than the shelter; not even an arm must be seen. As for the shell, it makes much noise, but does very little damage to the soldier in his trench. A shell of forty kilos (88 pounds) produces a tunnel shaped hole of six yards at the point where it falls, but only a lucky stroke can reach a trench. The combatant who is not exactly at the point where it burst runs no other danger than that of being covered with earth or mud.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the most difficult "trump card" is for the artillery to reach this thin outline scarcely visible on the ground. The soldiers go so far as to even paint the shelters the color of the earth around, and, when time affords, to make some false trenches that constitute an excellent ruse of war. The organization of the battle field comprises also an ensemble of defence. Trees cut down and piled up and stockades are excellent use if the surrounding land is woody, where trees can be procured, and when they are lacking tangled barbed wire constitutes an accessory defence. The effect of the artillery is null on this enclosure of network; it cannot be passed through except by the menelite or the shears. Also we have inaugurated the war of strongholds in the open country. Everybody invisible or nearly so, the least movement possible. It is observed. Word of order. To hold the front that one occupies. It is manifestly the same on each side. The service is also regulated: three days in the trenches of the first line, three days in the reserve trenches, three days of repose.

Trenches! We have made them over a distance of hundreds of kilometres (a kilometre is a fraction more than three-fifths of a mile), and our lines from the front resemble molehills that are cut out in galleries. One can live there, and some men remain for two or three months in these moist ditches. The courage necessary to resist day and night the inclemency and the assaults continues. One sleeps little, one eats badly. How can such a life be described with enough power to make comprehensible the incalculable grandeur of its meaning?

Night, cold. Toward the morning a thick white frost falls on us. The sun rises. British, French and German begin their daily routine. From behind a crest a German captive balloon slowly rises. Opposite it a French balloon appears little by little. There! All is in place; the scenery changes not until the evening. But to pass days and weeks adorning these holes in the earth becomes monotonous. We busy ourselves in organizing to render the trenches more comfortable; each day brings an improvement. There have been some attempts to heat them. A brick and a foot warmer are tried by turns, for one must not dream of having anything with smoke, for that would be a sign for the enemy.

These modern trenches advance irregularly, in zig-zag fashion. They are carrefours (where two or more trenches cross), some placed (squares), impasses (blind alleys). This makes altogether an improvised town. In order that the soldier may refind his trench they have baptized each one. There is the "rue Poincaré," "King street," "rue de Russie," "rue de Bruxelles," "Place de la Liberté." Next, each "refuge" receives a name graven on a brick. There is the "Palace Hotel," "Savoy Hotel," "Royal Hotel," &c., with the name of the proprietor. At the edge of the wood opening on the enemy's lines is an enticing notice—Entrance to the Cinematograph.

BATH ROOM IN THE FRENCH TRENCHES
COPYRIGHT BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

Taking the left of the "Passage Albert I.," we arrive at the bathing establishment, ——— Regiment, Third Company. "Salle de douches," says a label. Some dressing gowns and some towels hang on bayonets fixed in the partitions of earth; these also serve as hat and coat rails. The water falls from a hose. It was the captain who had this idea. A shell had hollowed out a large hole at this place. A large flagstone was placed at the bottom and a roof put on the top. It is a reservoir fed by rain water. A tap is put at the end of a hose to conduct the water; this hangs above a tub, and in turn one takes a glacial douche. With vigorous rubbing a healthy reaction is quickly produced. It must not be thought that this is either luxury or amusement; this instalment is very precious to all the regiment. And the regiment is clean. This cannot be said of those opposite, for our prisoners captured are in sad plight.

Certain trenches are only thirty-five yards from the enemy, and from each burrow talking can be heard. French and Germans look each other in the eyes, without hatred, but there remains the inevitable necessity of killing each other piously. And the war takes a new character. What a pity that there are not archers in the armies! An arrow had virtue in its parabola, penetrating more profoundly in the trenches, closer than a rifle shot can be sent. Soon we will come up with each other, knife between the teeth. Yet one does not feel the sentiment of a great combat—the struggle is too personal, too isolated.

Yes, we who have kept the enemy at bay for several weeks have the impression of doing nothing. We are reduced to writing the "Journal of the Trenches." There one reads the pleasantry of the war. "Yesterday evening Messrs. the Germans offered us an exhibition of fireworks from nine to ten o'clock," or "Two foreign nobles wearing officers' caps paid a visit to the west trench; they were received with a volley and honors due to their rank." Our men provide beet roots for the artists of the trenches. The latter carve a caricature of the head of a German, generally a commandant in chief of one of their army corps. Recently I sent you some sketches of them. Some of the beets are hollowed out and filled with bulletins of French and Russian victories and are projected toward the lines of the Germans. Or they are sent over with madrigals together with hand grenades. One went "How many are you in there?"

For a distraction shots are exchanged. At so short a distance they cause frightful wounds. This evening an officer who knows all the finesse of the German language made a proclamation to the neighbors. "Soldiers of Germany, I owe it to the truth to inform you of some sad news. Your officers know it but they have hidden it from you"—and then the entire official communique was read to them. He terminated by wishing them "Good evening" and promising them "more" the following day. At this moment a fusillade broke out. "There, that is how we are thanked," laughingly exclaimed the French officer.

One night in certain German trenches was received the order to manifest an overflowing gayety. One evening we heard them yelling the "Wacht am Rhein," accompanied by the growling accents of an accordion. The French began at once to sing "Allons enfants de la Patrie," punctuated by a fusillade that closed the fête.

We are so close to one another that the cannon of neither side can fire on us for fear of striking their own. The proximity of the adverse trenches is such that it is dangerous to remain in observation. Some have placed a mirror above and behind, so that by its help what passes in front can be seen while remaining in the trench.

In each hole there is an inventor who triumphant relief opposite—they had killed all or put them to flight. Then furiously broke forth our fusillade, instantly followed by a rush with bayonets, and in ten minutes the German trench was ours.

Another night, profiting by the fog, to get a knowledge of what was in front, our men found at a little distance a trench where were the tools and weapons of its occupants. They possessed themselves of the weapons of the Germans, filled up the trench and returned with a smile on their lips, quite gay at the joke they had played on the Germans.

Between the enemy's trenches and ours rose a birch tree. The Germans coveted this birch. One of them during two nights went to this tree and, despite our fusillading, patiently tried to cut it down. At length the birch was on the ground. The man wanted to drag away his booty as far as his entrenchment; this time a ball struck him. Two of his comrades boldly tried to replace him; they arrived at the tree and dragged it some yards. They were killed. There came still two others, and after these two more. This fighting for a birch tree lasted several hours. The tree was at length taken away. It had cost the Germans twenty-three men.

There are some trenches that have even a cattle pen, where grass several cows. Lately was celebrated the birth of a calf, and each day at dawn and twilight some men leave their hole to milk the cows. "Never should I have believed that there were such good milkmaids in all Flanders," said a soldier to me, admiringly. And then I asked why it was that the Germans did not fire on the cows. He replied, scandalized—"Fire on our cows! They had better not. In the first place, it would not be long before we repaid them. They have their cows, too, and we let them alone." Thus politeness is rendered in the midst of slaying.

Our soldiers and the Bavarian soldiers procure water from the same well situated in the neighborhood. At first they went separately, but by degrees they accustomed themselves to go at the same time, exchanging a few words, giving packets of tobacco or other objects in exchange for those of a different color or nature. Sometimes they even take their coffee in common. However, the hostilities continue. For instance, the Germans are set upon destroying a work of defence every evening that we have patiently labored at all day, according to orders given. On our side we no less systematically pull down a redoubt that the Germans were untiringly reconstructing.

One day, at an hour when by tacit accord the troops made a truce, two German officers came out from their trenches without weapons and their hands raised. They advanced toward our trenches, from where we in our turn came out. The officers explained that it was absurd to demolish every day the two pieces of work that both sides had been given orders to construct. He offered to abstain from touching ours if we on our part would leave theirs alone.

The agreement was concluded, some newspapers were exchanged, then at the moment of leaving us one of them announced that their period of sojourn at the front was drawing to an end, that he did not know what troops would replace them, but perhaps they would be Prussians. "Be on your guard with them," he said. "When we know we will notify you by hanging some pieces of blue paper from the wires that defend our trenches." So it goes without saying that the Bavarians, at least, do not love the Prussians.

"The Man From Home."

(At the Atlanta.)

Opening Monday night, "The Man From Home" will be the offering at the Atlanta theater this week. On Tuesday and Thursday 25 cents matinees will be played, while on Monday night all ladies accompanied by gentlemen with paid seats will be admitted free. This latter has been a custom with Walter S. Baldwin, manager of the Baldwin-Melville company, for many years, and is being repeated at the Atlanta to permit all to become acquainted with the excellent company playing here.

"The Man From Home" is one of the best plays ever produced. It will be given this week in a manner which leaves nothing undone. Mr. Baldwin is personally supervising the production, and has built scenery and essentials which make the offering noteworthy. The play has never been seen here at popular prices, and should attract much attention, for it was most highly praised when played here originally two years ago.

The Baldwin-Melville players have made a big hit with their first play, and it seems a certainty that they will win a place in the hearts of Atlantans which will mean their permanent stay in the city. Critics and the public alike have pronounced the company the most excellent ever in Atlanta, and the standard which they set the opening week is being highly commended. It will be maintained at all times, for Mr. Baldwin is giving his personal attention to the plays, and this means perfection in all the little details which some stock managers slur.

"The Man From Home" tells a story which has an appeal to every American. It is by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, and is decidedly full of humor and pathos. It deals with the experiences of a rich American girl and her brother from Kokomo, Ind., while sojourning in Italy. They meet some unscrupulous persons, who claim to be of the inner circle in European society and seek to marry one of their number to the rich American girl. They insist upon a dot of $750,000. The girl's guardian visits Italy from Kokomo to investigate the proposed marriage. He soon sees the trickery being planned, and in breaking up the affair some complications of the most amusing sort arise. His plain American manners and his keen sense of humor finally wins the day, and all ends well after the intrigues have been proven.

In casting the play Mr. Baldwin has assigned William H. Sullivan the leading role of Daniel Voorhees Pike, the American from Kokomo, while Miss Lola May plays the American girl, Miss Marguerite Skirvin has the role of an adventuress, and other members of the company are given excellent parts as best befits them. Altogether, performances well worth while are assured.

"Stop Thief" will follow.

"Lady Windermere's Fan."

(At the Atlanta.)

Great interest is being manifested in the forthcoming engagement of Margaret Anglin in her special revival production of Oscar Wilde's comedy-drama, "Lady Windermere's Fan," at the Atlanta theater February 11 and 12. Miss Anglin is one of America's foremost actresses. She has demonstrated her remarkable talents in the comedies of Shakespeare as well as in the great tragedies of the Greek masters, but it is as an emotional actress that she is best appreciated. In Miss Anglin the theatrical art finds its highest expression in the most remote extremes. Her success in the exacting role of Mrs. Erlynne in "Lady Windermere's Fann" was so remarkable last season—where the play ran for upwards of five months—that she resolved to employ it as her exclusive vehicle this season, and it will be presented here with the same detail of production and complete equipment that merited unqualified praise in New York. She will be supported by a company of exceptional merit, many of whom were identified with the New York run of the play.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

Lasky's "The Beauties" will head the bill of features that will be the show at the Forsyth the week starting with matinee on Monday and continuing all the week, with regular schedule of performances. A wonderful, miniature musical comedy has been turned out by Mr. Lasky in his production of "The Beauties." Some of the critics say it is by far the best work of the famous maker of "The Trained Nurses" and "The Red Heads." There are fourteen people in the company, mostly girls. There will be half a dozen musical numbers that will become popular, because of the catchy, tuneful style that will be introduced and a number of pretty girls who will impersonate the beauties of all nations will surely contribute to the drawing power of the act. "The Beauties" started from New York last summer for a tour of the circuits. Commencing away up in northern Canada, every city in the west was visited and in the Orpheum circuit "The Beauties" succeeded in helping to build up new attendance records. Mortimer H. Weldon and W. J. McCarthy are featured in the act. The music is by Robert Hood Bowers and the story was written by William LeBaron. In all the Lasky act will be one of the features of the present season.

An added attraction will be the appearance of Florenze Tempest, the splendid character comedienne, with her pianist and her dancing partner. Miss Tempest is unquestionably the star of all the artists in the profession in her line of entertainment. She possesses the gifts and the qualities that make her a star. She was popular often she appeared with her sister in the novelty "Tempest and Sunshine;" and since she has been going alone she has won more friends in every city she has formerly visited. Miss Tempest will be one of the drawing cards of the week.

Britt Wood, started his career as a "big time" feature at the Forsyth three years ago. And since that time he has been successful in every principal vaudeville theater in the land. He has wonderfully improved and the act thus scored such a great hit here, and with new stories, an eccentric dance and his mouth-harp he is going to be one of the hits of a splendid bill.

The Lambert-Ball comedy company with Eddie Allen in "Heaps of Hilarity" will be a comedy feature on the bill. This act is declared to be one of the big laugh-winning ideas in vaudeville and has never failed in any theater to register along with the hit of any bill.

A novelty feature will be the appearance of the famous quick-change musicians, the Exposition Four, a quartet of instrumentalists in vaudeville. Each man is a skilled musician and they add to the quality of their act with remarkable change of costume. Wills and Hasson, the famous gymnasts, will present an act that will command attention and the Pathe comedy and news pictures will be decidedly entertaining.

Bessie Wynn, the musical comedy star so popular with Atlanta theatergoers, has been signed to headline the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth the week of February 8. Miss Wynn is to be seen in a repertoire of musical comedy numbers, and her engagement here will be a great treat to her many admirers.

FLORENCE TEMPEST, AT THE FORSYTH.

Miss Tempest is now traveling this season with a wardrobe of American-made gowns, and she says that there is nothing in Europe any better. Her songs are all new and exclusive and she is looking forward to her engagement here with a great deal of pleasure.

RED ROSE PETALS NOW USED AS TIPS FOR CIGARETTES

Some day when you rush to your florist and order a bunch of American Beauty roses, you'll be astonished to learn that he is unable to supply you with the usual red roses that make such an impression on the susceptible young maiden. The supply of red roses, so far as Atlanta is concerned, has been cornered.

You would never guess the reason in the world, so leave further thought and mental worry, we'll tell you:

The red roses are being used to make tips for cigarettes! There is a surprise, isn't it? But it is quite true just the same. And here is the wherefore of the why: Some bright individual connected with the firm of Thermelis Brothers company, the cigarette makers, conceived the idea of using real rose petals as a cigarette tip.

The demand already exceeds the supply, and not only the florists of Atlanta, but private gardens have been called upon to furnish red roses so that the petals may be converted into dainty tips for cigarettes. Do the men like them? Answer, "They do!" And still people ridicule the fads and fancies of the feminine.

MISS GRAY IS NAMED FOR ADAIRSVILLE POST

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, January 30.—(Special.)—President Wilson sent to the senate today the name of Miss Josephine M. Gray to be postmistress at Adairsville. Miss Gray is a sister of James R. Gray, editor of The Atlanta Journal. She had the support of both senators.

Among the other nominations sent in were those of Frank L. Asbury to be postmaster at Clarkesville. Mr. Asbury was recommended by Representative Thomas M. Bell.

Julian W. Frederick was nominated as postmaster at Marshallville. He held this position by appointment of President Cleveland and was the successful candidate in a letter primary conducted by Representative Charles R. Crisp.

Big Mill at LaGrange.

LaGrange, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Funding for the new half-million-dollar mill which is to be built in LaGrange this year, is progressing rapidly. When the work is complete the material will be placed on the grounds and work on the large manufacturing enterprise will begin. This will make LaGrange's eighth large cotton mill—the seven that are now in operation are all running full time.

The building of this new mill will mean jobs for more men than can be supplied by Troup county. Such a thing as scarcity of work is not known around this city, and the so-called hard-time tale has been long since laid aside.

AMERICUS BOOSTS LITTLEJOHN FOR FEDERAL BENCH

Americus, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—The candidacy of Judge Zera A. Littlejohn, of the southwestern judicial circuit for appointment to the federal judgeship shortly to be created, was given impetus in an enthusiastic meeting of the Americus Bar association this afternoon, that body having previously indorsed Judge Littlejohn already.

An energetic campaign in his interests will be waged and unsolicited indorsements are being received from all parts of the district, as well as from attorneys and influential friends generally throughout southern and southeastern Georgia. Judge Littlejohn has been on the Southwestern circuit for twenty years and is one of Georgia's ablest jurists.

HEADACHE, COLD OR SOUR STOMACH, REGULATE YOUR BOWELS—10 CENTS

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. One taken tonight straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

GASPARILLA TAKES TAMPA ON FEB. 12

Florida City to Be Captured by Pirate--Five-Day Carnival Will Follow, to Which All Are Invited.

St. Louis has its "Veiled Prophet's Carnival," New Orleans its "Mardi Gras," Tampa its "Gasparilla Carnival," and, take it from one who has seen them all, the greatest of all these is the "Gasparilla Carnival," for it rivals all the other great carnivals in splendor and picturesqueness and lasts several days longer.

Beginning February 12, this year, the carnival extends over into the next week, ending on February 16, and during this period the gaily decorated city, with its fine water front, will be the mecca of thousands from all parts of the country, who will come to witness and participate in the festal occasion.

Gasparilla, you know, was a pirate bold. Back in the days when the Spaniards were looting the treasure houses of the Incas and Montezuma of gold and transporting it across the sea to enrich their kings, Gasparilla, Captain Kidd, Morgan and other pirates infested the Caribbean sea, the Gulf of Mexico and the middle Atlantic region. With their bold crews of buccaneers they captured these treasure ships, and then to escape capture sought haven in the bights and inlets of the gulf.

Gasparilla Lived Tampa Vicinity.

Gasparilla's favorite hiding place was in the vicinity of Tampa, and numerous have been the treasure hunters who have dug at places along the coast in a vain effort to find some of the gold he hid away.

The "Gasparilla carnival" is based on this history. At the opening of the carnival Gasparilla and his bold crew sail up the bay, and in mimic fray capture the city. This alone is a spectacle worth going a long distance to see, but once the city is Gasparilla's he inaugurates a celebration to celebrate his victory: the city is turned over to his crew and their friends (which means the visitors) and they are bidden to go forth and "have a good time."

In "having a good time" the good people of Tampa assist the visitor in every way possible. The city is literally just as much as it would be if the real Gasparilla had taken it, with the added attraction of the splendid and gorgeous entertainments that have been in preparation for many months.

Many Pleasures Scheduled.

Conspicuous among these are the parade of welcome to Gasparilla and his crew, the coronation of Gasparilla and his queen, costumed street dances, water carnival, industrial parade, masked balls, fireworks and many other things too numerous to mention.

Over Tampa's treat, and they invite the world-tired European tourists, the citizens of the frozen north, and the good people of the south to gather in this flourishing city, where the balmy gulf breezes gently stir the palms and participate in this festival of joy and good cheer.

All the public features of this grand event are open and free to all. It comprises five days of unrestrained merrymaking in the clean but fantastic kind so benefitting the delightful climate of southern Florida, and is guaranteed by those who have attended that before to bring the flush of youth to the cheeks of the jaded business man and pleasure-worn society queen.

Story of Atlanta Steel Pig Shows Profit in Hog Raising

Just at this time when the question of hog raising in Georgia is of such great importance to the people in this section, the following story of a pig is very apropos:

Out at the Atlanta Steel works the employees have their own restaurant and cook, the expenses being paid by each employee "chipping in." Thomas K. Glenn, the president of the company, discovered one day a few years ago that the waste from the kitchen was thrown away. He suggested that it be utilized for the fattening of a pig. Accordingly a pig was bought, fattened and sold. The experiment was repeated and pig after pig was bought, fattened without any cost, and either killed and eaten or sold.

To give an example of how the small industry paid, the last case of a pig can be stated. When a pig was bought it cost $6. It was named Tommie (this by way of digression, for each pig is named for some one connected with the works) after the president, whose first name was Thomas. The pig was fed daily on the kitchen refuse, which otherwise would have been thrown away, and in a year it weighed 325 pounds. When bought it weighed only 75 pounds. The price paid was 8 cents a pound. It was sold for 7 cents a pound, and even then a wonderful profit was made, for the original cost was $6, while it brought $23.60, a clear profit of $15.60 in twelve months.

On one occasion two pigs were bought, and the big fellow kept the little fellow away from the slops. The big fellow fattened more rapidly, and was sold first. The small pig fattened after his companion had been disposed of, and he, in his turn, was sold for a handsome profit.

There is always a pig in the pen at the Atlanta Steel works, fattening on the kitchen waste, on which money is to be made.

Help Your Stomach

Instant Relief from Gas Indigestion and Pains Quickly Comes from the Use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

FREE SAMPLE PACKAGE TO ALL.

Feeling in the stomach is not natural. When you know you have a stomach it is time to help it. Sour fermentation, foul breath, etc., indicate this. Accept the warning and act at once.

There is no occasion to suffer from indigestion or any similar stomach trouble when you can so easily get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

There is scarcely a well stocked drug or general store in the United States but what considers these tablets part of their staple stock.

Do not suffer in silence. Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and do so quickly so that you may become your own self as soon as possible.

The reasons why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are such a widely used remedy are very easy to understand. These tablets contain almost the same elements as the gastric juices of the stomach. And when your stomach is sour and not working just right, it does not give out enough of the natural digestive juices to properly take care of the food you eat. So if you will only give the stomach a little help by taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after meals you will relieve the stomach of its chief duty and allow it time to rest it needs to recuperate. One grain of the active principle in a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet digests 3,000 grains of food, whether you place it in a glass jar with cooked food or in your stomach after you have eaten the food.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and once you try them you will never again wonder what to do for a disordered, weak, sour and gassy stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

Send coupon below for booklet and we will at once send you by mail, a sample free.

Own store building, built last year costing $4,500. Store building 50x80. Lighted with gas system, the very best. Nicest store in south Georgia, stock new, will invoice $10,000. I buy for cash and sell for cash. It is useless for me to say that I have the best business in this section. Also $500 bank stock, $2,000 warehouse stock, making total of about $16,000. There are two smaller stores here. We handle about 3,000 bales of cotton per year, and receipts increasing each year. One bank, new $10,000 school building, two churches, flowing artesian water. Terminus of railroad. Several sawmills. No better farming section in the world. My only reason for selling or exchanging is I can't live in south Georgia on account of catarrh that I have had for years. Business will bear the closest and most rigid investigation. I do not expect to be as satisfactorily located anywhere else, and must have a fair exchange. I prefer mercantile business first, next to that hotel in middle Georgia town. I am ready to figure on anything that has merit.

$1,600 Beautifully equipped and very best located and practically only ELECTRIC THEATER, in one of north Georgia's best and wealthiest towns of 3,000 to 3,500 population. Will be open in the next few days. Present owners of this sell supplies and furnish best film service and do not open places to operate themselves. A real opportunity in this line.

REMEMBER the few opportunities you see offered above are not a drop in the bucket of what we have. If there is anything good being offered for sale we have it. If we can't suit you there is no use for you to try to get suited. GIVE US AN OPPORTUNITY.

500 MEN GO BACK TO WORK IN MARIETTA

Marietta Chair Co. and Brumby Chair Co. to Put Full Force to Work Monday.

The cheering news comes from Marietta that beginning next Monday the full force of the Marietta Chair company's plant will be in operation again.

It is also stated that the Brumby Chair company, of Marietta, will put back all its operatives on Monday, opening up the plant which has practically been idle since December 18.

With these two big industries in our neighboring city it means that about 500 men will go back to their bench.

The Marietta Chair company closed down for the holidays on December 16, and since that time has had practically none of its workmen employed. It works about 20 men, and it goes without saying that these employees have received the news of the revival of business with much pleasure.

The Brumby Chair company, it is understood, employs about 300 men, and when all these employees get busy again it will help to boost the tide of prosperity now apparently well on the way.

FULTON COUNCIL, 505, MEETS NEXT SATURDAY

The next regular meeting of Fulton Council No. 505, U. C. T., will be held on Saturday evening, February 6, at its hall in the Kiser building. Senior Councillor W. W. Moore states that there will be much business of importance to come before the body, and requests a full attendance.

FIRING LINE NOTES

C. A. Smith and G. P. Irby, with a nice batch of orders, blew into A. M. Robinson company's Saturday morning. They both declare conditions are gradually and steadily improving.

Mrs. Laura Grant Dickinson has accepted a permanent position with the office force of John Silvey & Co. She also fills the duty as stenographer to E. K. Rambo.

Sam Haines, not content with sending in to the Ragan-Malone company a nice batch of orders from his energia railroad territory during the week, came in Saturday with another nice bunch of sales. He says things are picking up in his territory.

Max Samuels, traveler for the Hirshberg company, who has been out of his Tennessee territory for several days on account of a badly mashed finger, will get back on the job Monday morning.

Herman Teitlebaum, who recently took the road for the Hirshberg company, traveling North Carolina territory, is acquitting himself like a veteran. He is now working in the territory of Wilmington, and is sending in some nice orders to the house.

F. R. Lubbock, sales manager, and H. S. Brittain, cashier, spent the past week in Albany with the John Lester dealer, S. W. Anderson. They report conditions as improving since the better weather has begun to prevail.

Warren Perfect Sewell, who looks after northeast Georgia for the A. M. Robinson company, passed through the city Saturday morning on his way to spend Sunday at his home in Woodstock, Ga.

The friends of Sydney Johnson, who looks after the second floor in the house of John Silvey & Co., will be glad to know that he is gradually improving from a severe attack of rheumatism that has kept him laid up for several weeks. He hopes to be out again in a couple of weeks.

W. W. Scott reported in at the Ragan-Malone company's Saturday. He has been on a several week's trip in his south Georgia territory, and has corralled a nice bunch of business. He will get out again Monday.

The John Deere Plow company is receiving many inquiries concerning soil culture and other matters regarding modern farm methods since the lecture here recently of Dr. W. E. Taylor, the company's soil expert. Dr. Taylor has delivered many lectures along this line in the south, and has awakened much interest among agricultural men, who are seeking further information from the Deere company.

W. G. Coleman, a former Georgian, but who has been engaged in the produce business in Asheville, N. C., for some time, has removed to Atlanta, where he is opening a retail grocery at 93-95 East Tenth street. Bill Quarles, of Fain & Stamps, was busy Saturday getting up the opening ords for Mr. Coleman, who will conduct an up-to-date store of fancy and staple groceries.

C. W. McClure, who has been spending ten days in eastern markets, is expected to return to the city Monday or Tuesday.

C. W. Kremer, Jr., representing the George Wood Sons & Co. of Philadelphia, was a caller at John Silvey & Co's last Thursday.

"This pretty, bright sunshine is the best piece of news I know," said J. K. Orr Saturday. "Business is looking up, and the weather is going to have much to do with keeping it going. We are getting fine reports and more orders from our men, and if the roads will get so that the farmer can bring his cotton to town we expect to have a fairly good selling price—I expect to see quite a revival in business soon."

E. P. Stone, central Georgia and southern Alabama traveler for Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, has been sending in some splendid orders for the past week.

J. Oscar Castleberry was among the "live" at Douglass-Little-Redwine's Saturday. He was the most cheerful man among the boys who were in for the week-end. He not only had put in a successful week, but he was looking forward to the good time he was anticipating Sunday when he was to entertain his two old friends, F. W. Seary and Sid Wilkins, at a dinner at the Ansley hotel. Johnny has grown to be recognized as a prince of entertainers, and he never lets an opportunity pass to give his friends a good time.

J. L. Williams, Florida man for Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, reported in Saturday. He had a good business. He will get out again Monday.

Mack Hirshberg is giving a good account of himself in "the land of flowers," having sent in to the Hirshberg company the past week a fine list of orders.

S. G. Jones, north Georgia man for Ragan-Malone company, was in the house Saturday. He will start Monday on an extended trip through his territory.

T. N. Clyatt, who has been a city man for Fain & Stamps for ten years, and is popular with the trade, has joined the forces of Libby, McNeil & Libby, and will look after the trade for the big canning company in the future. His successor has not been named yet at Fain & Stamps.

The A. M. Robinson company continue to hear good reports from Percy Harris, its South Carolina man, and from M. L. Crawford, southwest Georgia traveler. Both these firing liners start in nice orders last week.

R. U. Ivey, who looks after the road interests of the Grand Lake company, returned to the city Saturday after a successful five weeks' trip through South Carolina and middle Georgia.

Morris Croft, who looks after the trade along the Western and Atlantic railroad for Ragan-Malone company, was in the house the past week. He brought along one of his good Alabama customers, and sold a fine house bill while here.

"We have recently added an additional floor space of something like 10,000 square feet," said T. J. Monroe, of the Grand Lake company, "and are filling it up with stock so as to better serve our trade. The Grand Lake company is the new wholesale paper concern recently established here. It occupies headquarters in the L. & N. Terminal building, and the additional space recently secured is the second floor over the wholesale house of Fain & Stamps.

"Our men are all out and busy," said Sam Manaker, E. M. Sapplin, and the S. P. Richards company. "We have been getting a large number of orders from them. Of course the orders are perhaps not as large as usual, but we are getting more of them. Mr. M. M. Bennett sent in one order the other day of twelve pages; our Mr. Huff sent in one of five pages, and our orders have been exceedingly good. So we have no complaint to make."

S. A. Johnson, who travels the W. & A. and the Southern to Birmingham, for John Silvey & Co., was in for the week-end. He reports a very good week of business, and says that with fair weather for awhile conditions would greatly improve.

Ben Edwards ran in to the house Friday, but got out again Saturday. W. T. Duncan and Cliff Edwards were the only other "fins" for the week at Fain & Stamps.

J. M. McKibben, L. A. Barron, F. W. Seay and S. A. Wilkins were among those reporting in at Dougherty-Little-Redwine's Saturday. All report a good week's business.

Arthur Whitmeyer reported in at Ragan-Malone company's headquarters Saturday. It was the first time he has gotten in since the holidays. He reports conditions as very fair in the Palmetto State, which territory he covers.

J. P. Morgan, in charge of the pants and overall department for the A. M. Robinson company, has been suffering a great pain from a bone felon. He was able to be out during last week for the first time in some while.

Fred E. Thomas, secretary of Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, has just returned to the city from an extended trip of several weeks through Georgia, Alabama and Florida. He placed a good opening order in Florida. He reports his sales as very good in every section he visited. "I found the stocks of merchants very low," said Mr. Thomas. "They have bought practically no spring goods, and are doing business on what they have had on hand. They are soon going to need goods in every line—and need them bad—and the fellow that's got the goods, and is close at hand, is the fellow that is going to get the orders. I believe the lesson of the past few months is going to be eventually a great help to the southern jobber and wholesaler."

J. L. White, who handles the adjusting for the A. M. Robinson company, was in the city Thursday. He had just returned from a long trip through several state. He left again Friday night, and will be gone for some time.

G. B. Snow, who looks after the road interests of the D. D. Felton Brush company, is spending some time just now in Jacksonville. When he finishes there he will visit other points in Florida, and will then take in Alabama and Louisiana.

R. V. Haslett, of the Liquid Carbonic company, accompanied by E. M. Kopp, special representative of the Chicago factory, is visiting Macon, Savannah, Augusta and other southern cities.

H. M. Smith, superintendent of the Chicago factory of the Liquid Carbonic company, visited Montgomery after the meeting of the coca-cola bottlers here last week, and with L. R. Grimes, salesman for the Atlanta branch, closed a contract for one of the Monarch low pressure filling machines.

George Freiberg, of the Chicago office of the Liquid Carbonic company, visited Pensacola, Fla., before returning to Chicago, and there installed one of the machines of the Liquid company, which was on exhibition here at the meeting previously been sold to the Hygeia Bottle works, of Pensacola, of which J. A. Crosby is the manager.

Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company reports that as a splendid indication of an improvement in the times it has opened up a number of new accounts within the past few weeks.

F. S. Davis and J. J. Jones, South Carolina representatives of the Atlanta branch of the Liquid Carbonic company, met Messrs. Kane and Haslett in Augusta the past week in order to get information concerning the new filling machine of the company.

J. B. Fitch, manager of the D. D. Felton Brush company, is quite a busy man these days. He is running his force full time, and reports that business is on the increase, with new customers being added every day.

R. D. Latta, North Carolina salesman for the Liquid Carbonic company, returned to his territory after the hotelers' convention, and has been sending in some nice orders for carbonators the past week.

The annual spring meeting of branch house managers for B. F. Avery & Sons will be held about April 1 at the head office in Louisville. Julius Fleishman, of the Atlanta branch, will attend.

W. F. Berman, north Alabama salesman for the Liquid Carbonic company, is being heard from with gratifying regularity these days. He is sending in a nice stream of orders, particularly for supplies, and says that he has more prospects for good business than in a long while. He believes that by the middle of February business will be normal.

One of the visitors to B. F. Avery & Sons last week was H. H. Bean, secretary of the Thomas Manufacturing company, at Springfield, Ohio. The Thomas company are makers of grain drills and hay machinery, which line is handled by the Avery house. Mr. Bean will visit all the Avery branches in the south before his return to Springfield.

C. F. Day is the new city man installed by the D. D. Felton Brush company. Since he has started the rounds for brush trade he has brought increased business to the house.

A. C. Parsons is making a special trip to North Carolina in the interest of the Liquid Carbonic company. He says he has a fine outlook for business and expects to send some good orders before he returns.

T. B. Lewis, of the Capital City Tobacco company, got back to his old stamping ground last week and tore up the earth down the Georgia railroad. It had been eighteen months since Mr. Lewis worked that territory, but he evidently found many old friends down that way—at least he found the customers—and he always counts them his friends.

D. D. Batcheller, Florida man for the Liquid Carbonic company, reported that he was too busy to attend the bottlers' convention. He has recently installed a bottling plant at Ocala, and is sending in some nice orders for other goods.

W. T. Stapler, firing liner for B. F. Avery & Sons, is spending the week-end at Florence, S. C.

B. F. Lownsbery and S. R. Conyers, representing the Rock Hill Buggy company, were visitors in the city the past week. While here they worked the city trade with J. M. Cochran, secretary of the W. J. Dabney implement company.

D. A. Castleberry, one of the most popular travelers in this territory, who has represented the Cook Brewing company for several years, has left that company and the boys are missing him from his regular rounds. So far, he has made no announcement of his future plans, but when he lines up it will be something good, he says. So his friends and customers had better take a notch accordingly.

F. F. Faust, east Georgia man for B. F. Avery & Sons, is spending his Sunday in Macon.

R. C. Jones was in the house Saturday, having just returned from a two weeks' extended trip handling John Silvey & Co. line through Florida and southeast Georgia. He says conditions are gradually improving.

W. B. Carlton, president of the Capital City Tobacco company, will make a trip next week through south Georgia with C. C. Phillips, the Capital City salesman, calling on the trade in that section.

W. E. Park, one of the popular city men for the Capital City Tobacco company, has been confined to his home on Forrest avenue for the past week with illness. He is expected to be out again by next week.

Ed M. Lonsberg, of the Binder Picture Frame Manufacturing company, is in south Georgia on a business trip for his house.

Ed Lonsberg, manager of the Binder Picture Frame Manufacturing company, has been spending a week or ten days in North Carolina. He reports that he had found business on the mend in the Old North State.

F. S. Patterson, manager of the Southern Moline Plow company, is making a trip through North Carolina, and will also visit Florida before his return, getting a line on business conditions.

George Hughes, a representative of the factory, will visit Atlanta soon, and will make the rounds with the salesmen of the Southern Moline Plow company. He will spend some time in this section pushing the Harvester line.

T. S. McCants, assistant to F. S. Patterson, manager of the Southern Moline Plow company, has just returned from a very successful trip through Florida.

W. A. Gossett and W. H. Langston are now devoting their time on soda fountain sales in Georgia for the Liquid Carboni company, and each have sent in some nice orders during the past week.

STEPP IS A FATHER, NOT A STEPFATHER

"Here's a 'step' in the right direction," said W. F. Catling, manager of the local branch of the National Biscuit company, as he handed the Firing Line a tiny little envelope in which was a card announcing the arrival of a 10-pound boy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stepp, at Rome, Ga. Mr. Stepp was for a long while a resident of this city, and is well and popularly known among the Atlanta trade and among the membership of the City Salesmen's association, of which he was a member. He was recently transferred to Rome, where he looks after the interests of the N. B. C. While Mr. Stepp declares it was unintentional, nevertheless it was a coincident, that the youngster arrived on the birthday of Mr. Catling, the Atlanta manager, and the latter has already written the youngster, saying "whenever 'uneeda' thing that I can supply, just whistle." The youngster must have already learned to pucker his little mouth, judging from the nice box of cakes and crackers that went forward a few days ago.

U. C. T. CHARITY BALL POSTPONED SHORT TIME

Will Be Held Some Time in April — Committees All Held Intact Till Then.

U. C. T. council, 18, has decided to postpone its big charity ball until some time in April. Chairman H. D. Shackelford explains the reason in the following interview:

"Owing to the fact that the majority of our general committee on arrangements for the charity ball were not familiar with the customs observed by the different denominations," said Mr. Shackelford, "we had decided to have the ball on the night of February 17. We find that this is a day observed by a great many people, and as we do not wish to conflict with other organizations we have decided to postpone this ball until some time in April.

"The committees have not been dismissed, but have been advised to hold themselves in readiness to answer to roll call some time during the month of March, at which time we will decide definitely just when this ball will be given.

"We wish to thank all of those who have assisted us in the arrangements thus far and trust that we will be able to count on these same people when we again undertake this entertainment."

COMMITTEES TO ARRANGE FOR A JOINT MEETING

In order to better exploit Atlanta-made goods, and to bring about a more co-operative spirit among the jobbers, manufacturers, city salesmen and retail grocers and butchers, the special committees from the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association will meet next Monday night to work out a program for the next joint meeting, which will occur on Thursday, February 25.

The last one of a series of these meetings was held a week ago, at which time the jobbers and manufacturers met with the grocers and butchers and city salesmen, and a splendid program of short talks was enjoyed. The meeting Monday night will be held at the Chamber of Commerce building, and the two committees from the salesmen and the retailers will map out an interesting program, which will be a change from the other night's meeting, and will arrange all other details for the meeting on the last Thursday evening in February. A large attendance at this general meeting is expected.

GROCERS RECOGNIZE THE EXCELLENCE OF UNCLE SAM BREAD

The "Baker's Helper," a trade journal, published in Chicago, in a recent issue, contains the following comment:

"To the average grocer bread is bread. He fails to see how or why one bread is better than another."

The Schlesinger-Meyer Baking company, who make the well-known Uncle Sam bread, say that the aforesaid comment does not apply to Atlanta, and that the local grocers recognize the excellent quality of Uncle Sam bread and that its uniform goodness is a guarantee of satisfaction to their customers.

Past Counsellors' Night

Editor Firing Line: It has been suggested that Fulton council have, on some Saturday night, February 20, what is to be known as Past Counsellors' night or meeting, at which each office will be filled by past councilors of the order.

It is the custom with some councils to have such meeting once each year. They always excite much interest and enthusiasm and, no doubt, Fulton will, on Saturday night, February 20, have such a meeting and have some of council 18 past councilors to fill many of the offices. This will be quite an interesting innovation for the U. C. T. boys of Atlanta, and, too, it will give them something out of the ordinary to look forward to, and by that time all of us will become active in the promotion of the great ball to be given in April at the Auditorium under the auspices of U. C. T. council, No. 18.

Brothers J. L. Moore, W. H. Arnold, R. L. Wallace, W. G. Moore and B. B. Baber were the representatives of Fulton to visit council No. 18 last Saturday night. All had a good time.

Sincerely yours,
W. G. MOORE,
Chairman Press Committee, U. C. T. Council, No. 505.
January 30, 1915.

CITY SALESMEN OPPOSE NEW FRUIT ORDINANCE

The following communication explains itself:

Editor Firing Line: The city salesmen of Atlanta, having their attention called to a resolution that will come before the council, introduced by Councilman Dallas, of the seventh ward, to allow fruits to be sold on Sundays in Atlanta went on record by motion unanimously opposing said Dallas resolution.

They also feel that if this resolution is passed by council it would be a great step backward for Atlanta, and we protest with all of the determination possible against such a step. We do not wish our Sundays to be desecrated by any open stores in this city, and we make an appeal to council and to the public in general to come to our aid and back us in killing said Dallas resolution.

Respectfully,
CITY SALESMEN'S ASSOCIATION.
By H. D. Shackelford, Press Committee.

L. L. Jackson, who holds down central and south Alabama territory for B. F. Avery & Sons, has been sending in some splendid orders recently. Not only his orders indicate, but he writes to Manager Feibleman that he is finding conditions improving very nicely in that section of Alabama. W. N. Lee, who covers north Alabama, also sends in the same cheerful report from his section.

MAY DUMP GARBAGE INTO VACANT LOTS

Crematory Could Be Closed Down—Case May Last Three Years.

There is a probability, and what seems to be a very strong probability at that, of a very long tie-up in the crematory litigation, which may result in the city having to dump its garbage into vacant lots about the city, according to a statement made by the city attorney.

The situation appears to be simply this: The New York Destructor company has brought suit in the United States district court to force the city to pay $135,000 with interest and $60,000 damages, claimed to have been caused by the city in its fight against the company. Judge Newman ruled out that part of the petition for the $50,000, and sent the case for a hearing before Frank E. Callaway, special master in chancery, who is to hear the evidence in the case and report a finding to Judge Newman.

When the hearing was adjourned Saturday at noon, Dr. Rudolph Hering, of New York, had concluded his testimony. He was brought here by the New York company as an expert, and his evidence has been that the crematory plant had come up to the specifications. His testimony Saturday morning was along the same lines that it was on Friday. The hearing will be resumed Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

How Case May Be Prolonged.

When Mr. Callaway makes a report to Judge Newman, the judge can either confirm or reverse the findings. In either event either side has the right to appeal to the district court of appeals. If that court decides either way, either side still has a right to appeal to the United States supreme court.

City Attorney Mayson was asked as to how long would the case be before the courts, if either side carried it as far as possible, and he replied:

"It may take two or three years for a final verdict from the United States supreme court."

Mr. Mayson was then asked what would be the result regarding the disposition of the city's garbage if the case was carried to the highest court and two or three years were consumed in litigation. His reply was:

Can Shut Down at Any Time.

"The destructor company can shut down the crematory just whenever it wishes to do so, since the city has refused to accept it. The city is now paying 25 cents a ton for the burning of garbage, the cost specified in the contract. It is said to be costing more than that and the company is supposed to be trying to make up the difference. If the company shuts down the plant, then there would be nothing left for the city to do except to dump the garbage into such places as could be procured—into vacant lots, I suppose, just as it has done in the past."

That is the situation. It means that if the litigation is prolonged, as seems very probable, the people of Atlanta must submit to the old-time insanitary method of disposing of its garbage until the case reaches a final decision. Dumping grounds, with all of their filth and disease-breeding germs, must be created in or around the city, and this state of affairs may last as long as two or three years.

MEN ARRESTED HERE MUST STAND TRIAL FOR MACON THEFTS

B. F. West and B. G. Martin, who were arrested Friday at the corner of Haynes and Rhoades streets by Chief Beavers when suspected of pawning a supply of new pistols, will be sent to Macon to answer for the robbery Thursday night of the hardware store of Cubbage & Redding.

After a thorough investigation of the pawn stores of Atlanta it was found that the two men had pawned here eight pistols and two shotguns. These articles correspond to those mysteriously missing from the Macon store. A silver percolator, which the firm highly values, has not been recovered, but Detective Black and Garner expect to find it.

WHITE TO SPEAK TODAY ON "THE PRODIGAL SON"

"The Prodigal Son" will be Dr. J. L. White's subject Sunday night at the Tabernacle Baptist church. This concludes the series of "Modern Problems," which has attracted wide attention. A special feature of the Sunday night services will be the singing of old hymns by a chorus of seventy-five voices. The Agogas, a Sunday school class of fifty young men, will sing "The Church in the Wildwood." The subject for the 11 o'clock sermon will be "The Test of Love."

MARKETING COMMITTEE WILL MEET ON MONDAY

The committee appointed January 16 at a market conference held in Atlanta by farmers and business men, at which time an organization was perfected having in view the improvement of marketing conditions as regards farm crops in Georgia, will meet this morning at 10 o'clock in Atlanta at the Chamber of Commerce hall to develop lines of action for the organization.

The members of this committee are J. W. Horton, president; Guy W. Frost, secretary, and John R. Fain, of Athens; Walter G. Cooper, J. Leroy Duncan, C. J. Haden, Dan G. Hughes, H. G. Hastings and W. D. Hunter, of Atlanta; B. W. Hunt, of Eatonton, and R. F. Duckworth, of Union City.

PLAN FAMILY REUNION FOR THE TABERNACLE

The Tabernacle family reunion will be the event of the week at the Tabernacle Baptist church Wednesday night from 7 to 10 o'clock. A buffet luncheon will be served by the Ladies' Aid society and men and women may come direct from business to the church. All who ever have been members, all who ever expect to be members, and all the friends of the Tabernacle are invited. A special program has been prepared, consisting of spicy talks by prominent men and women, music and recitations.

BIG CROWDS ATTEND COLORED CONFERENCE

The Bible conference which has been in session at Wheat Street Baptist church, colored, during the past week, continues to draw large crowds to every session.

Rev. E. W. D. Isaacs, national secretary of the B. Y. P. U., arrived Thursday morning to deliver a series of lectures on "The Social Message of the Gospel."

In addition to the address of Dr. Isaacs, Rev. D. W. Chanton gave an instructive lecture on the gospel of St. Luke. Rev. D. D. Crawford followed with a strong discourse of "The Preacher and His Work." Rev. Brown spoke on "Give As a Part of Christian Duty." Rev. E. F. Johnson addressed the conference Friday morning on "Sacrifice."

There was one session Saturday, beginning at 11 o'clock.

There will be three sessions Sunday beginning at 9:30 a. m., and running through the entire day. The final sessions will take place Tuesday night, at which time a platform meeting will be held, when all of the speakers will have a parting word to say.

BUILD-NOW COMMITTEE TO MEET ON MONDAY

The "build-now" committee, of which V. H. Kriegshaber is chairman, will meet Monday morning, February 1, in the chamber of commerce rooms, at 11:30 o'clock.

The meeting will be held for the purpose of hearing reports from members of the committee as to the progress already made and also to map out a line of work to further the idea of build now.

LECTURE ON SOCIALISM WILL BE GIVEN TODAY

Whether or not socialism is a beautiful dream only to be realized with a change in human nature or whether it is the next practical and essential step to be taken by the masses toward a larger freedom will be the topic of discussion this afternoon at 3 o'clock by C. W. Flanagan, at the socialist headquarters in the McKenzie building, room 315, on the second floor, entrance No. 6 James street.

Mr. Flanagan formerly lived in Florida, but has traveled extensively in South America. He intends to make his future home in Atlanta.

Call Officer Lon Evans, who is considered the speediest motorcycle rider of the police call officers, snapped by The Constitution's staff photographer in the act of hastily mounting his machine at police barracks to rush out in response to a dangerous burglary call.

A few days ago at a meeting of the finance committee of council one of the city fathers jestingly introduced a resolution that the police of Atlanta be armed with rocks, and the money needed for purchasing automatic revolvers and other equipment for them spent in other ways.

So far as Call Officer Lon Evans, of the city motorcycle police, is concerned, this jest of Alderman Maddox, of the fifth ward, might have been carried out in earnest.

Call Officer Evans has served five years on the Atlanta police force in the dangerous position of a call officer, who is nightly called upon to risk his life scores of times.

Rocks would serve Call Officer Evans as well as his 33-caliber revolver, for during his five years as a call officer, Evans has not once fired his revolver at a single burglar, highwayman or other dangerous robber, and he has captured over 100 of them.

The secret of Call Officer Evans' success lies in his skill in handling a motorcycle. He is considered the fastest motorcycle rider in Atlanta. When he receives a call it only requires a short time for him to speed through Atlanta's streets and close in upon a burglar before he has had time to escape.

Besides being a "daredevil" on his machine, Officer Evans is fleet of foot. Oftentimes on foot he has outrun a fleeing burglar he captured him.

"I don't want to shoot any one," he explained to the reporter, "for the burglar might have a little wife and baby at home. I know that men are oftentimes forced to steal groceries and other supplies to feed their families, and I would hate forever having killed such a burglar. I guess I have a pretty good luck in getting the drop on 'em, because I never have had to even shoot at one yet."

Proposed Live Stock Fair Boosted by Men Who Have Made Money Raising Cattle

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce is now making investigations as to methods, cost and prospects of holding big live stock fairs in Atlanta, Columbus and Augusta this spring, along the lines of The Constitution's recent editorials which were suggested by a letter to Captain J. W. English, of Atlanta, from B. Frank Mebane, a cattle man of Spray, N. C.

J. Hall Miller, of the Miller Union stock yards, of Atlanta, has written to Warren T. McCray, president of the Hereford Cattle Association of America, offering the association the use of the Miller stock yards as a place for holding the Atlanta cattle show and sale. Should the association, however, prefer to hold the show and sale in the city instead of at the stock yards, Mr. Miller has offered to secure a suitable place in the city for the purpose. Mr. Miller is one of the leading cattle men of the state, and has taken a keen interest in the proposed show. He is in conference with the Georgia Chamber of Commerce and is assisting it in working out the details.

President Charles J. Haden, of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, stated that it is the purpose of the state chamber to get actively behind the plan as soon as it is assured of its feasibility. The Georgia chamber will ask the co-operation of the Atlanta, Augusta and Columbus chambers of commerce in making such a fair a success.

Would be of Great Benefit.

"We are now making a thorough investigation," said President Haden, "as to the ways and means of holding such a cattle show and sale as has been suggested by The Constitution. Such a show or series of shows would undoubtedly prove of great benefit to the farmers and do much to encourage the cattle industry in Georgia.

"In order that as many farmers as possible might avail themselves of the advantages to be derived from such a fair, it is the idea of the Georgia chamber that it should be held not only in Atlanta, but also in Augusta and Columbus.

"If the chamber of commerce can find that the plan is at all practicable, it is its idea to hold the show at the earliest possible moment."

Cattle Breeders Interested.

President McCray, of the Hereford Cattle Association, and Mr. Mebane are both very much interested in the proposed cattle show and have promised to do all they can in the way of co-operation.

A number of the leading cattle-growers of Atlanta are also already interested in the plan.

Charles H. Black, who, with Dr. Michael Hoke, owns the famous Magnolia farm in Douglas Co., ninety-nine miles from Atlanta, is greatly in hopes that the plan will meet with success. "I believe that such a fair would be of great benefit to the farmers and would do wonders for the encouragement of cattle growing in Georgia," said Mr. Black. "At Magnolia farm we have 2-year-old hogs, rolling in fat, that have never been fed in their fives. Cattle can be raised there without more than two months' feeding in the year. This can be done on other farms in Georgia. So, I see no reason why, if in the middle west where they have to feed their cattle and hogs practically all the year round they make money, there is no money to be made on hogs and cattle in Georgia."

Magnolia farm is a magnificent 8,000-acre tract, adjoining the old Sid Phelan farm, which is now one of the largest cattle ranches in Georgia. The Magnolia farm was formerly the old Cameron plantation.

Mr. Black and Dr. Hoke have built a dwelling on the ridge overlooking the Flint valley and are entering extensively into the cattle and hog industry.

Immense Hog Pasture.

They have just completed a hog pasture five miles in circumference. They are building two more such pastures. With these facilities, says Mr. Black, they expect to raise a thousand head of hogs per year for the market. They are crossing Georgia-raised hogs with the pure-bred Duroc Jersey and the Tamworth strains.

The Magnolia farm is a great natural producer of acorns, nuts and grasses, upon which the hogs are allowed to feed. Outside of this provender very little other food is required the year round.

Mr. Black and Dr. Hoke have fenced in a cattle pasture of about 1,000 acres, and will begin buying cattle in the near future with which to stock this pasture.

They have planted 300 acres in corn and 100 acres in oats, but have planted no cotton at all. They are requiring tenants also to plant some corn and oats.

"There is no question," says Mr. Black, "but that the farmers are getting away from cotton and are diversifying their crops. They are raising more corn, wheat and oats, and are raising some cattle and hogs. It is a good thing. There is, however, one necessity. A market must be found for these products. If a farmer cuts down his cotton and raises other products and then finds he is unable to sell them, he is going back to cotton the next year, and you can't blame him. Therefore, it is imperative that a market be provided for the Georgia diversifying farmer at the earliest possible moment. Once such a market is established there will be no trouble about getting a farmer to diversify his crops."

Good Idea, Thinks Candler.

Another Atlantan, who is interested in the cattle question is Judge John S. Candler.

"I have not entered into the industry very extensively yet," says Judge Candler, "but what I have done I have found to be profitable. I would like to see a cattle show here, because I believe it could teach me many things and would be a great encouragement to the hog and cattle industry in Georgia.

"Insofar as the cattle industry goes, Judge Candler is mostly a dairyman.

Here are the figures on "Alice," one of his herd of fine Jerseys:

From February 11, 1914, when her third calf was born, until the middle of December, by actual bookkeeping, "Alice" has netted Judge Candler $98.11 on her milk and cream. Judge Candler has had offers of $65 for the calf, which he refused. Last week "Alice" presented her owner with another calf.

Five others of Judge Candler's Jerseys have produced as much as 5 pounds of butter each per week.

"I see no reason why money cannot be made in cattle in Georgia," says Judge Candler. "I can get $50 each for all my Jersey bull calves, and anywhere from $65 to $100 each for all my heifers. Moreover, it doesn't cost any more to keep registered stock than to keep the most ordinary sort."

Judge Candler also raises hogs. Here is his experience in the hog industry:

"I started out with three Duroc sows and one Duroc male," says Judge Candler. "From these I sold last year $150 worth of pigs. I killed five pigs when they were nine months and one day old. Their average weight was 351 pounds, and I got 1,755 pounds of pork, which would have cost me at least $175. This gives me a gross income of $470 from the three sows and the one male, and it does not include 280 pounds of lard that I got from the five pigs that I killed. I do not believe that the cost for all four has been over $150 per year. That figure, however, is estimated."

HOLD "OPEN SESSION" FOR GRADY ELECTION

Physicians' Club Pleased by Method of Naming New Members of Staff.

Members of the Physicians' club of Atlanta—members who launched the campaign and succeeded in persuading Grady trustees to add seven more physicians to the medical staff—were elated Saturday when they were informed that "open session" will prevail next Friday when the elections are in order.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, one of the leading members of the board, called on Mayor Woodward Saturday morning. They were in close conference with other members of the board for more than thirty minutes.

Mayor Woodward said afterward that Colonel Lowry called on him to discuss administrative matters concerning Grady hospital.

"We talked about the nurses' dormitory and other things," said the mayor, "and we may have touched on the approaching elections."

Finally Mayor Woodward admitted that the approaching session was discussed, and when he was asked what he had agreed to, he replied that nothing of special importance was decided, except that the trustees will be in open session when the elections are in order.

Although the point was not stressed, it is understood that physicians who have been active in the matter of urging the hospital trustees to give physicians of the city at large equal representation on the medical staff with college physicians, were uneasy over the prospect of the board going into executive session.

They point out that the seven physicians who were selected by a committee of the Physicians' club were picked with care, and have the approval of the entire membership, which numbers nearly 100 of the most prominent physicians of the city, and they say that if the elections are made in open session the club will have a better opportunity of defending its nominees if protest is lodged.

Mayor Woodward has been careful not to take sides in the controversy between the Physicians' club and the medical college doctors, but he has expressed his pleasure over the ability of representatives on each side to adjust their differences, and he has intimated that he will be present at the meeting next Friday night.

STAGE EMPLOYEES WILL GIVE SUNDAY BENEFIT AT BIJOU

A first-class vaudeville and moving picture show will be given at the Bijou theater next Sunday for the benefit of the stage employees in Atlanta now out of a position. The show will last from 2:30 p. m. to 11 p. m., and promises to be one of the best in its line ever given in this city. A collection will be taken at the door. All performers will be professional.

The stage employees are the men who shift the scenes and who are never viewed by the audience. They have given valiant service recently to all the charity performances without asking anything for their services, and owing to the short theatrical season this year these stage men are now out of work and many have families, are facing destitution.

Dan DeDive, manager of the Bijou, has donated the use and a number of vaudeville stars have given their acts for the performance.

JACKSON INTERESTS TENNESSEE SOLONS IN PROBATION BILL

Crawford Jackson, general secretary and founder of the Juvenile Potective association, has just returned from a successful trip in North Carolina, where he formed a strong organization, first in Greensboro and then went on to attend the North Carolina legislature in the interest of a juvenile court and probation bill for that state. He spoke in two of the churches, and also in the house of representatives at a well-attended mass meeting.

The juvenile court and probation bill drawn by Mr. Jackson was introduced simultaneously before his leaving, in the senate by Senator A. B. Ward and in the house by Representative Galatine Roberts. Mr. Jackson interested Governor Loch Craig in the movement and in the bill, which he read entirely, and indorsed heartily. The bill provides that except in extreme cases, and for capital offenses, children 18 years and under be put on probation by the several courts throughout the state adjudicating their cases.

COCOANUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

How Shelley Ivey "Shot" Sam Bennett, of Albany

S. S. BENNETT,
President of the Georgia State Bar association.

Distinguished President of Georgia Bar Association Gets in Range of the Camera in Old Schoolmate's Studio.

This is an "unpremeditated pose" of S. S. Bennett, of Albany, president of the Georgia State Bar association.

A day or two ago Mr. Bennett, one of the ablest as well as one of the most highly esteemed members of the Georgia bar, was in Atlanta and he encountered his old school friend, Shelley Ivey, manager of the College "Co-op," with whom he attended school twenty years ago in the famous old Quitman academy under the tutelage of Prof. Homer Wright, noted throughout Georgia as one of the ablest and most successful of the old line of Georgia teachers.

"Sam was in my place of business making a friendly call," said Mr. Ivey, "and I was so struck with his splendid physical development since the days when, at the Quitman academy, he was a long, slim, sapling-built sort of a fellow, I asked him to step into my studio in order that I might give him a camera snap. He always was a modest sort of a fellow, and it was with the utmost difficulty that I succeeded in getting him under the range of the gun—but I finally managed to get in a good shot, and here is the result."

And Mr. Ivey exhibited the print from which the accompanying cut was made, and the appearance of which in The Constitution will be a surprise to Mr. Bennett. This, however, is the best picture ever taken of the distinguished president of the Georgia Bar association.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

The framework of the new viaduct adjoining The Journal building on Forsyth street and the building recently remodeled by Mr. Oglesbee, on Broad street, and running from Forsyth to Broad, is now up and the construction of the walk will soon begin.

The Chamber of Commerce "Build Now" committee, of which V. H. Kriegshaber is chairman, will meet Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock to hear reports from the members of progress already made and make plans for future work.

An appeal to the police has been made by Benjamin D. Watkins for the protection of vacant houses from the entry of plumbing thieves, and to prevent children from playing in them.

The newly completed map of DeKalb county is now out, and is complete in every detail. Land lots and districts, together with the names of property owners and the routes of power lines, roads and streams are shown.

BUTTS COUNTY SCHOOL HEAD SERIOUSLY ILL

Jackson, Ga., January 30.—(Special.) Friends throughout the state will regret to learn of the serious illness of C. S. Maddox, county school superintendent of Butts county, who is suffering from a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Maddox was stricken Tuesday night, and his condition is regarded as serious.

Mr. Maddox, who is more than seventy years of age, is one of the most prominent educators in the state, and has been connected with the public school system of Butts county for a long number of years. He is a prominent confederate veteran and adjutant of John L. Barnett Camp, U. C. V., and his friends will hope for him a speedy recovery.

Firing Line Notes

GOLD PRESENTATION NUMBER OF THE N. B. G.

The "Gold Presentation" number of The N. B. C., the official organ of the National Biscuit company, has just been received by Manager Catling, of the Atlanta branch. It is a special number gotten out between regular editions, reciting in detail all the incidents of the presentations of the $5 gold pieces during Christmas to the company's more than 17,000 employees. It is handsomely illustrated with scenes of the presentations in all of the leading cities, showing the thousands of employees, many of whom are women, in pretty group pictures. In many instances excerpts of speeches made by the managers are given, as well as a happy little speech by President A. W. Green. The issue is indeed creditable, and in addition to the $5 gold pieces, which amounted to more than $80,000 given to the employees, the company is sending to each of them this special number of The N. B. C.

SALESMEN'S REPORTS VERY ENCOURAGING

One of the system carried out by the Liquid Carbonic company, in order that the executive officers may be apprised of the general business conditions throughout the south, is to require its salesmen to send in quarterly reports, after careful investigation, of the conditions in their respective territory. They give first an outline of the factors as to crops, industries, etc., and then follow with an opinion as to the general business situation. The reports—and there are quite a number of them—were received only recently for the southern section by A. E. McLean, manager of the Atlanta branch, who forwards them on to the main office in Chicago. Mr. McLean reports that the tone of the last reports were very encouraging as to the future outlook for business.

FRUITS AND PRODUCE NOW MUCH IN DEMAND

"I do not believe I have ever known such heavy sales on fruits and produce as we are having just now for this season," said Olin Stamps. "Our business has increased 50 per cent over last year. The crops this year, such as potatoes, cabbage, peas, etc., and the fruit crop is better than usual, and the trade with the country merchant has largely increased on these goods. They are cheaper than usual, and people are eating more of them than ever before. Our business generally is picking up nicely. This pretty weather has got everybody to feeling better; they are more cheerful and buoyant, and are driving away whatever of the blues they might have had. I look for real good business to open up now soon, and, after all, we will round out the year as if nothing had ever happened."

NEW SYRUP OF DIXIE GOING LIKE HOT CAKES

The new product, "Favorite" brand cane and corn syrup, now being put out by the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, seems to have hit a popular chord with the consumers—at least that's what many of the dealers are reporting to the Dixie company, and they are backing it up with orders galore. "Our business for the past week or more," said Manager Hancock, "has shown a decided increase all along the line, but our new syrup has been going like 'hot cakes'—or, rather, going on hot cakes—for we have done a fine business in it. This syrup is one of the prettiest piece of goods we have put out in some time, and we felt that we were going to have a good demand for it, and we have not been one bit disappointed."

TWO BIG OPENING BILLS FOR RAGAN-MALONE CO.

Walter Barnwell, in charge of the notion department of the Ragan-Malone company, put over two big opening orders recently. One was to a north Georgia customer, and the other was for a south Georgia merchant. "I think these good opening orders," said Mr. Barnwell, "together with a continued nice run of business from our salesmen, is a splendid indication that times are on the mend. A few weeks of pretty weather and I believe business will begin to hum again. Things are looking much more encouraging. We are getting in a fine lot of goods for the spring season, rearranging our stocks and preparing to take care of what we believe is going to be a good February trade."

MANY VISITORS DROP IN AT HIRSHBERG CO.

Ike Hirshberg, of the Hirshberg company, was a little puzzled last week, when so many of his southern customers began to drop in to see him. They came singly, in twos and in threes. When he finally learned the occasion it was very simple. The Curtis Publishing company, of Philadelphia, brought to Atlanta last week a big delegation of its southern dealers—the men who handle its line of publications. Practically all of them were stationers and druggists in their respective cities, and many of them were customers of the Hirshberg company, and, being visitors in the city, took occasion to call upon the paper company. Of course, they all met with a hearty welcome from Ike Hirshberg.

FOUNTAIN STENCIL BRUSHES GOING GOOD

J. B. Fitch, manager of the D. D. Felton Brush company, on Edgewood avenue, reports that he is having splendid success with the new Harvey automatic fountain stencil brush, which he began handling several months ago.

The brush is built like a fountain pen, with ink in the handle, and, as he says, is "always Johnnie on the spot." It is so much more convenient, clean and economical than the old style, he says, that it is no trouble to put over sales for it when once its merit is known.

U. C. T., 505, BASEBALL TEAM TO BE FORMED

At the last meeting of Fulton Council No. 505, its baseball team was organized, and plans were adopted to have a good team represent the council among the amateur teams of the city.

Fulton council began playing last year late in the season, and some splendid material was obtained among their members. They intend to present a very creditable team the coming season, having already received some challenges from teams played last year. The management desires to enlist the names of the boys who really want to enjoy the sport and play this season. The team will begin playing during April.

BOYKIN, OF NASHVILLE, VISITS DABNEY CO.

Eugene C. Boykin, manager of the branch house of the Millburn Wagon company, at Nashville, Tenn., was a visitor to the city last week, and spent some time with the W. J. Dabney Implement company, handlers of the Millburn wagon. Mr. Boykin reports that business conditions in his state are improving very fast. "One of the best indications of things getting right again," he said, "is the fact that just the other day we had two nice orders reinstated that were cancelled last August—or rather held up." Mr. Boykin also visited his plantation in this state before returning to Nashville.

CITY HARNESS CONTRACT GOES TO W. J. DABNEY CO.

The W. J. Dabney Implement company has landed the city contract for harness and collars for the city for the coming year, and J. M. Cochran, the secretary of the company, is already making preparations to take excellent care of the city in the way of goods and service. Several of the leading houses in this section were bidders, but the Dabney company's figures caught the purchasing agent, who made the award.

The Dabney company maintains a repair force in its harness department, and keeps quite a number of men busy on this work.

WHOLESALE GROCERS TO COME HERE IN MAY

As usual, Atlanta won out in the vote for the next meeting of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' association meeting. The vote was recently taken by mail among the directors, and practically all of them were in favor of this city. E. L. Adams is a member of the board of directors, and he states that President J. H. McLaurin, of Jacksonville, will be here during the first part of February to arrange all details for the meeting. Something like 500 delegates and visitors will be in attendance. The meeting will be held May 12, 13 and 14.

A NEW PLUG HAT FOR STERLING GUM SELLERS

The Capital City Tobacco company has stirred up no end of enthusiasm among its salesmen by offering a nice, new, shiny plug hat to the man who puts over the most sales for Sterling gum. This is the new gum recently introduced here by the Sterling Gum company, which is handled by the Capital City company, and which has met with popular favor among gum-chewers. The prize is for the best sales for February, and there is much speculation among the boys as to who will go out in the new head-gear about March 1.

J. T. HAMILTON SICK; BE OUT NEXT WEEK

The friends of J. T. Hamilton, the popular traveler for the W. J. Dabney Implement company, will be glad to learn that he has improved sufficiently to be able to get out among his customers and friends this week. Mr. Hamilton has been laid up with an attack of grippe at his Peachtree hotel, and has been "champing his bit" to get out again. His friends have missed him, and will be glad to see him again on the firing line.

They Believe in Signs

If the enterprise of the firm of Smith & Higgins, on Peters street, is to count for anything, then citizens generally will vote the firm a vote of thanks, and strangers no more will have to grope their way blindly around the city trying to find this street or that street.

For a number of years the importance of putting street signs bearing names at corners has been apparent, but so far the city has failed to do this. W. H. Higgins, of the Peters street firm, conceived the happy idea of tacking up a few signs on his own hook. He has had prepared nicely oiled and painted signs, with the names of the streets in large letters, and for the past week or more has been busy having them tacked up. Of course, in quite small letters underneath the main sign, to which there could not possibly be any objection because of the convenience the sign affords, is the name of Smith & Higgins. But so far there has been nothing but compliments accorded the firm for its enterprise in doing that which should have been done long ago by the city.

"We saw the need of the signs, mainly from the complaints of our delivery boys," said Mr. Higgins, "and realizing that it was a needed work which the city has been unable to get to, we undertook to place these signs. We have put out a number of them, and are going to keep it up so long as there is no objection, but on the other hand commendation from the people for doing it."

Freeman a Mascot

To be the mascot for a baseball team at the age of 3 years, with badges and medallions announcing the fact, and yet to know nothing about it for nearly thirty years, is the experience which S. N. Freeman, the popular city salesman for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company, is undergoing these days.

Mr. Freeman is also the new councilman from the tenth ward, and along with his duties trying to help untangle the finance sheet, pave certain streets in his ward, and the other duties incumbent upon him, he is wondering how it all happened. And he wouldn't care much about it, either, if he had been a mascot for the Atlanta team, but to stick him onto the Nashville team has put him investigating.

It all came to him the other day. Charlie Long, a fireman at No. 12 station, on DeKalb avenue, found on last Sunday a prettily engraved coin—a sort of mixture of gold and copper—but a nice coin at that. On it was engraved on one side "By S. N. Freeman, 1885." On the other was "Mascot for the Nashville B. B. Club." Mr. Long thought, and naturally, that the councilman had lost a highly prized medal. Quick as he could, he returned it to him. But the councilman knows nothing about it. He was only three years old in 1885, and while the medal bears his initials and name, he is at a loss to know its origin and owner. He is going to carry it as a lucky pocket piece until the real owner shows up.

200 Conversions Reported.

Including outside groups, there have been upwards of 200 conversions in connection with the revival services which began at the First Congregational church (colored) last Sunday, under the leadership of the pastor, Dr. H. H. Proctor, assisted by Rev. G. Lake Imes, dean of the Tuskegee Bible school. The sermons of Dean Imes have created widespread interest and comment among the colored people. His meetings will come to a climax today. At 11 o'clock he will give a special sermon to women and girls only, and at 8 o'clock tonight he will give the concluding address of the series to men and boys only.

TWO LAWYERS ENGAGE IN LIVELY FIST FIGHT

By-standers at the county courthouse enjoyed a literary treat Saturday when two lawyers, Watt Kelly and R. A. Preston, engaged in a lively fist fight on the steps of the courthouse.

The flistic argument was the culmination of an argument that had preceded in the courtroom over a point at law in a lawsuit. When the two lawyers clinched on the courthouse steps, after passing a few heated words and blows, both rolled down the courthouse steps.

Police Captain A. L. Poole and Sergeant George Bullard quickly separated the fighters and Preston came with a copy of charges to appear in police court.

LEADING EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN COUNTRY'S FINANCIAL CIRCLES

PASSING OF STEEL COMMON DIVIDEND

This Caused Great Weakness in Wall Street the Past Week, Aided by Increased Foreign Selling.

New York, January 30.—(Special.)—The collapse of Steel common, following the passing of the dividend, aided by the largest amount of foreign selling which had been seen since the exchange reopened, brought about great weakness in stocks, and even a little weakness in high-grade bonds, during the past week. It was unfortunate for the bull interests that heavy foreign selling had to come at such a time, and many small bull accounts were completely wiped out by the combination of circumstances. Bear pressure was in evidence, to a small extent, during the declines, but most of it was of a kind easily satisfied with small profits through covering, and so the main impetus on the downward path was actual liquidation both from here and abroad. The careful labor of the bull interests of weeks was wiped out in one or two sessions, but no one could explain that there had not been sufficient warning against too quick advances. Big interests have opposed all attempts on the part of the larger speculators to start a big bull pool, and, while many small pools were allowed to flourish, warning against inflation had been cried in stock market circles ever since the exchange reopened. It was pointed out, for instance, that a decisive defeat for the allies, either on land or seas, might be followed by great weakness in stocks here, or that so much foreign held securities might be dumped here that the market could not bear up under them, and that the early rapid advances were invitations to foreigners to sell here. It is probable that the higher prices seen in the second and third weeks of January attracted a large amount of foreign stock here at this inopportune time. It has been absorbed during the week, but only through the fact that large funds were in the hands of prominent bankers to take care of foreign offerings. With the weakness imposed by the big break in Steel common, the market would not have been able to have kept out of almost panic conditions if it had not been for the concentrated funds which could be used for purchases of foreign offerings. Not only has there been so much sent here from the other side of the Atlantic, but a lot more is known to be on the way. Furthermore, with foreign money markets getting more and more tied up with war loans and home needs, the absolute flood of foreign selling, predicted months ago, may be on hand. Although a very large total of foreign holdings of stocks and bonds have been sold here in recent weeks, spread out rather thin though until quite lately, there are still hundreds of millions of our securities held on the other side. Within the last few days, predictions have been made that if the war lasts another year, all American securities will be returned to this country by the end of it. Money is still easy in London, but it is believed that it will gradually tighten, and with higher rates there, further selling of securities may follow.

Street Market Starts Again.

One of the strange features of the week, and it shows just how dangerous a position the stock market is in, was the springing up again of an "outlaw" market on the streets. When Steel struck the minimum of 48 and thousands of shares were offered at that price without bids, almost by magic a number of men gathered on the streets and traded in Steel down to about 43. That was the figure set for the new minimum by the stock exchange at just about the time in the day when it had reached that low outside. The retention of minimum price levels, however, has been a source of steadiness to the market during the wild selling flurries of the last few days, serving to head off liquidation when prices were near minimums. General sentiment has not been particularly affected by the recent weakness, the general feeling being that depressing factors are of a tempting character, and that purchases at present price levels will yield big profits in the long run. Speculation received a rather hard knock, but investment buying went on right through the worst weakness which was witnessed.

As a result of foreign selling, sterling exchange advanced, the sales of stock serving to offset much of the recent gains of this country in trade balances abroad. It is now the opinion of foreign exchange authorities that exchange rates will be kept up above the gold importation point for months, as a result of liquidation of American securities. Furthermore, sellers of securities abroad are in a position to get quicker payments than are some of the sellers of commodities and manufactures which are being sent out of this country. Eventually, however, foreign exchange experts look for very low rates, and a flow of gold to this country.

Money has continued easy, with the banks finding more funds coming to them than they know what to do with. New York is the mecca of all the country's idle money, apparently, and surplus reserve figures have advanced steadily to a point approaching $150,000,000. Call loans have been negotiated at 2 per cent and under, while time loans have been near the low point of the last year. Loans for carrying foreign sales of stock, or rather for purchasing them, have been about the only features of interest in the money market recently.

Passing of Steel Dividend.

The United States Steel corporation report for the fourth quarter of 1914 showed the smallest quarterly net on record, with only $10,933,170 available for fixed charges and dividends. This was barely sufficient to pay all prior charges to preferred dividends, much of which had to come out of surplus, and the passing of the common dividend saved a further large drain on surplus. The outlook for dividends on Steel common is better, now that the steel industry is experiencing good conditions, but it is expected in stock market circles that the dividend will not be restored before the third quarter of the year, and possibly not until 1916. The total net in 1914 was $71,661,149, which is over $65,500,000 smaller than the net for 1913. There was a deficit of $16,965,687 for 1914, most of which was due to payments on common dividends, although if nothing had been given on that class of stock there would have been a small deficit after paying on the preferred. The year before there was a surplus after common dividends of $30,582,184. One feature of the comment on the Steel corporation's action was that there have been no cuts in wages to steel workers, while shareholders have suffered. It is pointed out that until recent years it was the policy of corporations to cut wages if dividend payments could be made thereby.

The Pennsylvania railroad sold $49,000,000 consolidated first mortgage 4½ per cent bonds to bankers during the week, a totally unexpected action, as it had been understood that the road would use its new mortgage for its next financing. This issue is from the oldest mortgage the road has, one authorized in 1873, and this issue completes the $100,000,000 total of the mortgage. The proceeds of the fund will be used to meet obligations which will mature soon.

Directors of over 100 corporations have met during the last two weeks and only a small number of reductions or passed dividends have resulted, while there have been several increases. The dividend policy of many corporations has been quite liberal in view of poor earnings and various uncertainties which exist.

In February about $60,000,000 in bond and note issues will mature, but practically all have been provided for. February dividend and interest disbursements will be $108,000,000, as compared with about $5,000,000 less for the second month of 1914. This increase is all in interest payments, there being a number of new bond issues since last year. Dividend payments will be about $10,000,000 less than in February, 1914, much of the loss being from Steel common.

Several small bond and note offerings have been made during the past week, and all have been well received by investors. It is believed that within a short time the market will be glutted with new offerings, as a very large number are planned for the next six months, but just now nearly anything which has good backing is well received.

The reorganization of the M. Rumely company may follow the first step of the note holders' committee. This committee has restored the original maturity date of the two-year notes to March 1 next.

Improvement in the South.

Movements of freight in all parts of the country, and most especially in the south, have increased materially in volume in the last month, as compared with any similar period for a long time. This points out better than anything else that general industrial and business conditions have improved. The south has climbed out of its depression, while the parts of the west which had not hitherto been heavy freight shippers are plainly in much better shape. The grain country, of course, has been in good condition right along, and it is apparently getting in better all the time, as high prices of cereals are bringing out larger shipments from the farms.

The shipping bill now before congress is attracting the interest of financial and business heads throughout the country. Practically all leading opinion favors the establishment of an American mercantile marine, but there is a sharp difference of opinion as to whether it should be owned by the government or by private capital. The people seeking to extend South American trade, however, are anxious to have ships and have them soon, and are not greatly concerned in many cases as to how they get them. The high freight rates for shipping to Europe have diverted most of the boats ordinarily going to South America into transatlantic traffic, and a very large amount of business with South America has been thereby lost.

The unemployment situation is still serious, and in centers like New York little headway seems to have been made owing to the continued arrival of fresh cohorts of work hunters from all sections. Reliable estimates which have been made indicate that there are still about as many people seeking work here as there were at the high-water mark of December, although positions for thousands have been found in the meantime and other thousands have been taken back in various places. With the approach of the spring, however, a big reduction in the ranks of the army of the unemployed is looked for. Among the thousands out of work are many garment workers, and already there has been an increase in activity at places where all sorts of clothing and garments are made.

The Metal Markets.

The copper metal market took another upward slant during the past week when sales were made at 14½ cents a pound. Consumers did not flock into the market to buy as it is said that supplies are large enough so that they can wait, but copper sellers predict even further advances, although the rate of operations at many mines and smelters has been increased during the last few weeks. Export demand has been smaller, but with the approach of spring army campaigns in Europe, an increase in demand for those countries which can get it is expected by copper men here, as it is known that the manufacture of a tremendous amount of war munitions in which copper is used is under way in England and France at least.

Operations have been resumed at a number of steel plants and mills which had been idle for weeks, while the rate of operations at many others has increased during the past week as a result of a big increase in buying of many kinds of steel during the past eight weeks. For several days, this rush of new business has slackened, but a resumption of heavy buying is expected. However, even with increases, the rate of operations of steel mills as a whole is not above 50 per cent of full capacity now.

Wheat and Cotton.

Wheat went into new high ground for recent generations again this week when both May and July options advanced heavily on export and speculative buying, and while there were recessions on profit-taking, bears did not have any courage left to concentrate attack on the strong position of the market. Farm offerings increased, but without stopping advances in several sessions. Corn and oats also went into new high price regions, with export buying of each a feature of trading. Recent estimates of Europe's needs for wheat, corn and oats are far in excess of anything that this country, Argentina and other exporting countries can furnish, and even if the Russian surplus is released, it is the belief of grain market authorities that this country will be swept clean of supplies save those absolutely necessary for seeding, unless the movement to place an embargo on wheat exports succeeds.

Cotton continued in an uncertain market position as a result of the sharp break at the end of last week. The ginning report to January 16, showing 14,907,942 bales ginned to that date, a new record, was the principal cause of uncertainty as it is now certain that earlier estimates of the total supply will again have to be revised upward. There is, however, a strong feeling here that within a few weeks, another large upward movement in cotton prices will be seen. The general idea of cotton market members is that domestic and export demand for cotton will increase greatly in the near future.

DRY GOODS LESS ACTIVE, BUT ADVANCED SOME

New York, January 30.—Cotton goods markets are less active than they were a week ago, but the firmness in prices has become marked and some advances have been announced. One of the leading lines of southern cotton flannels has been advanced ⅛-cent a yard; another ¼-cent a yard from the opening prices of last week. Discounts are to be shortened on substandard printed goods Monday about 2½ per cent. Leading lines of bleached cottons have been sold very well to the jobbing and cutting trades and are held firmer at advances. Wide sheetings are in steady demand.

The business done on print cloths and convertibles this week was not as large as a week ago, when Fall River sold 350,000 pieces, but contracts are still held at ⅛-cent a yard higher than spots are bringing and there are goods enough under order for some time to keep prices steady. More business has been done in general domestics and on drills and sheetings than for some months past and January business in other directions has shown a distinct gain. Wash fabrics are beginning to move more freely for spring and the new fall lines are being ordered satisfactorily. Export trade is slowly gaining.

Prices are quoted as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 7⅛ cent; 64x60s, 2¾ cents; 28½-inch, 64x60s, 3⅞ cents; brown sheetings, southern standard, 6¼@6½ cents; denims, 9-ounce, 12½ cents; tickings, 8-ounce, 11½ cents; standard prints, 4¾ cents; standard staple ginghams, 6¼ cents; dress ginghams, 9¼ cents.

Wide sheetings were advanced today. Cotton goods were generally firm; yarns higher. Linens and burlaps were firm. Underwear and hosiery were in better demand.

Sugar.

New York, January 30.—Sugar futures opened firm at 2 to 6 points advance. Prices held firm on renewed trade demand and some speculative buying. Closed firm at 3 to 6 points advance, with sales 4,850 tons. February, 3.26; May, 3.48; June, 3.53; July, 3.59; September, 3.69.

Spot strong; no sales; centrifugal, 4.20; molasses, 3.43. Refined steady.

MISSOURI PACIFIC AND KAHN'S FIGHT

What Led Up to the Battle to Oust George Gould From the Road's Management.

New York, January 30.—(Special.)—One of the strangest battles ever fought in Wall street is now being waged in Missouri Pacific. George J. Gould, the leader of one side, is using the time-honored tactics of the financial district which were taught him by his shrewd and successful father. Opposed to the head of the Gould family is the ablest man in Wall street, Otto H. Kahn. Gould, according to the best information available, under the cover of stock market manipulation, is anxiously buying back the Missouri Pacific shares sold a year ago in the same fashion. Kahn, whose methods are those of the new generation in Wall street, carefully planned his campaign months ago and now, to the utter bewilderment of his opponent, is calmly and confidently doing nothing.

Before going into the Missouri Pacific fight in detail, it might be of interest to point out that Gould was born in this city February 6, 1864. Soon after leaving school he succeeded his father as a partner in the banking house of W. E. Connor & Co. He subsequently became a member of the stock exchange. That was when he was 22 years of age. Two years later he was elected president of the Little Rock and Ft. Smith railroad, president of the Texas and Pacific, and president of the Manhattan Elevated. In 1893, the year of his father's death, he was elected president of the Missouri Pacific. He was the recognized head of the Gould family.

Gould Bad Manager.

Taking complete charge when he was only 29, since 1893 Gould has lost control of one after another of the gilt-edged properties which were left in the Gould estate until only the Missouri Pacific remains. Wall street believes that while the Goulds have less money than they had ten years ago, the estate is worth more than $80,934,581, the amount fixed at the time of Jay Gould's death. That, however, is not the point under discussion.

Otto H. Kahn, who was born in Mannheim, Germany, February 21, 1867, came to this country without friends in August of 1893, when he was just 26, or at the time George J. Gould was 29 and taking up the active management of his father's enormons estate. Kahn came from a family of bankers, and after finishing his education at home spent five years in the London branch of the Deutsche bank. After spending a couple of years with the New York house of Speyer & Co., he returned to Europe, spending another two years traveling. When he returned to this country, he immediately became a member of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Kahn's methods are as different from those of Gould as night is different from day. Inheriting his father's secretiveness, Gould has never had a confidant. Kahn had only been with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. a few months when he established a lifelong friendship with E. H. Harriman, and then with A. J. Cassatt. Few men in Wall street today, young or old, have more real friends than Kahn. It was through his friends that the banker built up the position he now holds in Missouri Pacific.

Kahn and Harriman.

It was Kahn who was responsible for Harriman's going into Union Pacific. Working with Harriman to straighten out that company's affairs, Kahn also established lasting banking relations with Pennsylvania. During a pause he picked up with Georgia Gould. Missouri Pacific had never been able to establish permanent banking connections. Kahn offered the services of his firm. His offer was readily accepted, and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. sold to its clients here and abroad a large block of Missouri Pacific bonds. Shortly afterwards ended abruptly.

That was in 1905. Three years ago, acting in the interests of clients who were still holders of Missouri Pacific bonds, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., on the promise of Gould's retirement, again agreed to become Missouri Pacific's bankers. When the annual election was held in March of that year, however, the list of directors elected did not agree with the list which had previously been agreed upon and given out by Gould himself. Thereupon the Kuhn, Loeb & Co. representatives again promptly retired from Missouri Pacific's management.

Nothing happened in Misouri Pacific then until a year ago, when the $25,000,000 short-term notes were about to fall due. After shopping about unsuccessfully for banking assistance, Missouri Pacific invited Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to take charge of the company's finances. In a letter declining the invitation, Kahn pointed out that some $70,000,000 was needed, in addition to the $25,000,000 for the notes.

At the very last moment the notes were extended for one year. Shortly before those arrangements were completed, however, it was learned by Kahn that the Goulds had sold their Missouri Pacific to the public.

Plan to Succeed Gould.

That was when Kahn got busy with his friends. Figuring a year ahead, he planned for a shareholders' proxy committee to elect directors to succeed the Goulds. The list announced by Kahn last week, and planned nearly a year ago, includes Alexander J. Hemphill, chairman of the Guaranty Trust company; James N. Wallace, president of the Central Trust company; Seward Prosser, president of the Bankers' Trust company; Robert Winsor, of Kidder, Peabody & Co., and Otto H. Kahn, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

These men, all of whom are Kahn's personal friends, represent banking institutions that could jointly finance a nation at war. When asked this week if he had bought any of the 450,000 shares of Missouri Pacific that have changed hands during the past two weeks from 6½ up to 15¼, Kahn looked your correspondent square in the eye and replied:

"Not a single share of it. Nor have I advised any one else to buy it. The proxy committee just announced simply proposes to stand behind Missouri Pacific financially, if a majority of the shareholders express a desire for such action."

Kahn's word is worth a hundred cents on the dollar to those who know him. That is one reason why he stays friends with so many people.

If Wall street's belief that Gould is buying back his Missouri Pacific stock is correct, what does he hope to do with it? As long as he is in control of the property neither Kahn nor any of his banking associates will act as the company's bankers. If the hardheaded bankers above named turn Missouri Pacific down next spring when its notes fall due and other money must be raised, where will the company get its funds? That is what Wall street is asking.

Looks Like Last Chance.

Some people will doubtless say that Missouri Pacific is a victim of the money trust. Before such conclusions are accepted, however, it might be well to look into Missouri Pacific's past banking experiences. No railroad system in the country has received as much or as many kinds of help from as many different bankers as Missouri Pacific. The trouble has been that, unlike Atchison, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Northwestern, Illinois Central, Louisville and a score or more of other successful and well-managed railroads, Missouri Pacific has never been able to make friends and keep them. It looks now like the company has about had its last chance under the present management. As large owners of Missouri Pacific bonds and notes, the Goulds cannot afford to play fast and loose with the banking support which Kahn has offered.

STOCKS STRONGER EARLY IN SESSION

But Realizing Sales Caused Some Leaders to Decline. New Haven Recovered Some of Loss.

New York, January 30.—Stocks were moderately strong today, after opening with some irregularity. Recoveries of one to two points from yesterday's low level were general, although this improvement was shaded in the final dealings, when some leaders, notably Reading, receded on realizing sales.

The short interest again was prominent, mainly, however, in the covering of outstanding contracts. There were some counter movements in the special division, a few of the low-priced issues going back, while Sears-Roebuck rose substantially in the expectation of an increased dividend.

New Haven, which sold at its minimum of 49 yesterday, was one of today's most active features, recovering much of its loss. United States Steel was all but neglected, after a belated opening at its minimum price, from which it showed no change. Following the close of the market, official notice of another reduction in the minimum to 38 was issued. The preferred stock gained a fraction and the sinking fund bonds also reflected support. Trade reports were more encouraging.

The $49,000,000 of Pennsylvania railroad 4½ per cent first mortgage bonds, recently taken by a banking syndicate, were offered today at 103¾, with indications of a large inquiry. More financial undertakings of like character were said to be under way.

Local banks showed an actual cash gain in their own vaults of about $5,000,000, while contracting their reserves in the federal bank by about $4,750,000. The loan account expanded by $21,000,000.

Bonds were irregular, some issues reflecting foreign selling. Total sales amounted to $1,063,000. United States and Panama bonds advanced ¼ to ¾ per cent on call during the week.

New York, January 30.—Cotton lost an early advance during the day, but steadied on covering and closed at a net gain of from 2 to 7 points.

Liverpool not only failed to follow yesterday's local weakness, but closed at an advance on some positions and the market here opened staeyd at a 4 to 9-point advance. Private cables attributed the strength abroad to continental buying and the absence of southern hedge selling, and trade interests were moderate buyers here during the early session. After the early spurt of covering, the market turned easier, under a renewal of Wall street selling, an easier turn in the New Orleans market and selling by houses with New Orleans connections. Active months broke to a net loss of 2 or 3 points under this pressure, but trade buying continued and prices rallied several points from the lowest price before the close.

Sales of print cloths in Fall River fell short of expectations, being estimated at only 100,000 pieces, but the figures on production showed diminishing curtailment, and advices otherwise from the goods trade were considered encouraging.

Manchester cables report fair buying orders from China and an occasional demand from India, but say that business in cloths has been restricted by the higher price views of manufacturers.

Spot cotton quiet; middling uplands, 845; sales, none.

Slight Advance in New Orleans.

New Orleans, January 30.—Small declines and advances featured the cotton market today. Scalpers took to the short side, as usual of late, but the market displayed resistance of its own to selling pressure. In the early trading, short selling was sufficient in volume to put prices 2 to 3 points under yesterday's close, in the face of very favorable cables, but later when the shorts bought back their cotton they put the market up on themselves and brought about a net advance of 4 to 6 points. The close was 1 to 4 points up.

The small mill takings shown for the week caused much bearish comment, but, as they seemed to be due more to corrections in statistics than anything else, their influence was not lasting. The export movement remained the dominating influence and surprise was shown by traders generally when the statistics available pointed to clearances for the month of 1,260,000 bales, against 1,064,000 a year ago. Clearances this month were the largest of any month this season, and for the first time this season the month's exports were in excess of the exports of the corresponding month of last year.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON MARKET

New York, January 30.—(Special.)—Liverpool was decidedly better than due; the cablegrams state there were few offerings from the south. Here, the market opened 5 points higher, declined some 9 points under local selling in a very small market, closing at some 3 to 6 points better. The local feeling is pessimistic, in face of the slowly improving trade conditions throughout the country, on the idea that the south will sell so freely on any advance that no sustained improvement can be maintained. They feel that the action of the stock market, over the reduction of the dividend on Steel, is an indication of the pessimistic view of the public as to values of all commodities. We think they are looking back at 1914 and not forward to 1915, with its prospect of increasing consumption of cotton in place of wool; of the necessity of raising food crops in the south and in the fact that the 10,000,000 bales sold so far by the south must have been sold at a loss.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, January 30.—(Special.)—The market today has been without feature, business being very limitd in volume and consequently prices moved within a narrow range. However, there was no selling pressure in evidence, despite the dullness, and as a result, prices improved toward the close on moderate buying. While the market has been called upon to absorb considerable liquidation this week, it has been able to do so without seriously affecting values and the steadiness displayed suggests that cotton is in constant demand, notwithstanding the advance that has occurred in prices in recent weeks.

JAY, BOND & CO.

Galveston Cotton Exports.

Galveston, Texas, January 30.—January cotton exports through Galveston were 549,885 bales, it was announced today, and wheat exports 3,072,028 bushels.

Coffee.

New York, January 30.—There was some further scattering liquidation or trade selling in coffee today and after opening at a decline of 1 to 2 points prices eased off another point or two in the absence of any important support, with close unchanged to 5 points lower, near months being relatively easy. Sales 19,750.

Spot quiet. Rio No. 7, 8¼; Santos No. 4, 10 cents.

Milreis prices in Brazil were unchanged, although there was further decline of 1-32d in the rate of Rio exchange on London. Brazilian port receipts 46,000; Jundiahy 33,000.

Highest Premium for Futures for Any Day This Year—Corn and Oats Also Recorded Big Advances.

Chicago, January 30.—Threatened enlargement of the war zone caused the greatest upward whirl yet in wheat, the May option going to a new high record, $1.52. Excited buying lifted the market 4 cents a bushel above yesterday's level, at which many nervous traders were selling on vague peace rumors. The close was strong at 2½ to 3½ above last night. Other net gains were—corn, 1⅛ to 1⅝@1¾; oats, ½ to 1; provisions, 2½ to 10.

Foreigners bought 600,000 bushels of cash wheat in Chicago today and from the moment that trading began were purchasing future deliveries. Wheat for spot cash commanded the highest premium this year over futures. Big cash export interests were bidding 1¼ above the May price. Prospects of a heavy decrease in the United States' visible supply total on Monday, as well as war clouds, helped discourage bears.

Corn climbed with wheat. Besides, there was a noticeable widening of the seaboard demand for corn, whereas receipts here fell off.

Oats joined in the advance and were helped upward by big export sales. May oats touched a new high figure, 60½.

Although offerings of provisions were liberal early, and the market accordingly weak, the strength of grain acted as more than an offset later. Packers, however, continued to sell on the upturn.

MILK BEING PROVIDED FOR BELGIAN SUFFERERS

New York, January 30.—The shortage of milk in Belgium has been overcome for the time being, the commission for Belgian relief announced tonight. From its own purchases and through donations it has sent forward, has in hand, or on order for early shipment, 83,491 cases, or 3,996,165 cans of condensed, unsweetened and powdered milk. It has also been able to establish and maintain a number of dairies in Belgium. The provisions shortage for the Belgian destitute now relates more especially to older children and adults, the commission states.

Reviewing the work accomplished, the commission reports having delivered at Rotterdam 53,381 tons of food by eleven ships up to January 1; that the Kansas state relief ship Hannah and the New England relief ship Haralyce, carrying 16,320 tons of food, are now unloading at Rotterdam; that the commission has six ships in transit to Rotterdam carrying 37,010 tons of food; that it has six ships either loading or ready to load 41,840 tons of food in United States ports; that it has ten steamers in transit to American ports for the purpose of loading 62,410 tons of food, and that the commission has under charter nine steamers which will call at United States ports within one to six weeks to load 61,170 tons of cargo, which is now being gathered for them.

It was announced that the people of New England were preparing to load a second relief ship and that the commission had assigned for this purpose the steamer Laconia, which will be ready for loading late in February.

Norfolk, Va., January 30.—The British steamer Uganda sailed from this port today with 6,100 tons of flour, meal, beans and other food supplies for the Belgian war sufferers. The ship will stop at Falmouth for inspection by the British government.

A large quantity of supplies was left behind, but will be loaded on another ship that will come to this port shortly.

The assets of the twelve operators total more than $36,000,000, according to court records, and their liabilities about $12,000,000.

One of those for whom receivers were appointed is J. V. Thompson, with assets of $21,000,000 and liabilities of $7,000,000. Others whose assets reach more than $1,000,000 are I. W. Creatore's Band to Render Music Loved World Over

Proceeds of the concerts to be given in the Auditorium next Thursday afternoon and evening by the famous Creatore and his equally famous band, will be turned into the fund of the Atlanta Music Festival association, to be used in furthering the Sunday afternoon free concerts and organ recitals at the Auditorium each week.

The coming of Creatore will mark one of the most interesting events in music circles in Atlanta this season. As a bandmaster, Creatore is generally acknowledged to be among the best in the world. There are some who insist he is the best. No matter how opinions may differ in this direction, it is unanimously agreed that the Creatore personality cannot be duplicated. There is only one Creatore.

Temperamentally, he is a marvel. All his readings are original to a marked degree, and the way he conjures effects by personal magnetism, stamps him as a genius. There is no withstanding the magic of his personality, and one can only look and wonder at the remarkable grasp he has over his men. His programs are always interesting and varied. He never uses a music score, and is credited with having memorized more scores of the highest class music ever produced than any other musician who ever lived. Frequently his concert programs contain sixteen different selections and two and often three times as many encores. Yet he never refers to the score.

Creatore is unique among bandmasters. He seems to be the spirit of the music rendered. Unconsciously, he acts it. So well does he have his men in hand that they seem almost in a trance. He electrifies both his musicians and his audience. Usually his advent in Atlanta is a signal for an ovation. Next week's visit is looked forward to with unusual interest generally on the part of music lovers.

HARD TIMES DRIVES BOY TO THE POLICE STATION

Francis Sanford, alias O'Connor, 18 years old, gave himself up to Assistant Chief Jett at the station house Saturday evening, and asked to be sent back to the National Training school at Washington, from which he claims to have escaped last July. When taken under arrest Francis stated that he had been driven to this act because of hard times and the scarcity of work.

"I was sent to the detention school some months ago," he said. "After growing tired of the routine life there, I dug a hole under the wall and escaped July 8, 1914. I have now grown tired of riding the rails and sleeping, when possible, in police stations. A good bed at the school would be very acceptable tonight and I wish I were back."

MRS. JOHN BRATTAN HELD ON SHOPLIFTING CHARGE

Mrs. John Brattan, who gives her address as 46 Houston street, is being held at the police station on the charge of stealing valuable articles from several prominent department stores of the city. Mrs. Brattan was caught in the act of taking an expensive fur wrap from a counter, according to the police. When searched, later, by store employes, many other small articles of value were found on her person, they say. Proprietors of several stores state that Mrs. Brattan has been under suspicion for several weeks, but that no effort was made to apprehend her until the evidence was conclusive.

Mrs. Brattan will not talk and has refused, so far, to give her correct residence.

MAN AND WIFE HURT WHEN MOTORCYCLE AND BUGGY COLLIDE

N. D. Andrews, of 48 Magnolia street, is confined at the Grady hospital, suffering from painful bruises received from a fall when his buggy and a speeding motorcycle crashed near the junction of Lee and Avon streets late Saturday evening. Mrs. Andrews, who was accompanying her husband, was also considerably shocked. The rider of the machine went on his way without coming to the help of the injured man, it is said.

"The motorcycle was close upon us," said Mrs. Andrews, "and I cannot tell just how the accident happened. When it hit the buggy my husband fell while attempting to control the frightened horse. The man on the machine, whoever he may have been, received a fall in the accident, but must not have been seriously injured, for he immediately got up and went down the street."

YOUNGEST JUSTICE OF PEACE IN STATE

Dublin, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Dublin has just elected probably the youngest justice of peace in the state in W. H. Brunson, Esq., who today made a runaway race to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Chapman, by a plurality of 266 out of 547 votes.

He is 22 years old and has been a member of the bar here for about three months. He is a prominent society man and is exceedingly popular with citizens of this city.

THOMASVILLE MAY BUILD ABATTOIR

Thomasville, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—In his annual report to the Thomasville city council this week Dr. B. A. Daniels, president of the city board of health, recommended very earnestly the establishment of a municipal abattoir for Thomasville. He showed that the cost of establishing such a plant would not be a large one and that according to the assurance of the state inspector it would pay a dividend of from 12 to 15 per cent. There is a general sentiment in favor of this movement and it is probable that it will be taken up by council at an early date.

TAYLOR IS GRANTED ANOTHER NEW TRIAL

Charged With Assault on Macon Station Gatekeeper. The Third Trial.

Macon, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—In the superior court here this afternoon Judge H. A. Mathews granted a new trial to W. H. Taylor, a resident of Columbus, charged with assault with intent to murder C. E. Moffatt, gatekeeper at the Central of Georgia depot, two years ago.

The Taylor case has been a noteworthy one in the local courts, his next trial being his third.

At the first trial Taylor was convicted of shooting at another and sentenced to serve four years. His attorney, John R. Cooper, reversed the case in the supreme court and at the second trial Taylor was again found guilty of shooting at another, but though the jury recommended that he be punished as for a misdemeanor, Judge Mathews sentenced him to serve two years in the penitentiary.

Later every member of the jury signed a petition declaring they would not have found Taylor guilty had they known Judge Mathews would not follow their recommendation.

Attorney Cooper argued the motion for a new trial today and it was at once granted by Judge Mathews. It was shown to the court that he had failed to charge the jury that in a case where an attempt is being made to arrest a citizen illegally the citizen has a right to use force proportionate with that being used against him, and if in the exercise of such right he kills an officer who is attempting to arrest him, he is guilty of no offense.

When the case was before the supreme court before the court ruled on this particular point.

Another ground on which the new trial was granted was that the court had erred in not permitting Taylor's counsel to go into the character of Taylor's victim on cross-examination. The solicitor general conceded this was error.

Taylor's defense has been that he was resisting illegal arrest and was acting in self-defense.

Canada last year imported 10,795,682 dozen eggs from the United States.

INDEPENDENT PARTY FOR GERMAN-AMERICANS

Announce They Will Oppose Any Candidate Who Does Not Share Their Views.

Washington, January 30.—Citizens from nearly every section of the country, some representing German-American societies, churches of different denominations or other organizations, and others acting individually, held a conference here tonight and resolved to form a national organization to "re-establish genuine American neutrality and to uphold it free from commercial, financial and political subservience to foreign powers."

Representative Bartholdt, of Missouri, who presided, was chosen head of the organization committee, and Horace L. Brand, of Chicago, was elected secretary. Speakers included Dr. C. J. Hexamer, president of the German-American National alliance; the Rev. Thomas C. Hall, of the Union Theological seminary, New York; Dr. Kurt H. Richter, of the German Historical society; Professor William R. Shepherd, of Columbia university; Professor James T. Hatfield, of Chicago; Professor A. B. Faust, of Cornell; the Rev. G. C. Berkmeyer, of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of North America; Joseph Frey, president of the German Roman Catholic Central union; Dr. Edmund von Mach, of Harvard, and Representatives Porter and Barchfeldt, of Pennsylvania, and Lobeck, of Nebraska.

Resolutions adopted by the conference declared in favor of:

An American cable controlled by the United States government, to assure possession of an independent news service; demanding a free and open sea for American commerce and unrestricted traffic in non-contraband goods; immediate enactment of legislation (as a strictly American policy); prohibiting export of munitions of war; establishment of an American merchant marine.

The concluding section of the resolutions said:

"We pledge ourselves individually and collectively to support only such candidates for public office, irrespective of party, who will place American interests above those of any other country, and who will aid in eliminating all undue foreign influence from American life."

WILSON'S VETO KILLS IMMIGRATION MEASURE

Poll Shows Enough Votes Can't Be Mustered in House to Override President.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, January 30.—(Special.) President Wilson's veto of the immigration bill will, in all probability, be sustained by the house. This is indicated by polls of the membership just completed by the leaders. The attitude of 99 per cent of the members toward the principles of the bill, with its literacy test as standard of admission for aliens, has been pretty well established by previous votes.

Practically every member of the Georgia delegation is for the literacy test restriction and will vote to override the veto.

Some members of the house have undergone a change of heart on this matter, but taking the record of each representative as it is shown by various record votes, the house would stand thus on the measure:

For the bill	217
Against the bill	189
Doubtful	9

The nine are classed as doubtful because they have never gone on record on this bill, but it is believed that four are against the bill and five in favor of it.

This would make the totals for the bill, 283; against the bill, 142.

In no case would there be a two-thirds majority, as required to pass the bill over the president's veto.

These calculations do not take into account the certainty that the president's veto message will have more force for the opposition and few less for the proponents. Friends of the bill say there will be no changes unfavorable to their cause, but it is known that they cannot hold their lines intact. The attempt will be made to override the veto next Thursday and inasmuch as there will have been a week's notice both sides each side should muster its full strength.

CLARK WANTS TO BREAK MONOPOLY ON LABOR

Speaker Says the Few Are Rich While the Many Lack Food and Clothing.

Chicago, January 30.—Champ Clark, speaking here tonight, expressed a hope that the statecraft, humanitarianism and religion of the twentieth century would be employed to devise a scheme whereby every person would enjoy the fruits of his own labor, and monopoly of the toil of thousands be prevented. Mr. Clark's address was at a banquet of the Chicago Dental society.

"In 113 years our total wealth multiplied 125-fold and is now rated at the enormous sum of $140,000,000,000," he declared. "This, if equally distributed, would give $1,312 to every man, woman and child between the two oceans. But there is the rub, for while a few are piled beyond the dreams of avarice, many have not the wherewithal to feed and clothe themselves.

"The signs of the times indicate, however, that the hope of better conditions is not too fantastic for entertainment. The new era began when N. O. Nelson, of St. Louis, originated the plan of sharing profits with his employees. Other great concerns are establishing pension funds for their employees which put to blush the liberal pension system of the federal government for the soldiers of our various wars.

"Blessed be the name, I say, of the man who, without regard to politics or religion, establishes abiding peace between labor and capital, who should be friends and not enemies."

$100,000 Gift to Orchestra.

Chicago, January 30.—Gift of $100,000 by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge to the Chicago symphony orchestra was announced tonight. The money is to be used to pension members of the orchestra. Mrs. Coolidge is a daughter of the late A. A. Sprague.

Jack and Bob say:

The man who pays more than $35 for a suit can't get more than $35 wear out of it if he believes in style changes.

The man who pays less than $35 for a suit should go to the ready-made sort and take his chance on quality.

The man who pays $35 for a suit here can expect to get more for his money than he ever got—both in style and quality.

Grocery Department of J. M. High Co. Will Celebrate Its First Birthday

Wonderful Success of Atlanta's Finest Pure Food Store.

The first birthday of the grocery department of the J. M. High company will be celebrated on Monday, February 1, with such fitting honors as become one of the most quickly successful business enterprises ever inaugurated in Atlanta. The celebration of the anniversary, to mark the first year's wonderful and remarkable career, will continue through the month of February for the purpose of giving the thousands of patrons a full opportunity to take part and enjoy some of the entertainments in the way of demonstrations that will be given.

The J. M. High company's department store was organized some thirty-five years ago, but it was only until a year ago that the management decided to try something that no other department store had ever undertaken in Atlanta—the establishment of a pure food department in connection with dry goods, shoes and notions for the purpose of placing before the people of the city an opportunity of buying everything needed for housekeeping purposes under one roof, therefore saving time in shopping and adding convenience for the charging of household accounts. The enterprise long passed its experimental stage before the first year was out. The success was phenomenal. A determination to give the people the best that the markets of the world afforded and the very lowest prices, together with a system of quick service, rapid delivery and honest advertising, built up a business way beyond all expectations.

Birthday to Be Celebrated.

So it has been decided to celebrate the first birthday of this remarkably successful department of one of the best known and most popular department stores in the south.

There is going to be a mammoth birthday cake on exhibition. It will be several feet wide. Go to see it.

During the celebration there will be demonstrations in several booths, showing how to prepare certain articles of food, and when you have been shown you will be fed, for the taste is often mightier than the sight. There are to be home-made biscuits, pure Georgia cane syrup, butter, coffee, Tetley's teas and other things that are dear to the hearts of the housewives. The demonstrations will be a pure food exhibit upon which the company will expend about $1,000. This will last a day or a week, but will continue throughout February.

Did a Great Business.

It is always the proper program on a birthday to say some good things about the party who is being honored. In the first place, the announcement can be made that the High grocery department did a business during the first year of its career amounting to nearly $500,000. How is that for success? It is today running nine wagons and five autos in order to insure quick delivery. Not only are the citizens of Atlanta getting first-class groceries in record-breaking time, but the suburbs are also being taken care of by this quick delivery. The nearby suburban towns are a part of Atlanta so far as the High grocery department is concerned.

To further assist customers in making orders, the company has installed several trunk lines for the telephone service, so that there is no waiting and worrying about the line being "busy." It's "just call High's, get the number at once, order what you want and get it in a few minutes."

Not satisfied with a rapidly growing trade which the stock and service had already insured, the company did not stop, but went on improving the class of goods handled and cutting prices as low as possible. This policy "gave the people the best of it" and helped to solve the great problem with which all are confronted today—the "problem of the high cost of living." As an evidence of this, just note some of the remarkable special sales that have been put on during the year: One thousand seven hundred watermelons were sold at 10 cents each; fresh eggs have been offered at 10 cents a dozen; Armour hams, that are often cheap at 18 and 20 cents, went for 15 cents a pound; and all kinds of crackers and canned goods have been put on special sale at prices that amazed even the most persistent bargain hunters in the city.

Delicatessen Department.

Then there is the delicatessen department, where the best meats of the market are cooked by the company and sold at the most reasonable prices. Here baked ham, pork and beef, frankfurters, sausage and cheeses can be had just as fresh and just as well cooked as the most fastidious housewife could demand. It is a common thing for twenty-five cheeses to be out in one day.

Talking about pleased and satisfied housewives, there is one thing in connection with High's grocery department that is a joy to every woman who has to supply a table in Atlanta, and that is the market where can be daily found the freshest of vegetables and fruits. On Saturdays the sales from this department alone amounts to a big sum.

The High special brand is "Home-Aid." It means a lot when you once get to trading there. The goods are selected with a view to aid the homes and the greatest care is always taken to get only the very best. Such things as turkeys, dressed chickens, eggs, canned goods, meats, vegetables and fruits can be relied upon absolutely at all times to be perfectly fresh. Every egg is "candled" before it is placed on sale.

While giving the people a full opportunity to patronize home industry by carrying a full line of the every brand of home-made goods, the High company also carries what is best in the way of imported goods.

Home-Made Goods.

How is this for Georgia-made, that High is selling everybody: Block's cakes and crackers, the White Provision company's "Cornfield" brand of bacon and ham, Tip-Top bread, Wilder's pure Georgia cane syrup, the Atlanta Refining company's "Cotton Bloom," Stone's cakes, the Atlanta Coffee company's goods, and, in fact, all the best things to eat and drink that are made in Atlanta or Georgia.

Right here it might be mentioned that the High company is the sole selling agent for the famous "White Crest Flour," which is made from the very kernel of the finest of wheat berries.

Some of the Good Things.

The whole of one issue of The Constitution could hardly hold all that might be said about the line of groceries carried by the High company, but some of the best things must not be overlooked when a birthday is being celebrated.

There are the goods of the Armour and Swift companies, jams, preserves, beans, corn and lima beans canned by Austin Nichols, Campbell's soups and beans, Cross & Blackwell's jams, marmalades and pickles, "Delmonte's" asparagus tips and canned fruits, the "Big Tree" dessert fruits, French mushrooms and peas, W. N. Clarke's pickled peas, peaches and apricots, Appalachian orchard tomatoes, Austin Nichol's sunbeam olives, stuffed and plain; Massa's horse radish, Curtis Bros.' blue label catsup, uniform syrup, one-minute gelatin and tapioca, blue tuna fish, Bosman's peanut butter, "Home-Aid" coffee, "Home-aid" flour, "Home-Aid" butter, fruits of all kinds brought fresh from Florida, Tetley's teas, and New Orleans Coffee company's "Morita" and Morning Glory coffees, and so on.

Well, what's the use of trying to say it all—just put it down that High's Pure Food store is the best in the world affords for the inner man and then you will have this great store down in full.

Just a word about the department where can be found the bakery goods. Not only are all the best goods made on the city, state and country carried, but most complete lines of the celebrated Loose-Wiles cakes and crackers, including the "Sunshine" Biscuits and such imported goods as Huntly & Palmer's London cakes are always on hand.

As an indication of the big business that is being done it has but to be mentioned that the every brand of lard is in stock, the daily sales often of one brand alone will run 150 cases a day. The sale of soaps often run 135 cases a day.

A Word as to Prices.

Speaking of prices, the company has sold the finest hams that are made for 10½ cents a pound, while in big cities like Cincinnati, St. Louis and Memphis the same hams were selling for 17½ to 22½ cents a pound.

Now add to all this birthday story the fact that customers are carried thirty days and you will have a still better conception of what the High company's grocery department is doing for the people live well and not too costly.

In all the letters received by the company in answer to its prize contests the writers invariably refer to the company's quick service in the store.

The company never buys any "job lots" of goods. It gets the best by carload lots.

And last, after all, when you have bought without having wasted time waiting for a clerk, when you have had your goods delivered quickly and you don't like what you have purchased, just send it back to the store. "You don't have to pay for what you don't like" is one motto of the company. Send it back and nobody's feelings will be hurt.

So drop around to the store Monday and take part in the Birthday Party. You will be perfectly welcome and feast on the offerings made at the different demonstrating booths.

OFFER FOR THE MINES WITHDRAWN BY MINERS

Fort Smith, Ark., January 30.—Announcement was made tonight that the offers made by representatives of the United Mine Workers of America for the purchase of the holdings of the Bache-Denman Coal company in the Hartford Valley of Arkansas had been withdrawn. Inability to reach an agreement relative to the reconstruction of surface plants destroyed during the labor riots of last April and the fact that litigation contesting the leases on several of the properties still is pending, were responsible for the withdrawal of the offer, it is stated.

The purchase of the Bache-Denman properties by the mine workers' organization was proposed as a solution of labor troubles which resulted in the sending of federal troops into the Hartford valley field.

An order affecting the receiver to dispose of the holdings of the company at public sale was issued in federal court here several days ago.

"Mr. Lu Cheng-Hsiang, China's ablest diplomat, has been appointed by President Yuan Shi Kai minister for foreign affairs, vice Sun Pao-Chi, who goes to the head of the audit department."

Waycross, Ga., January 30.—(Special.) Dan King and Will Sapp, young white men of the Manor district, are in jail here on charges of robbing the general merchandise store of the Manor Trading company. The store was robbed during December.

Much valuable jewelry was among the stuff taken, and it was through this that the thieves were located and arrested. No date for a preliminary hearing has been fixed. This is the second burglary at Manor that has been followed by early arrests, three years having elapsed between the two. Several weeks ago in connection with another robbery at Manor.

BODY OF MISSING AUGUSTA MAN FOUND

Augusta, Ga., January 30.—(Special.) The body of Patrick V. Edwards, a cotton mill operative, who disappeared on Christmas eve last, was found yesterday in the canal here, badly decomposed. Edwards' wife reported his disappearance to the police on Christmas day, asking that the water be drawn from the canal and search made for his body, but this was not done. The last seen he had a small amount of money in a purse, but the latter, when found on the body, was empty.

PINK COTTON WORM MENACE TO THE SOUTH

Washington, January 30.—Restrictive measures will be necessary to prevent the introduction of the pink cotton boll worm into the southern states, according to the department of agriculture. The measure would limit importations of lint cotton to northern states only; would regulate the movement of such cotton from northern to southern states and restrict importations of Hawaiian cotton to certain parts of the north.

The restrictions were proposed at a hearing May 29, but further action was deferred pending the completion of tests in burning and disinfecting foreign lint cotton in southern mills. Such methods, it now is stated, cannot be relied upon to prevent the introduction of the pest.

Officials believe the proposed restrictions will not work a serious hardship to southern manufacturers. They say the pink boll worm would prove fully as disastrous as the boll weevil.

OLEO "MOONSHINERS" GET HEAVY SENTENCES

St. Louis, January 30.—Twenty-seven persons were sentenced in federal court here today for imprisonment or heavy fines for violation of the law imposing a tax on colored oleomargarine. Eighty were convicted by juries and nineteen pleaded guilty.

Most of the men were fined $5,000 each. One was fined $10,000. All but one were given prison terms, ranging from thirty days to three and one-half years, the heaviest penalty being imposed on Lester H. Kennedy, who, the presiding judge said, had been the ring leader of the conspiracy.

In passing sentences Federal Judge Pollock said:

"It has been shown that a band of oleomargarine moonshiners, some 100 persons, operating in St. Louis, had money into a fund for protection and carried on an organized effort to violate the law. Any man is a fool who thinks he can evade this law when the revenue officers are diligent."

WORLD STEPS FORWARD, SAYS SECRETARY BRYAN

Rulers Denying Responsibility for War a Good Sign, He Asserts.

Raleigh, N. C., January 30.—The world has taken a long step forward when all of the rulers at war deny responsibility for existing hostilities, declared Secretary of State Bryan, addressing a joint session of the North Carolina state legislature here this afternoon. He took it from the floor of the house of representatives. The chamber was crowded to capacity. Four thousand persons heard the secretary speak before the meeting of the North Carolina conference for social service this morning.

Secretary Bryan, in discussing world peace, declared the so-called "Bryan peace treaties" were a sure cure for the war. He said he did not propose that the present situation in Europe with the statements that preparedness was the best remedy for the prevention of war.

The address of today was similar to that delivered by Secretary Bryan before the Pennsylvania legislature several years ago in which he advocated that today the secretary advocated woman suffrage, which this year has become a national issue, the initiative and the initiative, referendum and recall. These, he declared, were fundamental principles of democracy. He advocated them all in his address. Woman suffrage, he declared, was sure to come.

The golden rule as a guide for both national and international dealings between men was advocated by Mr. Bryan. Man must have a clear conception of his duty to his fellow-men, he declared, before he can perform any work to the best advantage.

Secretary Bryan touched upon the liquor question briefly. He declared that the greatest problem which the country was of more importance than all of the natural resources we have.

Declaring with the child labor question, he declared no individual or community has a right to deny a child the chance to get an education. He declared that persons who denied children this right should be made subject to drastic punishment.

Wrecked Schooner Found.

Norfolk, Va., January 30.—The three-masted schooner, Frank E. Swain, was picked up today near Bodie Island, by the revenue cutter Seminole. The schooner, which was partly dismantled in a recent gale, was floating bottom up when the Seminole found her. The Swain was built in 1909, and hails from Boston.
